Lappin Back, Set to Face Wire Tap Committee

Brewster's Alleged 'Shadow' to Deny Role, Wife Says May Testify Monday

Abner "Chick" Lappin, the man who supposedly shadowed Senator Brewster (R., Me.), was back in Washington yesterday ready to deny it all.

Returning from a trip to Mexico City, Lappin stayed in the city only a few hours before leaving on a quick trip to New York.

But, according to his wife, he will be back probably today, ready and willing to testify before the Senate District Committee's wire tapping subcommittee headed by Senator Pepper (D., Fla.).

"He told me after he got back that he never shadowed anyone," Mrs. Lappin said last night. "He said he would have to clear up that story."

Brewster's version has been that someone—and he identified a photo of Lappin as the someone—was shadowing him during the 1947 investigation of millionaire plane maker Howard Hughes by a subcommittee of the Senate War Investigating Committee headed by Brewster.

The Senator has said he paid $100 or so for the expenses of Police Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon in getting rid of the shadow. Shimon, in turn, testified he did some wire tapping at the time of the Senate investigation but that it was in an effort to find out about Lappin, not to find out about Hughes.

Hughes, then head of Trans World Airline, was a bitter opponent of Brewster, who backed Pan American Airways in a battle over overseas routes.

A number of other witnesses, however, have testified that Shimon told them the wire tapping was for a Senate committee.

Not Told About Lappin

Det. Sgt. George H. Robison, jr., on Friday told the subcommittee he worked on the Hughes wire tapping job at the Mayflower Hotel but was never told about Lappin. He also said he never was shown Lappin's photo and never was ordered by Shimon to listen for a man who talked as though he had "a mouthful of mush."

Lappin has some teeth missing and does not speak distinctly.

It was learned elsewhere that at the time of the District grand jury inquiry into wire tapping, Lappin denied shadowing of Brewster. Now apparently he will tell the same story publicly.

The Pepper committee planned to put Shimon on the stand at a public hearing at 10 a. m. Monday but Lappin's return and willingness to testify may alter plans.

Committee Counsel Gerhard P. van Arkel said yesterday that if Lappin is available on Monday he will recommend the committee call him ahead of Shimon. The Lappin hearing, however, would be in executive session, in accordance with the committee's practice.

Hedy Lamarr Reports $250,000 In Jewels Missing

New York, Aug. 26 (NYHT).—The police, it was learned today, are searching for jewelry valued at $250,000 which is believed to have been stolen Thursday from a room in the Sherry-Netherland Hotel, occupied by Hedy Lamarr, motion picture actress.

Among the pieces of jewelry which are missing are a diamond necklace, a ring set with a diamond of 11½ carats, a three-strand pearl necklace and a single strand pearl necklace with a diamond clip.

She told the police that the last time she had seen her jewelry was at her home in Southampton, but the fact that she had carried her jewel case to New York and found it empty on her return from the theater convinced her that it was from her hotel room that it had disappeared.

Reds' Roles as U. S. Aides Face Pressman Revelations Monday

By Bert Andrews

Copyright, 1950, N. Y. Herald-Tribune, Inc.

The whole grave question of Communist infiltration of the Federal Government will be reopened on a vast scale on Monday as the result of startling testimony scheduled to be given by Lee Pressman, former chief counsel of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Unless the 44-year-old Pressman has a change of mind before 10:30 o'clock Monday morning, when he is slated to face the House Committee on Un-American Activities, here is what will happen:

He will testify that because of depression-era worries he joined a Communist cell in Washington in 1934, while working under Henry A. Wallace, then Secretary of Agriculture, but ended his participation in the group when he left Government service late in 1935.

He will say that he has no knowledge concerning the political beliefs or affiliations of Alger Hiss, former State Department official, who stands convicted of perjury on charges growing out of his denials that he was active in any such cell.

He will specifically say that for the period of his participation in the group, Mr. Hiss was not a member of it.

He will do his best to avoid "putting the finger" on others who have been named as members of the group by witnesses who appeared before the Un-American Activities Committee in late summer and fall of 1948.

He will fight tooth and nail to uphold his contention that be-

House Votes 11.6 Billions For Defense

Rep. Rich Casts Lone 'No' Ballot; 24.9 Billion Total Now Approved

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

By the long margin of 311 to 1, the House of Representatives yesterday passed the 16.7 billion dollar supplemental appropriations bill carrying 11.6 billion for new military muscle.

The measure now goes to the Senate, which has yet to pass the 36.1-billion-dollar omnibus bill approved by the House Friday.

Lone dissenter in yesterday's House vote, which came at the end of a 6½-hour extraordinary Saturday session, was Representatvie Robert F. Rich (R., Pa.).

An inveterate foe of big spending with his constant query: "Where are you going to get the money?" Rich sought yesterday to cut from the bill a four-billion-dollar item for additional military aid to Atlantic Pact nations. He was voted down after loud heckling from the Democratic side of the House had roused him to term his tormentors "snipers, snoopers, sneerers and slurrers."

More Funds Needed

With the 11.6 billion dollars in yesterday's bill and 13.3 billion in the omnibus measure, the House now has voted 24.9 billion for the armed services and related activities. Even that sum is expected to fall short.

While the House still was considering the omnibus bill Friday, Chairman George H. Mahon (D., Tex.) of the House Appropriations subcommittee on the Defense Department, said the armed services would need another 10 billion dollars within a few months.

One change in the bill, made on the floor on motion of Representative Francis Case (R., N. Dak.), added $300,000 for purchase of automobiles by amputee veterans of World War II. Case pointed out that funds for the purpose were exhausted.

Veterans' Administration.

Other changes were minor and did not affect the amounts appropriated for the military establishment. One of these shifted $3,450,000 in the Navy section from "ordnance for new construction" to "construction of ships." Mahon, who asked for the change, explained it was intended to provide for "certain emergency construction."

In the total of $11,642,906,000 carried in the bill for the Defense Department, $3,063,547,000 was for the Army; $3,684,007,000 for the Navy, and $4,535,400,000 for the Air Force.

The Navy's total included $1,596,969,000 for 2377 new aircraft and 185 million for new ships and ordnance for them. In the Air Force total, $2,672,570,000 was for 2956 new aircraft.

Rich declared he was "trying to knock out $30 for every man, woman and child in America," and said "we are wasting our substance."

"We are giving things to these foreigners," he shouted, "when we ought to be giving things to our own people."

An amendment by Representative Percy Priest (D., Tenn.) to add $20,000 to establish a National Science Foundation was rejected, 83 to 57. It was argued that to establish such a foundation now would add to the demand for office space, already critical in Washington.

Operating Plan Outlined

Army Sets Up Skeleton Staff To Take Over Railroads Today

By The Associated Press

The Army set up a skeleton organization of fewer than 50 men yesterday to take over the Nation's major railroads today and see that their normal operations go on without a break.

Karl R. Bendetsen, assistant secretary, announced that all necessary steps have been taken to carry out President Truman's order that the Army seize the railroads at 5 p. m. today to avert a threatened strike.

Bendetsen announced these steps to carry out the seizure:

1. Maj. Gen. Frank A. Heileman, a veteran engineer officer who is the Army's Chief of Transportation, has been appointed director of operations. Brig. Gen. Andrew F. McIntyre of Philadelphia, a Reserve officer on leave from the Pennsylvania, will be General Heileman's executive.

2. Seven regional officers with staffs of five officers each, and three subregional offices, with staffs of two each, will be open for business this morning in key cities over the United States. The regional offices will be in charge of railway presidents, who are also Reserve officers and are being called to active duty. The subregional directors will be officers already on duty with the Transportation Corps.

3. The Army has sent both telegrams and registered letters to the presidents of 195 major railroads, advising them of the impending seizure and directing them to post notices of it at major stations.

4. Bendetsen said that he had been in touch with officials of the railroads and of the railway brotherhoods involved in the current dispute, the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors. He said both assured him "of continued operation of the railroads."

New Buildings Ease Schools' Overcrowding

223,500 Enrollments Expected in Area, 10,500 More Than '49

Greater Washington children will start "creeping like snails, unwillingly" back to school next month.

Approximately 223,500 are getting ready for new or more school days this fall, as compared with about 213,000 last year.

New construction is beginning to catch up with the war babies, and although there is still some overcrowding in prospect, it will not be so great as in the past five years.

In Washington latest estimate is that 96,571 public school students will be enrolled during the first six weeks after school starts on September 11 at 9 a. m. Last year, 94,437 students were enrolled during a similar period.

School officials expect 48,610 pupils in the white schools this year, compared to 48,696 last year. In the Negro schools, an enrollment of 47,961 is anticipated, compared to 45,741 last year.

The parochial schools had a 30,000 enrollment last year in both elementary and high schools and expect approximately the same number this year. The parochial schools in the Washington archdiocese will open on September 7. Registration will be set by each school principal at some time during the preceding week.

Washington public school registration for new pupils will be held from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Sept. 1, 6 and 7. New first graders must have reached the age of 6 on or before Jan. 15 of next year, while new kindergarten recruits must have reached the age of 5 by that date.

Here are the estimated initial enrollments for the metropolitan area, as compared with 1949-50:

Alexandria, Va.	8,000	7,800
Fairfax, Va.	13,000	13,268
Arlington, Va.	16,000	14,200
Prince Georges, Md.	31,500	28,500
Montgomery, Md.	28,000	24,000
Falls Church, Va.	875	1,000

Canadian Rail Peace Talks Fail; Up to Parliament

Ottawa, Aug. 26 (AP).—The Canadian railways announced tonight breakdown of renewed negotiations with their striking union employes, undertaken at the request of Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent in an effort to settle the crippling rail shutdown.

In a statement issued as labor and management representatives were to meet for their fourth joint session since last night, the railways checked the solution back to Parliament.

The statement by the Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Pacific Railway said the operators now believe that "the representatives of the people should act together in discharging their responsibilities."

Love Blooms Fast in Crete

Beauty Threatens to End Life If Torn From Her Abductor

Heraklion, Crete, Aug. 26 (U.P.).—A raven-haired beauty whose kidnaping came close to touching a modern Trojan war, revealed tearfully today that she has fallen in love with her abductor and wants to remain by his side.

Nineteen-year-old Tassoula Petrarogeorgi told a "peace committee" that visited the mountain cavern in which she is held that she will destroy herself if she is forced to return to her father.

The beautiful virgin also sobbed that Costas Kefaloughianis, her handsome kidnaper, who used to boast that his mustaches were the finest in Crete, has threatened to commit suicide if she leaves him.

As troops worked their way up the rugged slopes of Mount Ida, fabled birthplace of the Greek God Zeus, to find her, the "war's" first casualty occurred. The troops opened fire by mistake on some shepherds they thought were Tassoula's guards. One man was wounded.

The 1000 gendarmes rushed to Heraklion yesterday under Gen. George Samoulil to prevent the outbreak of hostilities also began to disarm the several hundred gentlemen-at-arms who were deployed about the mountain side.

The armed men were the followers of Tassoula's father, George Petrakogeorgi, who is determined to avenge the stain on the family's honor, and the kin and friends of Costas, who kidnaped the girl outside a Heraklion movie house Sunday. Seventy people from Costas' village of Anoghia were taken into custody.

Members of the "peace delegation" reported that Costas was nowhere in sight when they visited Tassoula's cave. But they said he had provided her with a comfortable mattress of pine boughs and lighted the cave with torches at night.

Red Drive Pushes 2 Miles; U. N. Forces Abandon Kigye; Walker Flies to Battlefront

HUGE RED CROSS MARKS FINAL RESTING PLACE OF BENEVOLENCE

Yanks Smash Foe's Attempt To Ferry Men Across Naktong

Tokyo (Sunday), Aug. 27. (AP).—North Korean Reds captured Kigye Saturday night in a strong thrust and forced South Koreans to withdraw two miles or more on the northeast end of the battlefront.

But another Red penetration 13 miles northeast of Taegu has been wiped out. And near Changnyong, 23 miles southwest of that supply base, American artillery broke up an attempt to get 16 boatloads of Communists across the Naktong River.

These overnight developments were disclosed in a dispatch today by Associated Press Correspondent Don Huth. He said the reverses on the northeast end of the 120-mile battle perimeter caused Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the Eighth Army, and Lieut. Gen. Earle Partridge, commander of the Fifth Air Force, to fly to Pohang to check the situation.

The new Communist blows were struck after the Reds had shifted forces eastward following their costly defeat in trying for seven days to capture Taegu in a frontal attack on the United States Twenty-seventh Regiment.

Red Forces Wiped Out

Huth said the South Koreans who yielded Kigye fell back a few miles south and east to a road junction. The South Korean Capital Division is fighting in that sector. Kigye is 9 miles northwest of Pohang.

On the east coast, defended by the South Korean First Division, the Reds advanced 2½ miles to a point a half mile south of Hunghae. That town is 8 miles north of Pohang.

(This advance indicated the Reds had wrested Hunghae from the South Koreans, although Huth's dispatch did not say if the Communists had occupied the town.)

Near Tabu, 13 miles northeast of Taegu, remnants of a Red infiltrating force which once totaled 1000 or more was wiped out, Huth reported.

This force had slipped between the South Korean First and Sixth Divisions last week and briefly cut the supply line behind the United States Twenty-seventh Regiment.

Quiet Sector Erupts

Huth reported a brief night action in a sector which has been comparatively quiet. Near Changnyong, where the battle-hardened United States Twenty-fourth Division is defending, American artillery broke up a move by the Reds to slip 16 boatloads of soldiers across the Naktong River. That is the sector where the North Korean Fourth Divsiion was cut up.

House Votes Slash, 141 to 73

D. C.'s $290,000 'Model Plan' For Defense Cut to $30,000

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The House voted yesterday to let the District have a paper civil defense plan but nothing more.

By a standing vote of 141 to 73, the House reversed its action of Friday and decided to allow only $30,000 to protect the city from possible enemy action.

On Friday, in a tentative 99-to-75 vote, the House had overturned the recommendation of its Appropriations Committee for the smaller amount and agreed to grant the $290,000 asked by the District. Either amount would come out of taxes paid by Washingtonians, not from the Federal Treasury.

Yesterday's action means a drive will now begin to get the Senate to restore the full amount. The District Commissioners already have decided to ask that.

The vote, unfortunately for the District, came at 6 p. m. on a Saturday when members were anxious to get away from the Capitol. When Representative Gordon Canfield (R., N. J.) suggested a roll call vote, there was

Sec. Matthews Rebuked for War Speech

White House Joins State Department In Repudiating Talk

NYHT News Service

Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews was sharply rebuked and repudiated yesterday by both the White House and the State Department for a "preventive war" speech he delivered Friday night in Boston.

Matthews' words, which provoked the gravest and most public Cabinet policy split since President Truman fired Henry A. Wallace in 1946, were these:

"We should boldly proclaim our undeniable objective to be a world at peace. To have peace we should be willing, and declare our intention, to pay any price, even the price of instituting a war to compel cooperation for peace."

The speech shocked the State Department so much that Press Officer Rober Tubby received explicit orders from topside to "be categoric and make it clear" that Secretary Matthews' words did not Think Before You Drink—Or Pull a Firebox

The motto of the Metropolitan Police Department could well be "we aim to please."

At 3 p. m. yesterday a fire box was pulled at 12th and S sts. nw. First to reach the scene was Police Pvt. J. F. Pergal who found a man hanging on to the firebox.

The man, later identified as Charles E. Ault, 46, a paperhanger from Staunton, Va., handed the policeman a trinket which bore the inscription, "Think before you drink."

"Why did you pull the alarm?" asked Pergal.

"I want to get locked up," was the answer.

He was. He will be arraigned in Municipal Court Monday on charges of pulling a false alarm and being drunk.

18 Known Dead In Sinking of Hospital Ship

17 Men and Nurse Are Listed Officially; Others May Be Lost

San Francisco, Aug. 26 (AP).—Seventeen men and a pretty Navy nurse were known dead today—victims of the collision that sank the hospital ship, Benevolence.

Some others may have been lost. The known survivors numbered 487.

The big mercy ship was rammed and slashed by a freighter in a blinding fog late yesterday, just outside San Francisco's Golden Gate. She overturned within 15 minutes and settled in 75 feet of water.

The freighter was the Mary Luckenbach, outbound for the East Coast. She was not badly damaged and none of her crew was injured. The Benevolence was coming in from a shake-down cruise.

Capt. Barton E. Bacon, 49, skipper of the hospital ship, was on the bridge with Capt. Lyle J. Havens, harbor pilot.

Captain Bacon said Havens shouted "I hear a whistle!"

The flash went to the engine room "Full stop. Full right rudder."

"Then the ship appeared," Captain Bacon related. "While we were making the turn it hit us."

Captain Havens was one of the dead brought ashore that night.

Those who did not die saved themselves, or were saved, in a multitude of manners. One boy told of playing a grim game of "ring around the rosy" in the cold water with the fog dripping around them, waiting for rescue.

"We formed a circle with our hands to stay afloat," he said. "The ring got bigger and bigger. When one guy got a cramp or started to go down, we hauled him over our arms and held him."

The Benevolence and the Mary Luckenbach each carried radar equipment. One of the survivors was a young electrician's mate—reporters didn't get his name—who said as he was warming up on coffee "I don't know what happened. We had five ships on

80 Millions in Aid To Tito Approved By West Powers

Belgrade, Aug. 26 (U.P.). — The Western Powers have approved in principle new credits to Marshal Tito's Yugoslavia totaling 80 million dollars, it was learned tonight.

Informed sources here said the Allied High Commission in Germany has given the West German government at Bonn a go ahead to grant Yugoslavia a long-term credit equivalent to 30 million dollars and a short term credit of 35 million dollars.

The United States Export-Import Bank, in addition, has approved 'in principle" a loan of 15 million dollars to Tito.

These credits and loans are the American answer to the increasing cominform pressure on Yugoslavia.

Rogers Takes Lead In Runoff in Texas

Dallas, Aug. 26 (AP). — Walter Rogers of Pampa led, 700 votes to 434, over Mrs. Altavene Clark of Amarillo tonight in returns from 28 counties in the 18th congressional district runoff primary.

Scattered returns from the State's 16th Congressional District race gave Representative Ken Regan, the incumbent, 4621 votes to 4072 for District Judge Paul Moss of Odessa.

The winner of the Rogers-Clark race in November will run against Ben Guill of Pampa, a Republican, who won the seat in a special election last spring.

Defense Agencies Will Employ Thousands Under Arms Aid

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Thousands of additional employes will be hired by the defense agencies to carry out the proposed new four-billion-dollar Military Assistance Program.

The increase could easily top 50,000 and probably will. MAP officials explained to members of Congress that it was impossible at this time to say whether 50,000 or 100,000 new production workers in the Army's arsenals and Navy's shipyards would be needed. But it was clear they are thinking in very large numbers.

The big increase in the defense agencies will be on top of the estimated 257,000 new employes the Army, Navy, and Air Force will be hiring during the next several months.

These three agencies had 27,891 production employes on MAP activities earlier this year, when it was only a billion-dollar project. It had been planned to expand operations under a somewhat larger program to 34,511 civilians in defense production facilities as follows: Army, 29,979; Navy, 3721, and Air Force, 811.

And then the four-billion-dollar program was dropped on MAP'S lap.

Officials are only sure of this—that four times the number of employes won't be required to carry out the program. But in one way or the other, the program will create tens of thousands of new jobs to make and repair war goods for our Allies abroad. The number of new Federal jobs the program will provide will depend on how many projects are contracted out to private firms.

In addition to the many new production jobs, the administrative staff will be expanded by about 2000 employes. Many of those new jobs will be in this city. The Defense Department has about 800 employes on MAP work, and both the State Department and the Economic Cooperation Administration will get larger fund allotments to carry on MAP activities.

Meantime, the House Appropriations Committee has directed its staff to make an investigation of Defense's civilian personnel problems. Its report said in part:

"Civilian personnel control and management are among the most difficult of the problems presented to your committee, and in many instances to the departments. The committee has attempted several solutions, none of them entirely satisfactory.

"The recent attempt in the Defense Department to solve the problem by dismissal of considerable numbers has emphasized the need for future study in an effort to keep from overstaffing at one

The Gallup Poll

Citizens Committee Favored To Help Form U. S. Policies

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 26.—A "Council of War" composed of the Nation's leading citizens to advise the President and make long-range plans for America's future in world affairs is overwhelmingly endorsed by American voters expressing an opinion in a national survey by the Institute.

Membership on this citizen's council would include nominees from all walks of life if the public had its way—industrialists, labor leaders, educators, military men, scientists, governors, publishers and other political leaders.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower leads the votes by a wide margin. Others in the top five are: Gen. George C. Marshall, now head of the American Red Cross; Gov. Thomas E. Dewey; Former President Herbert Hoover and Bernard Baruch.

From coast to coast, a carefully constructed cross-section of voters was asked two questions in the survey, one on the idea of having a council of citizens to help guide America's destiny, and a second calling for nominees to such a council.

The survey stemmed from a suggestion made in an editorial last May by The Washington Post, which recommended that leading citizens be appointed to a "commission on national security" to survey major problems facing the country.

Here is a summary of the survey results:

"Do you think it would be a good idea or a poor idea for Congress and President Truman to appoint a group of the Nation's leading citizens to form a 'Coun-

20,500 Air Sorties Against Reds Listed

Tokyo (Sunday), Aug. 27 (AP).—The "staggering impact" of 20,500 United States Air Force sorties has "severely crippled" the North Korean enemy, Lieut. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer reported today in a 60-day summary of Far East Air Forces operations.

The FEAF commander's long summary did not include the extensive American and British naval air operations against the Korean Reds.

Confirmed destruction of 111 North Korean tanks was among the results listed, with no evaluated estimate on the number knocked out in more than 600 attacks on tanks, armored cars and half-tractor vehicles.

American Air Force casualties were listed as 26 dead, 45 missing and 23 wounded, with 58 United States Air Force planes lost.

North Korean plane losses were placed at 72.

The statistics indicated one reason why the Communist offensive has slowed down as the lines of supply lengthened and shortages began to be felt.

B-29s alone have flown more than 1500 sorties and dropped 11,500 tons of bombs, half of this tonnage on key industrial targets and the rest on railroad and highway bridges and marshalling yards.

Such major targets as the Hungnam chemical and munitions complex, the Wonsan oil refinery and the Pyongyang rail yards and arsenal were listed as almost completely destroyed.

In addition, fighters and bombers, besides flying close support for the ground forces, destroyed or damaged 142 locomotives, 800 box cars, 212 bridges, 3133 vehicles and 180 field guns, not to mention warehouses, oil tanks, troop concentrations and the like.

The fighter planes have flown 13,000 sorties. Missions by the Jets, Mustangs and Twin Mustangs were made by day and night. They fired almost ten million rounds of ammunition, 33,000 rockets and dropped 1700 tons of bombs.

B-26 light bombers made 1300 sorties on which they fired 656,000 rounds of ammunition, 670 rockets and dropped 2000 tons of bombs.

There were 1700 reconnaissance flights in support of the combat missions. More than half were flown by the tactical air controllers in T-6-s directing combat planes to targets. Other flights were for observing, photographing and to gather weather information.

Stratemeyer also stated airplanes traveling between Japan and Korea have carried 4800 tons of supplies and 10,000 service personnel in 1800 flights. The airplanes have returned 3000 persons from the battle area.

To Serve With GIs

So. Koreans Push Drive For Recruits

By Marguerite Higgins

At South Korean Army Headquarters, Aug. 26 (NYHT).—Within earshot of the front, the South Koreans are mounting a mammoth recruiting and training program to double the size of their army by October and, for the first time, place South Korean soldiers directly in every American combat division in this theater.

This ambitious program is a spur-of-the-moment and hurry-up answer to the greatest lack of United Nations forces in this area—manpower.

Encouraged by test cases last week in which South Koreans fought well under American command, thousands of South Koreans today began to be integrated into American units, including the Twenty-fourth Division, where they will be given the same duties and privileges as American soldiers—from candy bars to post exchange cigarettes.

Most of the South Koreans completed their two weeks or 10 days of basic training only a matter of hours before being assigned to American units.

South Korean Defense Minister Shin Sun Mo said, "The South Koreans are delighted they will be fighting sholduer to shoulder with the Americans. We hope this system of integrating South Koreans will be extended to British and other U. N. troops.

"Our troops know the geography and the language. They can be of great help in serving one of your biggest difficulties—identifying the enemy. Our South Korean troops can tell at once whether an infiltrator is a friend or an enemy."

Reds Still Hold The Initiative, Walker Says

Eighth Army Headquarters, Korea, Aug. 26 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of United Nations Ground Forces in Korea, today said he believes his troops are ready for any eventuality, but that the Communists still hold the initiative.

"They are not likely to be thinking about going on the defensive as long as they are able to shift their forces at will and attack anywhere along the line," Walker said.

He said there has been an "ominous" lull in the fighting at most points along the United Nations beachhead this week, but that the enemy may be preparing to take another crack at the former provisional capital of Taegu.

"The enemy has pulled back to regroup," Walker said. "We don't know where he will strike next. There are several possible routes of attack and I think we are ready for anything."

Walker, commander of the United States Eighth Army, spoke highly of the successful stand made by American and Korean Republic forces north of Taegu this week.

"We stopped them — at least temporarily," Walker said. "The cooperation between the American and R. O. K. (Republic of Korea) troops was fine."

He was both pleased and a bit alarmed at the surge of confidence among American combat troops during the past few days.

"I like to see them with their tails up over the dashboard," he explained, "but this is no time for complacency. The enemy still has the superiority."

Asked about the enemy's artillery, Walker said the Communists' fire power definitely is declining. He said this might be one reason why North Korean tanks were moved into dug-in emplacements, as had been reported from the First Cavalry Division along the Naktong River, west of Taegu.

Regardless of where the enemy strikes or how, however, he added, the main Red objective has been and remains the Seoul-Taejon-Taegu-Pusan allied "lifeline."

Officers See Victory by Thanksgiving

By Homer Bigart

With American Forces in Korea, Aug. 26 (NYHT).—Mounting confidence was reflected today in diplomatic as well as miltary circles. American Ambassador John J. Muccio, visiting Taegu today, said the tide of battle definitely has turned and that the North Koreans have failed completely in their attempts to propagandize the occupied areas of South Korea.

General officers guessed it would be victory by Thanksgiving. About three more weeks may be needed for the Allied build-up, they indicated, and, meanwhile the battered enemy will be capable only of limited action against the bridgehead.

There is the tantalizing prospect the Reds may collapse suddenly once the Americans swing into the offensive. But a more likely possibility is that the Communists will fight ferociously, even with their army destroyed and reduced to isolated guerilla bands.

U. N. Planes Blast Attacking Korean Reds

Tokyo, Aug. 26 (AP).—United Nations fighter planes today blasted Red Koreans attacking on the East Coast and hit rear area targets as far as 300 miles into North Korea.

Bombers plastered links of the Reds' bomb-riddled transport system. B-29s striking 200 miles north of parallel 38, loosed 60 tons of bombs on Kilchu rail yards with "excellent results."

B-26s heavily damaged railway bridges around Seoul. Bombers striking other bridges encountered some flak.

Fighters ranged into North Korea hunting enemy planes. They found only dummies and shattered hulks. Instead, they hit transport lines.

Mustang fighters ripped into North Korean Reds attacking South Korean forces moving up from Pohang and Kigye on the East Coast. Others hit reinforcing Communist columns reported moving into the area.

The Air Force said the Red assault appeared to be heavy but it was being "fairly well contained" by South Koreans. Pilots reported no notable ground activity elsewhere.

Up to midafternoon United States Air Force, Marine and Australian planes had flown 187 sorties, following up Friday's record assault.

An air summary said 600 dead Red troops were found by advancing United Nations forces on an unidentified sector of the front. The toll was credited to air strikes. A spokesman said this was not connected with the massive August 16 bombing of North Korean concentrations west of the Nakton.

Huge Uranium Deposits Reported in Britain

London, Aug. 26 (U.P.).—Deposits of more than a million tons of uranium—vital component of the atom bomb—have been found in Great Britain by government scientists, the London Sunday Dispatch said yesterday.

The Dispatch said the uranium was discovered in Wales, Yorkshire and the Isle of Man, in shale beds, potash bed and around an old lead mine.

Reds Shift Attack

KIGYE CAPTURED—North Korean Reds captured Kigye last night in a strong thrust and forced South Koreans to withdraw two miles or more on the northeast end of the battle-front (1). A Red spearhead was exerting strong pressure in the Chongno area (2) but South Koreans reoccupied Chongpyong. An estimated 6000 Reds were on the American side of the Naktong River in the Hyonpung bridgehead (black arrow). A Hawaiian Fifth Regimental combat team threw back an enemy attack to keep control of Sobuk, a key mountain commanding the western approaches to Masan (3), but a growing force of Reds, now estimated at 15,000 was moving up tanks and appeared to be preparing for a full-scale attack on Masan, 27 air miles west of the lifeline port of Pusan

Chinese Reds Get Warning On Formosa

Tokyo, Aug. 26 (U.P.).—The Chinese Communists had better think twice before trying to invade Formosa, because the United States Navy will be ready and waiting if they do, Vice Admiral Charles T. Joy, commander of United States naval forces in the Far East, said today.

Joy, replying to Communist demands the United Nations order American naval forces to leave Formosan waters, said the Navy has been ordered by President Truman to protect the island and the order still stands.

He made it clear that expanding American forces in Far Eastern waters will be able to "protect" any attempt the Communists make to take Formosa, the island off China, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has made his headquarters.

Joy pointed out that 80-miles of water separate the Nationalist stronghold from the Communist-held mainland.

"The Germans thought twice before they tried to invade England," he said, adding that the Germans had greater power and a shorter distance to go.

The only thing the Chinese Reds have in greater number is "bodies," he said.

Joy said it is anybody's guess what the Communists plan to do. All kinds of intelligence reports are available. Some indicate the Reds are preparing to attack immediately, he said, and others indicate they definetely are not.

'Ike' Speaks Labor Day

Denver, Aug. 26 (AP).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will make his first major public address since the Korean War at Labor Day ceremonies in Denver touching off the Crusade for Freedom. It will be broadcast by the four major networks from 10:15 to 10:30 p. m. (EST) September 4.

Reds Drive Two Miles, Capture Kigye

a week ago after building up a menacing bridgehead on the east side.

On the Twenty-fourth's right flank, south of Waegwan, Huth said the United States First Cavalry Division is cleaning up a pocket of Communists on the east bank of the Naktong and already has killed 200 of them. Waegwan is 12 miles northwest of Taegu.

On the southern end of the front, a growing force of Communists, now estimated at 15,000, was moving up tanks and appeared to be preparing for a full-scale attack on Masan, 27 air miles west of the life-line port of Pusan.

Air Attacks Resume

This building his been slow because of heavy air attacks. An Air Force summary today said a "large number" of jets and Mustang fighters left Japan bases shortly after dawn to resume air operations carried on through Saturday night by light bombers and fighters.

In the center, the Reds eased off after nearly a week of bloody but futile attacks down the "bowling Alley" corridor from Kumhwa towards Taegu, 12 miles south.

American officers said effectiveness of the three Red divisions which tried to seize Taegu had been "cut in half."

Taegu was safe for the present, the officers said.

Associated Press Correspondent Huth reported from United States Eighth Army Headquarters in Korea that the defensive victories of Americans and South Koreans over the Reds in the Kumhwa corridor may have marked the final critical test for the Allies.

It was the third major crisis weathered successfully by the defenders since they withdrew behind the Naktong River line August 4. It may prove to be the last, Huth said.

More defensive battles may come, and more short withdrawals may be necessary to stabilize the lines, Huth said, but the days of desperate shifting of Allied troops to stop leaks appear to be over.

The enemy can be counted on to keep probing for weak spots, however.

The Pohang-Kigye assault had been anticipated after South Korean troops had launched an offensive, made some gains and then had encountered firmly dug-in Red positions. The Republican drive bogged down, then the Reds started their push.

While the Reds were moving forward, American aircraft began plastering them in the fashion that has proven so helpful to Allied ground troops—direct close ground air support, which in early days of the war was not as well coordinated as it is now.

General MacArthur's summary early Sunday gave no estimate of the number of Reds making the drive against South Korean forces in the east between Kigye and Pohang.

Forces of the Fifth and Twelfth Communist Divisions were staging the attack. The Red Tenth Division was reported in reserve.

It reported strong pressure by a spearhead of 20,000 men against the South Korean Eighth Division in the northern sector, but said latest reports indicated the defense line was holding.

Field dispatches, evidently later than the headquarters data, placed this fighting in the Chongno area, 24 miles north of Taegu, and said the South Koreans had regained the lost ground late Saturday.

AP Correspondent Tom Lambert reported from that front that the South Koreans secured high ground, reoccupied the village of Chongpyong, and went forward generally without much difficulty in straightening out what could be a vulnerable Allied salient.

Northwest of Taegu, MacArthur's release said, patrols attempting to cross to the enemy west bank of the Naktong River in the United States First Cavalry Division sector met strong enemy resistance.

Still farther south, at an unspecified location, air observers reported the Reds had an underwater bridge in operation, with vehicles on both sides of the Naktong.

On the southwest front, where the Reds are nearest to Pusan, American Negro troops fighting shoulder to shoulder with South Korean infantrymen battled successfully to secure the last blood-stained ground on the ridge and below "Battle Mountain."

Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton reported the Americans were ordered to use flame-throwers and high explosive Saturday night to seal caves into which the Reds had fled from heavy American artillery and air power.

"Battle Mountain," two miles west of Haman on the Masan front, has changed hands six times in a week of fierce fighting. The United States victory Saturday night was against slight operation.

The Hawaiian Fifth Regimental Combat Team threw back a Red attack in battalion strength to keep control of Sobuk, another key mountain. It commands the western approaches to Masan, and Masan is the gateway to Pusan.

The Reds still were building up strength well behind the lines, but American power appeared to be blunting Communist efforts to get moving for a final drive on Pusan.

Thirty-Fifth Infantry Regiment patrols probed for two miles in front of Haman without running into the enemy. The day before the Reds opened fire at five hundred yards.

Well back and west of the lines in that southern sector, the Reds were seen moving tanks across two makeshift bridges of sandbags and logs across the Nam River.

1st D. C. Draftees Leave Here Sept. 6

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The Korean crisis will really hit home in Washington on September 6 when 56 of the city's "best qualified" 25-year-olds leave their D. C. homes in response to "Greetings" from their draft boards.

The contingent will be the first group of inductees in the District's 252-man quota for the month of September. Additional groups will move out each Wednesday morning.

The first 56 spent their next-to-last weekend as civilians in various ways, but the induction notices were not forgotten. Come September 6 at 7:30 a. m. at 403 10th st. nw. and their lives will be due for some substantial changes.

Take Roderick E. Peterson, 1406 Perry pl., nw., for instance. As one of Board No. 5's catch, he was thinking about the obstacle course.

"It doesn't look so good. I haven't had any strenuous exercise in some time, but is can't be too bad."

Then there was the matter of pay. Not the most important thing, but still going from $335 a month to $75 was "not so good".

After two years as a rate engineer with the Rural Electrical Administration, Rod has friends among the female sex—"not steady, I try to give them all a break." He admits, "This has sort of surprised them. I am myself."

Thomas J. Sparks, 3415 12th ne., Local Board No. 6 selection, has the fates to consider. He was in his third year of sacred theology at Catholic University studying for the priesthood when illness forced him to take a leave of absence in February. Thus he became eligible for the draft.

Had he stayed regularly enrolled, he probably would not be marching off. He still is not sure that induction is in the cards.

"If I had a chance, I would like to go back to my studies, but if I have to go, I will make the most of it."

He's Not Sure

Another man who is not sure he will be marching off is James E. Lee, 512 23d pl. ne., Safeway Stores warehouseman on the list of Board No. 14. Lee was 26 on May 9 and thus feels he may not go. The Selective Service System said all on the list were 25.

Really eager, though, was Voldemars Sprogeris, 950 Longfellow st. nw., of Board No. 4. An electrician's apprentice for the past year, he "was a little surprised." "I expected I would have to go soon, but not so soon," he said.

However, "I am glad to have the training so we can be ready to stand by when the need arises." he commented.

His friends call him Walter, which they think "is easier. I don't. America is a land of unusual names," he reminded.

Robert N. Vaughn, 5016 North Capitol st., of Board No. 6 "doesn't mind going, although nobody's too happy," his mother reported. She has another son, Charles, 29, now in Korea with the Army, "probably as a private now—he's had his ups and downs. He's our goodtime Charlie."

Bob, though, he's different. "He's a very serious type. He has been a tabulating machine operator at the Census Bureau for the past month. He just got on the job. He worked for the VA before that and worked nights in the Postoffice while he went to Roosevelt High School."

Joseph Rokosh, jr., 619 Park rd. nw. of Board No. 5 couldn't be interviewed. He took off from his job as a chain store butcher at Connecticut and Nebraska aves. nw. for a weekend visit to his "real home" in Johnstown, Pa.

How did he feel about going in? He doesn't mind, a friend declared.

The complete list of draftees, according to boards, follows: (Some boards had no 25-year-olds and therefore are not represented).

Board No. 2—Potomac River north to Rock Creek Park nw., Aristole H. C. Roumel.

Board No. 4—North Capitol st. to Rock Creek Park, north of Buchanan st. nw., Voldemars Sprogeris.

Board No. 5—5th st. nw. to Rock Creek Park, Columbia rd. and Buchanan st. nw., Joseph Rokosh, jr., Charles T. Litsey, Roderick E. Peterson, John W. Winston, Richard A. Dameron, Jack R. Smith, Nicholas C. Smallwood, Herbert H. Dawson, Emmett Cooper, Bennie C. Barnes, William Joseph Avery.

Board No. 6—Northeast section north of Rhode Island ave. and east of North Capitol in the Catholic University section, Wilfrid A. Menard, Thomas J. Sparks, Thomas J. Coughlin, jr., John J. Esan and Robert N. Vaughn.

Board No. 7—Northwest section between North Capitol and 5th sts., Massachusetts ave. and the Soldiers' Home, Earl Smith, James O. Pettiford, Nebraska N. Woodfolk, Robert F. Hinton, James F. Beatty, James Herndon, Hume Jackson, jr., Bernard J. Jackson, Garnet G. Adams and Andrew Franklin.

Board No. 10—The downtown area from 5th to 23d sts. nw., Richard J. Landon and Robert L. Bausch.

Board No. 11—4th st. sw. to 15th st. se. and between Constitution ave. and the Anacostia River, Alvin E. Frazier, Cyril B. Cummings and Anthony L. Mamakos.

Board No. 13—North Capitol and 16th st. ne., and Florida ave. ne. to South Carolina ave. se., William W. Miller, Charles W. Garland, James Lawhorn, Howard S. Wilson, Curtis E. Jefferson, Oliver C. Allen, Tom G. Lewis, Granville J. Dunn, Frank Shepherd Leroy Kenley, Levi Wright, William F. Holmes, James H. Barnett.

Board No. 14—North Capitol st. to the Anacostia River, Rhode Island ave. ne. to East Capitol st., Benjamin E. Thomas, Leonard Timmons, Samuel J. Anderson, James E. Lee, James C. Carter, Robert E. Gardiner and John D. Curto.

Board No. 15—Anacostia River to the District Line in the Northeast section, Robert E. Baker, Charles M. Thomas, jr., and Henry Compart.

Other selectees will be called up each Monday and Friday at the rate of 100 each time for physicals. Labor Day, however, will be a holiday for them, too. Deputy Selective Service Director Frank Norton announced.

In the first 778 men taking preinduction physical and mental tests, the batting average has been 42 percent passing. A total of 333 was accepted, Norton said.

Preinduction Exam Bar To Navy Enlistment

Anyone who has been notified to report for his preinduction exam for the draft is ineligible for enlistment in the Navy, according to Navy recruiting officials.

A considerable number of applicants for enlistment are under the impression they still have the option of volunteering provided they have not received notice to report for final induction, the Navy said.

An applicant for enlistment in the Navy must meet the following requirements:

He must not have received notice to report for his preinduction examination. He must be between the ages of 17 and 30, and be unmarried with no dependents. He must meet physical and mental standards, be morally fit and of good standing in the community and be a United States citizen.

Miss Higgins Hurt In Jeep Accident, But Still on Job

Somewhere in Korea (Sunday), Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Marguerite Higgins, 29, New York Herald Tribune war correspondent, suffered a slight fracture of the nose in a jeep accident, it was learned today.

Miss Higgins was leaving the residence of John J. Muccio, American Ambassador to the Korean Republic, when her jeep brakes failed on a hill.

Her driver turned the car into a roadside gate to avoid plunging over an embankment and Miss Higgins was thrown against the windshield.

She suffered a slight concussion and some bruises, but said she would stay on the job.

U. S. Cites New Proof of Soviet Aid in Korea

The Army yesterday reported new evidence of recent Russian shipments of fighting equipment to the Korean Communists.

The disclosure came on the heels of a report from the army Friday that 120 heavy tanks were shipped to North Korea in July from the Russian-controlled Manchurian port of Dairen.

Russian spokesmen have insisted the Soviet Union has provided the Korean Reds with no additional fighting tools since Russian soldiers were pulled out of North Korea.

Coupled with the report on tanks was an account of the massing of two Chinese Communist armies near the Korean border.

At yesterdays briefing at the Pentagon, the Army spokesman said:

"Interrogation of North Korean prisoners tends to confirm reports that Soviet Russia has sent equipment to the North Korean Reds after 1949.

"In one case a prisoner claimed to have seen as late as June, 1950, the delivery of Russian weapons. He said he saw the Russian seal on boxes. Among the weapons he claimed to have seen were 24 76-mm. and 12 122-mm. artillery pieces.

"Representatives of the United Nations other than American representatives witnessed the questioning of the above prisoner and stated that he made his statement without being subjected to threats or being offered any reward."

The Army spokesman said reports on the shipment of 120 tanks from Dairen described them as heavy tanks. He said the only heavy tanks Russia is known to have are Joseph Stalin III's, believed to weigh between 50 and 60 tons each and to mount 122-mm. guns, considerably larger than the 90-mm. guns on United States medium tanks.

The officer said, however, the information did not specify that the tanks were Joseph Stalin III's, and that the tanks really are Russian T-34 mediums.

Colorado Senators Cool To A-Plant Proposal

Denver, Aug. 26 (AP).—The State Senate isn't eager for the Government to choose Colorado as the site for a hydrogen bomb plant. State Senator Sam T. Taylor mustered only 8 votes among 29 Senators present today for a memorial to the State's congressional delegation urging an H-bomb plant be set up in Colorado.

100,000 Casualties Estimated On Both Sides as War Toll

Tokyo, (Sunday) Aug. 27 (AP).—The nine-week-old Korean war has taken a toll of well over one hundred thousand killed, wounded or missing on both sides.

This is a rough estimate. Nothing official has come from North Korean sources, and United Nations losses are not up to date.

The estimate could be broken down this way:

North Korean losses—front line, 50,000; killed and wounded by strafing and bombing front, 20,000; losses among guerillas and in sea actions, 10,000; civilians killed or wounded by long-range bombing attacks as announced by North Korean radio at Pyongyang, 11,582.

Allied losses—American casualties (unofficial and estimated by several sources that cannot be named), more than 5000; South Korean battle losses, more than 20,000; South Korean civilians, large, but no possible estimate.

China Reds Name 5 To U. N. Assembly

Lake Success, Aug. 26 (AP).—Chinese Communists followed up their charges of U. S. aggression in Formosa today with new demands that a Red delegation be seated in the U. N. General Assembly.

Chou En-lai, Peiping's Foreign Minister, announced the names of five members of a delegation he wants U. N. officials to admit to the Assembly opening in New York September 19. He called on U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie to make arrangements to get them into the United States for the meeting.

In a cable to Lie, Chou repeated charges that Chinese Nationalist delegates have "absolutely no right to represent China . . . and must therefore be driven out from all meetings and organs of the United Nations."

Heading the delegation is Chang Wen-tien, who was Chou's choice last year to sit in the Security Council. Every U. N. body has refused to kick out the Nationalists and Chang made no attempt to come here.

He is a member of the Red Chinese Politburo. American-educated and Moscow-trained, he was a Communist in the Sun Yat-sen revolution more than 30 years ago.

U.N. officials expect an early challenge to the right of the Chinese Nationalists to sit in the Assembly. Such a challenge could come from Russia, Yugoslavia, India—or even Norway or Britain, all of whom have recognized the Communist Mao Tse-tung government.

If an assembly credentials committee brings in a report favorable to seating the Chinese Communists and ousting the Nationalists, there is sure to be a challenge on the floor of the Assembly.

Nationalist supporters are certain a great majority of the 59 members will uphold their right to the seats they now hold.

Another American-trained Chinese is on Chou's delegation list. He is Chi Chao-ting, an economist designated last spring to sit on the Economic and Social Council, but denied a seat by a Council vote. Chi has an American wife.

Bomb Moscow Craig Asks If Reds Hit Again

National Commander George N. Craig of the American Legion proposed yesterday that the United States warn Russia that any further aggression by her puppets will be followed by the bombing of Moscow.

"If Russia is going to bring on World War III," Craig said, "let us have it upon our own terms. We shall fight no more satellites. If Russian puppets start trouble anywhere . . . that will be the signal for our bombers to wing toward Moscow."

Craig said in an NBC network broadcast that we cannot afford to engage in any more satellite wars, with the time and place selected by Russia.

"America must now take a resolute stand for world peace by compulsion," Craig said. "We have this prevention power. We have the atomic bomb, and we have the industrial might. We can and must put our manpower behind both."

He proposed the United States announce to the world a seven-point policy that will stop the "Communist steam-roller in its tracks." He said we must:

1. Extend the Monroe Doctrine to embrace all free areas of the world which desire protection.
2. Apply ruthless economic sanctions against Russia, shutting off Marshall Plan aid to any nation that continues to trade with her.
3. Withdraw American recognition of the Soviet.
4. Abrogate the Yalta Pact and all other agreements with Russia; she has broken them all anyway.
5. Go on the offensive in the unconventional warfare against communism everywhere; we have been taking a licking in the so-called psychological war.
6. Make communism a crime in the United States; enact something like the Mundt-Ferguson bill.
7. Adopt a program of universal military training.

Filipino Reds Fire 11 Towns; 167 Killed

Manila, Aug. 26 (AP).—Five thousand Communist-ed guerillas ravaged and set fire to 11 towns in central Luzon last night and today in terror raids that left 167 persons known dead.

The heavily armed and Red-directed marauders swooped down from the hills in what a high official called a "concerted" attack against the Philippine government.

The raiding "Hukbalahaps," who organized to help fight the Japanese during World War II but refused to disband when peace came, raided within 25 miles of Manila before they retreated toward the cane breaks and mountains late Saturday afternoon.

A heavy police guard was thrown around this capital city in the uneasy quiet of Saturday night.

The toll included 100 persons killed at Tarlac, 70 miles north of Manila. Government reports said at least 20 dead "Huks" were left on the battle scenes where the Philippine army used light tanks to rout the rebels.

In many places, the government said, the Huks left Communist literature behind. In some attacks, according to witnesses, the guerillas shouted opposition to Philippine government plans to send a combat team to aid the United Nations in Korea.

A national defense headquarters spokesman said the Filipino soldiers, a group of about 4000, still would go to Korea as soon as transportation was available.

Defense Secretary Ruperto Kangleon called the raids a "concerted" attack on the government. He warned that more hit-and-run raids can be expected.

The Huks have been increasingly active in murderous attacks against outlying districts where Philippine troops are scarce and police protection scanty.

House Committee Lists Treaty Violations by USSR

By the United Press

The House Foreign Affairs Committee called the roll yesterday of Russia's treaty violations and concluded that the Soviets have honored their word only when it served their purpose and not very often at that.

Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) said the committee compiled its record of Russia's breaching of agreements "to educate the American people" to the difficulties of dealing with the Kremlin.

The committee ordered an initial printing of 12,000 copies of its document entitled "Background Information on the Soviet Union in International Relations." Kee said he expects and hopes it will be a sellout.

The document covers treaties and international agreements which Russia has made and violated since the latter part of World War II. It does not cover agreements she has made and kept, but Kee said there weren't many of these anyway.

"The record shows she has kept her agreements only when it was to her advantage to do so," Kee asserted.

The committee document covers about 60 major violations of treaties and agreements made at international conferences. It traces also Russian obstructionism in the United Nations and in Four-Power occupation councils, and the record of Soviet territorial gains in World War II.

On the propaganda front, the report said, Russia has been "violently and abusively anti-American." She has pictured this country as imperialistic, Fascist, reactionary, and bent on domination of the world.

Matthews' Talk Brings Rebuke represent either State Department views or over-all United States policy.

In a statement released by Tubby, but prepared by Secretary Dean Acheson, with the reported approval of President Truman, the State Department said:

"Secretary Matthews' speech was not cleared by the State Department, and it does not represent United States policy. The United States does not favor instituting a war of any kind."

The White House quickly added that it had not cleared the Matthews speech either, despite a standing order that all officials clear speeches or statements indicating a policy change before their delivery.

So serious was the break—of great value to Russia for propaganda purposes, and possibly giving the Kremlin an excuse for further military aggression—that there was immediate speculation that Mr. Truman might demand Secretary Matthew's resignation.

The Secretary told the New York Herald Tribune, however, that he had not been asked to resign, and that in fact no one in the Government had said anything to him about the speech. Mr. Matthews said that the speech had not been cleared in advance with the White House, the State Department, or any agency of Government, and added:

"It was not intended to be an expression of Administration policy. I was speaking for myself. The speech speaks for itself."

The "preventive war" theory was even more vigorously presented last night by George N. Craig, national commander of the American Legion, who urged that the United States serve notice on the Kremlin that any further Communist satellite aggression will be taken as the signal for "our bombers to wing their way toward Moscow."

This "preventive war" theory, advanced by some planners as relations with Russia started to worsen after V-J Day, is definitely not United States policy, which is why the Matthews speech created such consternation in the Administration. Nor, apparently, was it a trial balloon, for the prevailing view among the top advisors to the President is that Russia does not want a general war now, and that a general war can be averted.

The Navy Secretary, who spoke at a 150th anniversary celebration of the Boston Navy Yard, insisted that he had not said that the United States should institute a war, but had intended to suggest what this country might "have" to do.

Aside from the propaganda value of the speech to the Russians, the timing was regarded as particularly unfortunate by diplomatic officials in view of the Korean campaign. The aim of United States and UN policy has been to localize the Korean fighting, and there have been increasing hopes here that Russia does not want a general war now, and thus will not instigate any more "incidents" similar to that in Korea.

First, each voter volunteered any names which he had in mind. Then interviewers who conducted the survey handed the voter a list of some 15 prominent citizens and asked whether he would favor any of them as members.

In addition to the top five names mentioned, other favorites "nominated" by the public for a seat on the Council of War included in alphabetical order: James F. Byrnes, former Secretary of State; James A. Farley, former Postmaster-General; William Green, A. F. of L.; Henry J. Kaiser, Kaiser-Frazer Corporation; Charles F. Strasbourg Backs Coal, Steel Pool

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 26 (AP).—A squabble among British delegates was settled in favor of the Conservatives today and the Council of Europe's consultative Assembly indorsed 73 to zero the Schuman Plan to pool West Europe's steel and coal. There were 32 abstentions.

Overriding Laborite opposition, the Assembly inserted before the final roll call a British Conservative amendment urging "a renewed effort" to bring Britain into the Schuman Plan discussions being conducted in Paris.

The vote on the provision was 66 to 19, with 19 abstentions.

This test came, however, only after the Conservative authors of the amendment, Harold MacMillan and David Eccles, eliminated a clause which urged that the Schuman Plan be placed within the jurisdiction of the Council of Europe.

The Conservatives intended through this clause to weaken plans for a projected supra-national authority over coal and steel to a point where it would be acceptable to both them and Britain's Labor government.

W. R. Plyton, a Labor member of Britain's Parliament, called the Conservative maneuver to ease Britain into the Schuman Plan "a stupid blunder" that would force participants in the plan to start their negotiations all over again. He said Britain will not enter the talks in Paris now, but will wait for the six participating nations—France, West Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and Italy—to set up the authority. The six nations have been working several weeks to set up a draft treaty.

In indorsing the Schuman Plan, the Assembly made two other stipulations:

1. That members of the common Parliament envisaged for the steel-coal authority be selected from the membership of the Consultative Assembly.

2. That these assemblymen submit regular reports to keep the full Assembly informed on the operations of the pool authority.

The stipulation which British Conservatives succeeded in putting into the resolution was:

"That a renewed effort should be made by all the governments concerned to find a basis for an agreement which will enable all the principal coal or steel producing countries of Europe to participate fully in the scheme."

London, Aug. 26 (AP).—Winston Churchill declared tonight that a British factory is turning out tools for the Russians suitable for the repair of tanks. The Ministry of Supply quickly conceded that several British machine tool manufacturers are turning out products for Russia.

Churchill said Russian inspectors are admitted into the plant. A Ministry of Supply spokesman said this was true in all the plants engaged in making tools for the Russians.

"Fancy going on like this while everything is getting worse, and when we are literally begging the United States for aid in every form," Churchill asserted. The charge came in a political broadcast in which he accused the Labor Government of "infirmity and disconnection of thought and action in shaping defense plans."

He based his statements on information from officials of one of the tool manufacturing plants.

The United States has banned a long list of strategic materials from shipment to Russia and her satellites. The same ban has been applied to nations receiving United States aid.

The United States this week revealed that a British firm transshipped 50 tons of American molybdenum, used for hardening steel, to Russia. Another 150 tons scheduled for shipment here was stopped.

The British Board of Trade asserted the deal was legal but admitted "the United States Government is investigating this case."

A spokesman for the board of trade said Britain applies strict export controls and has drawn up its own blacklist of strategic materials for shipment to Communist countries.

It sends such things as steel, electrical equipment and generators under a wartime act.

Canton, Ohio, Aug. 26 (U.P.).—Pvt. Alvin York, 17, namesake and second cousin of the celebrated World War I hero may not be missing in action in Korea, his parents said today.

The Defense Department had informed Mr. and Mrs. Clarence York their son was missing on July 29. Today, however, the Yorks got a letter from Alvin dated August 9 warning them to expect a missing-in-action telegram but not to worry. Young York wrote he was back in action again.

Raum

Arnold Raum, who has argued more tax cases before the Supreme Court than any man in history, has been named a judge of the Tax Court of the United States.

The nomination for the $15,000 a year job was sent to the Senate late Friday by President Truman. It is for the unexpired term—10 years — of the late Byron B. Harlan.

Raum, 41 and a veteran of 16 years in the Justice Department, General. A native of Swampis now first assistant Solicitor scott, Mass., Raum was graduated from Harvard summa cum laude—and from Harvard Law School where he was a law review editor. He has several times taken leave from the Government to teach both at Harvard and Yale.

Truman Urges Early Approval of Genocide Treaty

By The Associated Press

President Truman said yesterday that reported danger to Korean Christians at the hands of the Red invaders shows the need for outlawing mass murder of whole peoples.

Mr. Truman wrote Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee urging favorable action within "the next few days" on a United Nations treaty to recognize such a crime, called genocide, and punish the criminals by world agreement.

Mr. Truman transmitted a letter from Korean Ambassador John M. Chang who said:

"There is imminent danger that the invaders will commit genocide in Communist-controlled Korea on the Christian population, which amounts to some 700,000 persons, of which 400,000 are Protestants and about 300,000 are Catholics."

He said the Reds considered the Christians "by implication" as opposed to the rule of Moscow.

Caribbean Hurricane Threat Reappears

Miami, Fla., Aug. 26 (AP).—The Caribbean storm that nearly battered itself out on Antigua Island earlier this week speeded up today and threatened to become a hurricane again.

Gale force winds up to 55 miles an hour were reported at 4:30 p. m. EST today as the disturbance brushed the Isle of Pines, in the Caribbean, about 100 miles south of Havana.

Atlantic Pact Directors Act To Open European War Plants

London, Aug. 26 (AP).—The Atlantic Pact's civilian directors said today it is planned to put Western Europe's idle war plants into production "in the immediate future." The plants would turn out weapons needed for defense against aggressive Communism.

The chief hitch, they said, was a lack of hard cash.

A communique announced they are working now on plans to finance "the acceleration of coordinated production of high priority items." They indicated that the money problem was not insurmountable by talking of almost immediate production.

The directors make up the council of deputies, set up to make continuing decisions involving the joint defense of the twelve member states. Pact members are the United States, Britain, Canada, France, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, Italy, Iceland and Portugal.

The deputies resumed discussions here Tuesday after a recess in which they consulted with their governments.

They have picked up where they left off in their "review of practical measures to strengthen the over-all defenses of the North Atlantic area," the communique said.

The European members of the pact have, in reply to President Truman's request, submitted proposed rearmament increases. The alliance's military board believes, it was learned here, that these proposals are generally inadequate.

Vinson Predicts Quick Approval Of Doctors' Draft

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) said yesterday his House Armed Service Committee will give quick approval Monday to a bill for drafting Government-trained doctors and dentists who served less than 21 months in World War II.

Vinson said the bill will be sent to the House floor Tuesday or Wednesday.

Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), chairman of a Senate Armed Services Subcommittee, said the Senate may beat the House to action on the doctors draft. Hunt, himself a dentist, said he will ask the Senate leadership to take the bill up Monday.

German Police Full Of Reds, Report Says

'Fighting Program'

German Reds Map Action Against West

Berlin, Aug. 26 (AP).—German Communists acclaimed tonight a master plan for subversive action against the allies in West Germany.

The "fighting program," as disclosed to a Red-organized national congress in East Berlin, calls for:

1. Incitement of strikes, especially in ports and heavy industries, under the guise of resisting "Anglo - American war reparations."

2. Sharp pressure against recruits for the planned expansion of West German police forces.

3. Direct attempts to convert idle former army officers to the Communist cause.

4. Mass demonstrations in West German cities in defiance of legal regulations.

5 Fresh efforts to persuade market-hungry West German industrialists to collaborate with the Soviet Zone.

Max Reimann, West German Communist leader, told the congress that building workers in two important centers, Frankfurt and Braunschweig, will strike for higher wages Monday.

"The widest strata of the West German population are delighted at the defeat of the American aggression troops in Korea," he added.

Former Nazi Gen. Vincez Mueller, who helped establish the East German police army, boasted he would intensify his underground contacts with veterans in West Germany.

Frankfurt, Aug. 26 (U.P.).—Police in eight of West Germany's states are so riddled with Communist infiltration or with fear of Red retaliation that they cannot be depended upon to put down Communist uprisings, a high-ranking United States official said today.

The official said his analysis was based on a tour through every West German state, during which he investigated the police situation with particular attention to the question of Communist infiltration.

Federal Chancellor Adenauer has pointed to these recent events as evidence of these charges:

1. Police of Lower Saxony, when told by British officials to close the frontier to illegal border crossers from the Communist east zone, refused to carry out the order.

2. At Solingen, British zone, the police chief and his deputy had to be suspended for lax enforcement of anti-Communist orders.

3. At Munich, American zone, police refused to carry out orders to confiscate anti-American posters which Communist Free German Youths paraded through the streets.

4. At Dortmund, British zone, police quickly surrendered a number of jailed Communists when a Communist mob assembled in front of the police station.

It is against this background that Adenauer has been pressing the Western occupying powers for the creation of a 25,000-man Federal police under direct Federal control. The Allies have told him he may expand present State Police forces by 10,000 men, who would be subject to Federal control only in cases of emergency.

Blood Center Visits 'Alexandria and Leesburg in Week

The Red Cross Washington Regional Blood Center, 7130 E st. nw., will make two visits next week to replenish its stock of blood. Last week 763 pints were distributed to hospitals in the area.

A total of 488 went to the District, 217 to nearby Maryland, 139 to nearby Virginia and 9 to West Virginia.

The visits next week are at Gadsby's Tavern, Alexandria, Va., Tuesday, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., and the Presbyterian Church, Leesburg, Va., Wednesday, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Friendship House Slates Family NightWednesday

Friendship House, 619 D st. se., will hold Family Night on Wednesday at 8 p. m. with square dancing, a play and talent show on the schedule.

Mrs. Ralph Fox will lead the square dancing and Mrs. Robert Herschorn will direct a play, "Tom, the Piper's Son."

Board of Trade Appoints Four Committee Heads

Four Washington Board of Trade committee chairmen were appointed by Thornton W. Owen, president, yesterday to serve through next April.

John S. Bartlett, commercial manager of the Potomac Electric Power Co., will head the Retail Business Committee. George W. Lipscomb, president of William P. Lipscomb Co., Inc., will be chairman of the Zoning Committee.

Harry J. Miller, president of Caslon Press, Inc., has been reappointed chairman of the Public Protection Committee and Elmer M. Pusey, business manager of Judd and Detweiler, Inc., has been renamed chairman of the Public Health Committee.

VA Atomic Experts To Discuss Defense

Veterans' Administration atomic experts will meet in Martinsburg, W. Va., next week to plan how to protect its hospitals and patients in an atomic attack.

Dr. George M. Lyon, chief of the VA's radioisotope section, said some experts at the August 28-September 1 meeting will discuss plans to train VA personnel in the medical aspects of atomic warfare and defense. The program relates only to VA establishments, and will be coordinated with any local or national defense plan, he said.

Pope Pius Worships in Role Of Pilgrim at Three Churches

Rome, Aug. 26 (AP).—Pope Pius XII worshipped as a pilgrim today in three of the four Roman churches which Catholics must visit to obtain the Holy Year indulgence — remission of the church's penalty for sin.

At St. John Lateran, St. Mary and St. Paul's Outside-the-Walls the Pontiff recited the prayers he himself prescribed for the 1950 Jubilee. He had previously made his Holy Year visit to St. Peter's, the fourth pilgrim church.

The Pope drove to the churches from his summer residence at Castel Gandolfo. Crowds estimated at 100,000 cheered his progress through the streets.

A squadron of the Papal Noble Guard knelt and presented arms as the Pontiff arrived at St. John Lateran. This basilica is the Pope's seat in his capacity as Bishop of Rome.

In the church the Pope recited three times the "Our Father," the "Hail Mary" and "Glory Be to the Father", as prescribed for the Holy Year. He then repeated each prayer for his intention and intoned the Aposale's Creed.

From St. John Lateran, the procession moved to St. Mary Major, where Pope Pius celebrated his first mass 50 years ago.

The great crowd—about 20,000—waited at St. Paul's Outside-the-Walls. Among them were American students from every State in the Union. The throng shouted "Viva Il Papa"—"Long Live the Pope."

Alexandrian Hero In Ship Ramming

Navy Capt. Cecil D. Riggs of Alexandria had the sort of calmness born of experience with disaster when the hospital ship Benevolence lay sinking off the Golden Gate Bridge Friday night.

He found a group of 10 or 11 Navy nurses on the rail of the rammed ship.

Riggs, 44, senior medical officer aboard the Benevolence, tied the nurses together. Then he helped bind the nurses to three pieces of board taken from the ship's hull.

Finally—and calmly—he ordered the nurses to cast off on the improvised raft. Ten other men also clung to the boards.

Riggs, one of the nurses said, was last to leave the ship.

All but one of the girls was saved. She is believed to have drowned.

The Associated Press said Riggs' knots were so secure that "rescuers were forced to cut the ropes before pulling them out of the water."

Riggs, who lives at 521 Hilltop ter., was at Pearl Harbor when the Japanese attacked.

His work that day in reorganizing the medical facilities "for the many wounded men arriving at the station from the damaged ships" won him the Navy Cross.

Friday night's heroism won him this praise from Lieut. Gail Matthews of Scranton, Pa., who was in the rescued group:

"Capt. Riggs—he was wonderful!" she said. He found some rope and tied 11 of us nurses together. His calmness reassured us.

"I said, 'Do we have to go into that water?'

"And he said, 'Yes'."

Lieut. Eleanor Harrington of Lowell, Mass., ship's nurse added:

"If it hadn't been for him, we wouldn't be here now . . . We could see Capt. Riggs was the last to leave the ship. In a little while water swallowed the ship."

Miss Harrington added:

"Many of the Catholic girls had brought their rosaries and started to pray out loud."

Miss Mathews:

"I'm not Catholic, but I prayed with them. There was one wonderful little girl from Texas. I was tied to her."

"Yes, I knew when I saw her," Miss Harrington told the United Press, "that we wouldn't have a dull moment with her on board . . . But she became panicky . . . We were within 10 feet of the Army tug when she began to froth at the mouth. She died while they pulled her aboard."

The rescued nurses were reported in good condition yesterday.

Capt. Riggs called his daughter and only child, Mrs. R. S. Rogers of 2353 S. Meade st., Arlington, about noon yesterday to report he was all right.

Commander Rogers Riggs' son-in-law, said the Navy captain "wasn't talking yet about what had happened."

Riggs' wife, Dorothy, is in the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, where she is recuperating from an operation.

Riggs was appointed assistant surgeon in the Navy's Medical Corps in 1930. He has served aboard the ill-fated Panay, and aboard the U.S.S. Ranger and U.S.S. Bon Home. He was executive officer of the Dispensary at the Naval Air Station, Norfolk.

From 1946 until last month he headed the eye, ear, nose and throat clinic at the Naval Dispensary here.

Damaged Freighter Docked at Pier

RAMMED HOSPITAL SHIP—The crumpled bow of the freighter Mary Luckenbach, docked at a San Francisco pier, shows what happened when it plowed into the side of the hospital ship Benevolence in a heavy fog off the Golden Gate Friday, sinking it that radar screen and not one was near us, and all of a sudden we get rammed."

The Luckenbach Steamship Co. had no comment up to mid-afternoon today.

Because it was only a trial run after the ship had been taken from mothballs, the list of those aboard was far from authoritative. The Navy was pretty sure how many men and nurses it had on the ship.

It was known how many civilian technicians were aboard. But when it came to the personnel of the military sea transport service, things got confused. There could have been anywhere between 160 and 190 of these men on the ship. They didn't have to go on the cruise.

The 522-foot Benevolence lay on her side today, with the big red crosses on her white hull showing through the waves washing over her. Survivors were scattered in naval and Army hospitals in three cities on San Francisco Bay.

Went Along for the Ride

The Benevolence was returning from a trial run preparatory to sailing for Korea as a mercy ship.

"Thank God she wasn't returning from Korea," said Capt. T. R. Wirth, chief of staff of the Twelfth Naval District. "Normally there might have been 1500 patients aboard, maybe even as many as 3000."

Most of those who were aboard had just gone along for the ride.

She was about four miles from San Francisco Bay and one and one-half miles off San Francisco's famed seal rocks when the outbound freighter Mary Luckenbach broke through the fog.

Capt. Lyle J. Havens, a civilian harbor pilot, who was piloting the Benevolence, had heard the whistle and ordered full stop and full right rudder. The hospital ship sheeled in the water.

The freighter's prow ripped into her exposed starboard flank with a jarring crash, reared back, and struck again. The momentum of the Mary Luckenbach carried her forward, rolling back the side of the hospital ship. Survivors said it felt like an earthquake.

The hospital ship sank onto her port side in about 15 minutes. There was no order to abandon ship.

Those aboard poured over the side into the chilly Pacific Ocean, clinging to life belts, life rafts, boards and each other.

It was then the remarkable rescue operation got under way. Thirty-seven smaller craft, from destroyers to little fishing craft from San Francisco's fisherman's wharf, nosed through the fog into the mass of floating humans and debris.

Capt. Austin Tobin of an Army tug found 60 men crowded on two twelve-foot square rafts.

"Not a man among them had enough strength left to pull himself aboard though our deck was level with their chins," Tobin said.

Eleven nurses were tied together and clinging to three boards. They said "merrily we roll along" as they awaited rescuers.

"There were dozens of men beyond the reach of life rafts, clustered together and floating around for what seemed a century," said medical corpsman Henry N. Voodren. "The fellows with the lifejackets grabbed those without, and hung onto them, so that they couldn't drift away in the fog."

Hospital Ship Haven to Replace Benevolence

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman yesterday ordered the Navy hospital ship Haven reconditioned to take the place of the sunken hospital ship Benevolence.

Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, said the Haven will be put in service as soon as possible.

Air Guard Back With 'Know-How' and Fat Pay

The District's Air National Guard "Weekend Warriors" came home yesterday from their 15-day field training with bulging wallets and a lot of "know-how."

A payroll of about $50,000 was distributed among the six units based at Andrews Air Force Base.

Col. Laidler B. Mackall, Washington attorney and D. C. Air Guard commander, said the encampment was the "best we've ever had."

For the first time since the District Air Guard was reorganized more than three years ago, training was held at two separate locations. Colonel Mackall said the dispersed operation simulated combat conditions and gave units a chance to see what they could accomplish on their own.

Much More Accomplished

"This year we accomplished five times as much as we did last summer," Colonel Mackall said.

"Our pilots averaged more than six gunnery sorties each and we flew 150 ground controlled intercept missions as against ten last year."

The 121st "White House" Squadron, the 121st Utility Flight, the 121st Weather Station and Detachment A, 213th Air Service Group, were stationed at Andrews. The 113th Fighter Group Headquarters and the 213th Air Service Group Headquarters were located at Byrd Field, near Richmond, Va.

The four squadrons controlled by the District's 113th Fighter Group were stationed at three places. In addition to the 121st at Andrews, the Delaware's 142nd was located at Wilmington, while Virginia's 149th and the 104th of Maryland were stationed at Byrd Field.

Poor weather cut down flying time considerably, but Lt. Col. Willard W. Millikan, commanding the 121st squadron, said his flyers performed all their missions. In addition, a number of pilots had their first chance at the powerful Thunderjets.

Despite the Weather

Colonel Millikan said, "I am mighty pleased. The squadron did a fine job despite the weather and I am convinced we have reached a high level of operating efficiency."

Col. H. C. B. Claggett, commanding the 213th Air Service Group, said his men were not handicapped by weather. "They were able to accomplish a high percentage of the training directives laid down by Continental Air Command."

The high level of aircraft in commission," he added, "is a tribute to the Service Group which 'kept them flying.'"

Units from Byrd Field returned to Andrews yesterday by motor convoy and airlift. They were dismissed by 5 p. m.

Nazi Prisoner 4 Years Killed as GI in Korea

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 26 (U.P.). Pfc. Ivan Tokartschuk, 21, who spent more than four years in German concentration camps, has been killed in action in Korea, his parents were notified today.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vasil Tokartschuk, who fled the Russian occupation of Poland. They came to the United States as displaced persons.

U. S. Red Aides Face Lee Pressman Blast

cause of the "moral issue" involved he should not be required to answer questions that might involve any of the others named as members of the cell.

Here is what he will run up against:

Some committee members may seek to take his testimony in executive session, having in mind the fact that the issue is the hottest of hot political potatoes at this time, with the election to be held just ten weeks from Tuesday.

Nixon to Put on Pressure

Other members, led by Representative Richard M. Nixon, Republican, of California, who is solely responsible for getting Pressman on the stand at this time, will demand public hearings, and will try to compel him, under threat of a contempt citation, to "tell all" about all other members of the cell of the early '30s.

Other witnesses have been subpenaed to tell what they know about Pressman.

It's an obvious inference that all of the others named in times past as members of the cell—named by Whittaker Chambers, the nemesis of Alger Hill, for one—will be paraded back to the stand and will be asked, in effect, "why don't you come clean, too?"

And here are the big things—the things that now come within the realm of probability, just at a time when shruggers-off have been saying it was an impossibility that they ever would:

The Pressman story, plus the testimony of others who will be called, may finally crack the iron ball of secrecy within which have nestled so many colleagues with knowledge which they thought they would never have to disclose.

It may make the Alger Hiss case look not like a small potato—but like just one of many big and hot potatoes.

It may implicate persons who've never been mentioned before.

It may have a big bearing on the outcome of the 1950 congressional elections.

Hay for GOP

There's not the slightest doubt that the Republicans will try to make hay and that the Democrats will fret about things that happened while they were in power, and wince because of President Truman's now-lamented "red herring" crack, made when he criticized Senate and House inquiries into Communist infiltration of Government.

The new uproar had its immediate inception when Wallace pulled out of the American Labor Party and said he was on the side of the United States and the United Nations.

Pressman followed him out by a few days.

Pressman had been one of Wallace's chief supporters when Wallace was the ALP candidate for President in 1948, and had run himself for Congress in Brooklyn's 14th District on the ALP slate.

Pressman gave as his reasons:

"The policies, activity and political direction of the American Labor Party do not represent or reflect the Democratic and progressive interests or aspirations of the American people but rather of the Communist Party."

Among the many members of Congress who immediately asked, "What goes on here?" the first to act was Representative Nixon, a member of the Un-American Activities Committee, which had heard testimony from Messrs. Pressman, Chambers, Hiss and others in August, 1948.

Representative Nixon remembered that Mr. Pressman took refuge in the Constitution in 1948 when he refused to answer many questions put to him.

Amendment Cited

Pressman invoked, among other things, the fifth amendment.

This amendment provides, among other things, that a witness can't be compelled to give testimony which might incriminate him.

Pressman never specifically said he refused to answer on the grounds that his answers might incriminate him.

He invoked the amendment, and other parts of the Constitution, to protect his rights to due judicial process.

But—he didn't answer.

He wouldn't answer questions as to whether he knew Mr. Chambers, Alger Hiss, Donald Hiss, Victor Perlo, Charles Cramer, Henry Collins, John Abt, and the late Harold Ware, all of whom had been named by Chambers or Miss Bentley or both as having been affiliated with the Communist appartus.

Item to be emphasized—it's a cinch that all of them except the late Ware and possibly Hiss, who is free pending the outcome of his appeal, will be called back by the House Committee to undergo some further questioning.

Representative Nixon, as his first step, subpenaed Pressman.

Mr. Pressman, over the phone last evening, told this reporter he would comply with the subpena and would be present at the hearing Monday in the room of the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

It was learned that Pressman:

Will label the North Koreans and the Communists as instigators of the Korean war, and will voice his support of the United States and the United Nations, as did Wallace.

Will emphasize his services to the labor cause.

Will insist that he resigned of his own accord from his post of general counsel of the CIO in 1948, and was not forced out.

Right to Change Mind

Will say, in effect, that any man has a right to change his mind when his experience shows him that his past actions were wrong.

And—most of all—will try to avoid putting the finger on anyone else he knew in the early '30's in the Washington group.

It was also learned:

That some of the committee members are in a mood to tell Pressman, "Look, don't try to come half-clean. If you're going to come clean, come really clean."

That they'll press him for all the information he has about all the other men named by other witnesses as having been members of the group.

That they'll probably threaten him with a contempt citation if he doesn't come clean.

It was on August 3, 1948, that Whittaker Chambers testified that for "a number of years" prior to 1938, when he broke with the Communist Party, there was an underground Communist apparatus in the Government headed by Nathan Witt, an attorney for the National Labor Relations Board.

Lee Pressman was a member of this group, as was Alger Hiss, Chambers testified.

"The purpose of this group at that time," Chambers testified, "was not primarily espionage. Its original purpose was Communist infiltration of the American Government. But espionage was certainly one of its eventual objectives. . . ."

About 1936, it was decided by Communist leaders that some of the members of the Communist apparatus were "going places" in Government, Chambers testified. These persons included Hiss and Pressman, he said, so it was decided that "we would take these people out of that apparatus and separate them from it physically—that is, they would have no further intercourse with the people there—but they would be connected still with that apparatus . . ."

At Harvard With Hiss

On August 5, 1948, Alger Hiss testified that Pressman had been in his class at the Harvard Law School, that they had served together on the Harvard Law Review, and that they both were assistants to Jerome Frank on the legal staff of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

On August 16, Alger Hiss testified that he had been questioned by the FBI in 1946, and that he had been asked if he knew Pressman, and he gave the same answers that he had given the committee.

On August 24, 1948, Louis F. Budenz, former editor of the Communist "Daily Worker," testified that he knew Pressman was a member of the Communist party.

"Lee Pressman, you say that he is a member of the Communist party" questioned Stripling, chief investigation for the committee.

"Yes, sir, I have met him as such," replied Budenz.

"You have met him as such?"

"Yes sir."

A bit later in this hearing, Stripling put Pressman's employment history into the record. It showed that he was assistant general counsel of the AAA from 1933 to 1935, a position to which he was appointed by Henry A. Wallace, then Secretary of Agriculture.

In 1935 Pressman became general counsel of the Works Progress Administration, serving only briefly, however, for later in the year he became general counsel of Rexford Guy Tugwell's Resettlement Administration. In June, 1936 he became general counsel for the Committee for Industrial Organization and the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, and in March, 1937, became general counsel for the Textile Workers' Organizing Committee.

McGrath Hits McCarran Bill To Curb Reds

By The Associated Press

A drive to clamp new home front controls on Communists and subversives comes to a head in Congress next week. Meanwhile, new powers to rid the Government of security risks went into effect yesterday.

President Truman signed a bill giving key agencies complete power to fire employes for security reasons. It applies to 11 defense and semi-military agencies, but provides for extension by the President to any other Government department or bureau.

Both House and Senate prepared to take up subversive control bills going far beyond a set of security rules recommended by the Administration.

In that connection Attorney General McGrath wrote Senate Democratic Leader Lucas (Ill.), yesterday that pending proposals to require registration of Communist organizations would be unworkable and unneeded.

McGrath cautioned against any congressional action which might cause Communists to "go underground" or which might prove ater to be invalid and put the Reds i na martyrs' role.

The Attorney General particularly hit at provisions of a bill by Senator McCarran (D., Nev.), saying they would be ineffective and impose a "staggering and perhaps futile enforcement burden" on the Justice Department.

McGrath said Communist groups, under the McCarran bill, could fight registration in the courts for long periods and, then, even if required to register, could "reappear with a new name and new officers" to start the process over again.

"The present world situation," McGrath wrote Lucas, "requires the prompt enactment of practical and constitutional legislation which will give to the Department of Justice adequate weapons to deal with the precise dangers which we face, while preserving our traditions of personal liberty."

In a further attack on McCarran's proposal, Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.), issued a statement calling it "the most savage and cunning attack on basic rights" in American history. He said in a statement he and other Senators will file a minority report next week opposing the McCarran Bill.

Tax Hikes Asked For Congressmen, Truman, Barkley

Senator Williams (R., Del.) proposed yesterday that income taxes for President Truman, Vice President Barkley and all members of Congress be boosted to help meet defense costs.

He introduced an amendment to the pending tax bill that would make tax-exempt allowances, now granted all these officials, subject to taxes.

The President now gets $100,000 a year salary and an additional $50,000 for expenses. Similarly, the Vice President gets $30,000 salary and a $10,000 allowance. All members of Congress get $12,500 a year salary plus $2500 for expenses.

Williams proposed that all these tax-exempt expense allowances be lumped as salaries and taxed. But lawmakers gave his amendment slight chance for approval.

Pentagon Chiefs Await 'Hill' Action to Plug Loopholes in Sabotage Laws

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Pentagon chiefs would like to see early Congressional action on some long-needed legislation to plug a gap in our anti-sabotage laws.

Because of this loophole a clever saboteur might set fires or attempt other damage at vital Army, Navy and Air Force bases and have a chance of getting off scot-free even if caught in the act.

This is what President Truman had in mind when he asked in his internal security message to Congress, August 8, for "broader authority than now exists . . . to establish security regulations concerning the protection or military bases and other national defense installations."

The authority he wants has been pending before Congress for well over a year. Unopposed on the Capitol Hill and conceded by almost everyone to be necessary to the national security, it has not been passed because it is not a separate bill. The legislation is included in the various omnibus internal security bills which have been and still are the subject of great controversy.

MP Powerless

At present, it is conceivable that a person not a member or employee of the armed forces but legally present on a military base, wantonly violate the fire, safety and guard regulations, and the most the MPs could do would be to escort him off the reservation.

Of course, anyone committing such an act would be subject to thorough investigation. But before any stringent action could be taken against the violator, it would be necessary to prove he was attempting to commit sabotage.

This situation could play into the hands of a saboteur. For there are always large numbers of employees of private contractors present on many military reservations and it would be easy for a traitor or enemy agent holding such a job to, say, casually flip a lighted cigarette into some shavings or oily rags and start a disastrous fire or explosion. If caught, it would be almost impossible to prove that it was not just "carelessness."

The trouble lies in the judicial interpretation of the tricky word "intent." Under the present sabotage law it is necessary to prove that the culprit had the "intent" to interfere with the national defense or to destroy defense property in order to punish him.

Members of the military services and Government employes now are subject to fire, safety and security regulations. But as Capt. Chester C. Ward, of the Navy Judge Advocate General's Office told the House Judiciary Committee more than a year and a half ago it is different with others.

"We have no control, no sanctions, to apply," he testified. "So far as these people are concerned, such as contract stevedores, contract longshoremen, civilian transportation employes, and so forth.

"Under the present gap in the law they could hang a "No Smoking' sign in the powder magazine and one of them could throw a lighted match inside and they could not even be fined $5.00."

Under the proposed change, anyone who "willfully" violated such safety or security regulations at a military base would be held guilty of a misdemeanor and could be fined up to $5000 and put in jail for a year. Besides making it more difficult for saboteurs, the legislation should help prevent accidental fires and disasters by punishing reckless carelessness, officials say.

A similar law was in effect, applicable to the Navy only at waterfront bases, during the war. It, however, expired in 1947. Under the present bills, the new authority would cover military establishments in peace time. During war or national emergency, the President by proclamation could extend its terms to any property "in the interest of national security."

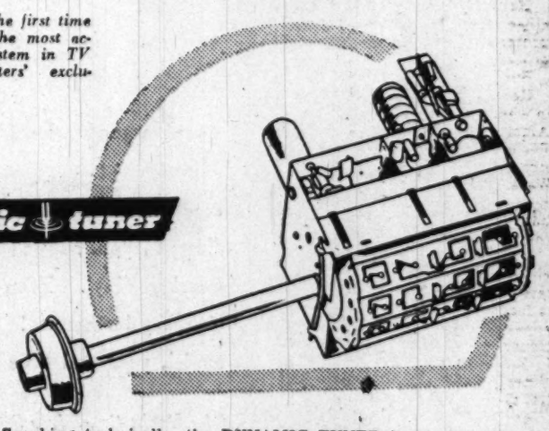
The graceful, modern cabinet is available in mahogany or limed oak veneers. See it in operation at Dynamic today. You can own it for pennies per day and enjoy it while you pay for it.

Introducing for the first time in TV history—the most accurate tuning system in TV today. Hallicrafters' exclusive . . .



Speaking technically, the DYNAMIC TUNER is a rotary turret-type tuner using flat tuning coils that are precision-printed by a special photo-etch process. Because wire stretches as it is wound, and because coil forms vary, NO OTHER TUNING SYSTEM can even approach the absolute accuracy of precision photo-printed coils. Which means that weak signals are amplified, static and other interference are rejected, sensitivity is increased and all-around performance tremendously improved.

D.C. Defense Fund Cut to $30,000 a chorus of noes and only three others stood with him.

District planners have said that with $30,000 they could appoint a civil defense director but that he wouldn't have anything to direct. With the larger amount, they had intended to set up an air raid warning net, an emergency command post, a planning and operations staff, to microfilm the city's utility and real estate records and to begin training auxiliary firemen and policemen.

The man who chiefly killed the plan was Representative Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.), chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee which which first voted to hack the defense funds. He said at the time that Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young, in charge of civil defense, failed to show the need for $290,000. It was Bates who forced the second and decisive vote yesterday.

Before the vote, Bates told a reporter that the House action on Friday was "the best argument yet for home rule, if that's the way Congress is going to handle District affairs."

Stigler Signs Petition

Asked if that meant he was going to sign the District home rule petition, he said no. That petition now has its 210th signature, that of Representative William G. Stigler (D., Okla.). A total of 218 signatures is needed to bring to the floor the Senate-approved bill to set up a locally-elected government. There are some duplications, however, among the 210 signers.

Earlier in yesterday's debate on the supplemental appropriation bill, which contained the civil defense and other District funds, Canfield called attention to an article in the American Legion Monthly, pointing to Washington's vulnerability to an A-bomb attack.

After the vote, he said he was sure National Security Resources Board Chairman W. Stuart Symington, the chief civil defense planner for the nation, will ask the Senate to restore the funds. NSRB has planned to make the District set-up a model for other cities and the states.

The appropriation measure, as passed last night, calls for $1,895,516 in District funds. Included is $600,000 to put Metropolitan police on a five-day week and $320,000 for pay increases for wage scale employes of the District.

Also on the House calendar are bills to raise the price of auto dealers' license tags, to regulate licensing of engineers, to permit a swap of District and foreign school teachers and to liberalize teachers' sick leave.

Five-Day Week

Also in the bill, in other sections, was money to put the White House police on the five-day week, to buy the property adjacent to Blair and Blair-Lee Houses and to erect a 842-bed barracks and a 210-bed hospital at Soldiers' Home. These last two projects, long delayed, will cost $12,740,000.

One change in the bill agreed upon by the House somewhat altered the language affecting hiring of new Government employes for war-created jobs. As first written, all vacancies would have had to be filled by temporary employes but the amendment permits filling regular jobs in the old-time agencies by permanent appointment.

The House will tackle some more District business on Monday. On the calendar is a bill to allow the Public Utilities Commission to limit the number of taxicabs. However the Senate District Committee on Friday killed the same measure by a 3-to-2 vote.

ORDER: If all goes well, the President this week will issue an order to make all nonstatus employes eligible for Civil Service status who have had at least two years of continuous service, and who meet other conditions.

As now written, the order won't help former employes who have had up to eight years of service and who were laid off recently through no fault of their own. But the hard-luck of these persons is being considered and they may be given a chance for status in a future order if they get back on the Federal payroll.

STATE: The Congress appears ready to vote a big staff expansion of State's Voice of America program, about 5000 new employes. But this the Congress is insisting on—that State's employes be both loyal and competent.

The report of the House Appropriations Committee says in part: "The department is directed to spare no effort in obtaining the best and highest possible type of security-approved personnel for this operation."

Not only that, but Representatives Rooney of New York, and Stefan of Nebraska, the top Democrat and Republican who handle State's appropriation, bluntly warned the department from the House floor that they must operate the Voice of America in a competent manner—or else.

Indianapolis doctor has disclosed Indianapolis doctotr has disclosed that he will bill the Army for some $16,000 for chest X-ray work on draftees in a period of nearly a month.

Dr. Raymond Beeler said 3300 cases were processed in his laboratories before he helped arrange with the State Health Board for a machine at the induction center.

Dr. Beeler said he did not want the business because it interfered with service to his regular patients.

"What makes me mad," he said, "is that a lot of people will think I'm profiteering."

Tokyo, Aug. 26 (U.P.). — Geisha girls in Tokyo sent the Red Cross nearly $200, according to the Saturday edition of Stars and Stripes. A letter specified the cash be used to buy gifts for GIs in Korea.

Accord Is Seen on Controls This Week

A House Democratic leader yesterday predicted Senate-House agreement this week on a compromise to keep authority for wage-price-rationing controls in the proposed home front mobilization law.

Representative Spence (D., Ky.) chairman of the House Banking Committee, said it would be "a bad mistake" to strip the anti-inflation measure of power to invoke such controls.

The possibility that might happen arose Friday when a Senate-House conference committee deadlocked over the issue of whether to give President Truman a free hand to get wage-price curbs and rationing into effect.

The conference group is trying to work out differences between separate economic controls bills.

Meanwhile, plans for getting Congress out of town by next weekend were snarled in hot disputes, not only about wage-price controls, but excess profits taxes and Communist controls, as well.

A week ago both Democratic and Republican leaders—anxious to get home for election year campaigning—were cooperating on a timetable calling for a windup September 2—just before Labor Day.

New Bridge Dedicated to Maryland's 1st Casualty

Korean Envoy Speaks At Rockville Span Honoring Baltimore GI Killed June 30

The Corpl. John C. Brown Bridge in Rockville—named in memory of Maryland's first casualty in the Korean fighting—was dedicated before 2500 persons yesterday.

Main speaker was Dr. John Myun Chang, Korea's ambassador to the United States.

Chang said that it was "fitting" that a bridge be dedicated as a memorial to the 21-year-old Baltimore soldier.

The world's free peoples, he went on, "ask little for themselves.

But across this peaceful desire . . . has fallen the awful shadow of a totalitarian state, pledged to conquest and flaunting a philosophy of cynical materialism. . . .

"A bridge from the dark troubles of our time to a new era of security, and freedom and peace is the best memorial we can offer to all those who suffer and perish in the cause for which the United Nations has devoted its efforts and its hopes."

Corporal Brown was killed June 30 while with an Army communications unit.

The span connects the Rockcrest section of Rockville and the Rockville pike, Route 240. It crosses the Baltimore & Ohio railroad tracks and will permit vehicles to pass between the two points.

Mayor Lamar Kelly of Rockville welcomed the guests, and Ernie Tannen, of Station WGAY, was master of ceremonies. Mrs. Selma Hamilton, of Rockville, comember of the dedication committee, cut the ribbon that opened the bridge.

Armed forces, veterans' groups and community organizations were represented in the ceremonies and the parades that preceded it.

Woman, 32, Burned by Gas Explosion in Her Kitchen

The Washington Post

Victim transported to ambulance by rescue squad crew

Mrs. Alice Smith Heffernan, 32, suffered second and third-degree burns to the upper portion of her body in a gas explosion at 4:30 p. m. yesterday in the kitchen of her apartment, 806 17th st. nw.

At Emergency Hospital Mrs. Hefferman's condition was described as "fair."

Police said Mrs. Heffernan touched off the explosion by lighting a cigarette. She said the gas had accumulated because the pilot light of the stove had gone out.

The blast blew out a living room window of the second floor apartment on 17th st. and showered glass splinters and debris on a passing convertible auto. Three passengers suffered slight cuts. They were Alice Vonselderick, 16, and Joan Small, 28, both of Philadelphia, and Raymond Meeks, 25, of 2727 N st. se.

According to police, Mrs. Heffernan was taken to Emergency Hospital August 13 after apparently taking an overdose of sleeping capsules. At that time she was transferred to Gallinger for observation. Police said she was carrying a check for $4000 in her pocketbook on that occasion.

Arlington Airs Report On Police

One-Man Cars, Training Changes Urged in Survey By Consultants

One-man police scout cars would release 13 policemen for other duty, Arlington was advised yesterday by a public administration consulting firm employed to make a "critical examination" of its police department.

The report, prepared by Griffenhagen Associates, of Washington, was turned over yesterday to the County Board by County Manager A. T. Lundberg. He requested the survey last January.

Noting the county is chiefly a "high class residential district," the report commented: "practice in the art of jujitsu, ability to properly handle a revolver . . . are of more worth to a patrolman than a dozen idle companions."

The diplomatically worded report found "overall" police organization sound, but said "coordination between units needs improvement."

Better personnel administration, and stronger supervision within departments are needed, the report said. Public relations should be emphasized, and the force "should primp up smartly and show a bright face and figure to the public."

The report also recommended that:

1. Uniformed men handle some minor complaints, now assigned to the detective force, to allow patrolmen to "give vent to whatever detective instinct they may possess." It should subject detectives to competition from "men of capacity" in the uniformed force.

2. A detective whose usefulness as an investigator is open to question for any reason should be subject to return to uniformed duty upon the recommendation of the detective bureau head, with the chief's approval.

3. The recruiting area for new policemen be broadened to include "the hinterland, where the salaries paid in Arlington seem large."

4. County policemen be trained by arrangement with the District police department, which can afford more extensive training facilities. All physically able men should learn jujitsu.

5. All members of the force should get training in "voice control and microphone effectiveness" to produce the "voice with a smile."

6. Men be given compensatory time off for court appearances in off-duty hours, for which they get overtime at present.

7. A special accident investigator be put into 24-hour service.

8. A policewoman be hired in the near future to help out the present juvenile officer.

9. Radio receivers be placed on motorcycles.

10. Civilian school crossing guards be hired on a parttime basis if additional school protection is needed in the future.

Polish Couple, an Ocean Apart, United in Simultaneous Rites

Barbara Zakrzewski, 25, receives the blessing of Father Chester Brzegowy

By Phillip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

A youthful university student in Warsaw, Poland, yesterday took a bride in Chillum, Md.

It was as if her lover knelt beside her in the quiet little chapel of the Resurrection Fathers, so radiant was the expression of Barbara Zakrzewski when the priest gave her the nuptial blessing.

It would seem, also, that the more than 4000 miles separating the newlyweds were little more than a day's journey, so exuberant were Barbara and her bridegroom in a telephone conversation that followed the simultaneous ceremonies.

Perhaps Father Chester Brzegowy, who celebrated a high mass for the bride, held the key to their happiness when he told the 30 persons congregated there: "Although the distance is great, there is a spiritual unity and the unity of God which brings them close."

Separated 3 Years.

Barbara and her fiance, whom she describes only as "Mietek," his nickname, have been separated for three years—ever since she fled the yoke of oppression which her land and lover endure.

Mietek's efforts to come to America, so they could be married without the frustration of red tape and interminable separation, have been futile.

Barbara, a secretary for Air Union, Inc., in Bethesda, has said she hopes to return to Poland "some day." But she would be elated to hear that Mietek could join her here.

The couple succumbed to the age-old adage that absence makes the heart grow fonder and went about their wedding plans as if the Atlantic Ocean did not exist—she in Maryland, he in Poland.

The ceremony in the church at Riggs and Ager rds., in what was once the famous Riggs mansion hard by the grave of Pierre L'Enfant, was not officially a wedding, because Maryland does not recognize marriage by proxy. But in the eyes of the Catholic Church, they are united for life. And if the bridegroom reaches America, they will be recognized as having been married by proxy in Poland.

In the Chillum chapel at 11 a. m., Barbara approached the altar with her brother, with whom she lives in Chevy Chase.

In a Catholic church in Warsaw, where it was 5 p. m., Mietek approached the altar to become a bridegroom. Present were his family and Barbara's parents.

Walks to Shrine

As the mass concluded with the final "Deo Gratias," she moved as though treading on air to the shrine within the chapel of Our Lady of Czestochowa, whose feast day was celebrated yesterday.

There she placed her flowers, knelt in prayer for 10 minutes and departed to be met by well-wishers outside the church.

The transatlantic telephone call was soon completed successfully, and Barbara confessed, through a flood of tears, that the conversation went something like this:

"Kocham cie bardzo zona moja ukochana" (I love you very much, my beloved wife.)

"Kocham cie bardzo i bede no ciebie czekala moj najdrozszy mezu." (I love you very much and will wait for you, dearest husband of mine."

She wept joyously and unashamedly during the conversation, which lasted for about 10 minutes.

Lane, Mahoney Air Platforms For Md. Primary

Governor Stands On His Record; Taxes Assailed By His Opponent

Baltimore, Aug. 26 (AP).—This was platform day in the campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Both Governor Lane and George P. Mahoney, his principal opponent in the September 18 primary, submitted their detailed programs.

Lane, in the main, stood on his four-year record as Governor. He promised that if reelected, and world conditions allowed, he would complete the roads, schools, hospital and other programs started by his administration.

Mahoney promised he would work for an immediate easing—and eventual abolishment—of the retail sales tax. He also said he wants to cut State income taxes by 10 percent.

Would Ask Immediate Increase

He said, specifically, he would ask an immediate increase of the sales tax exemption base from its present 14 cents to 34 cents; elimination of the levy on all foods, drugs and household remedies, and baby oils and powders.

Those reductions could be effected without cutting teachers' salaries or detrimentally affecting the school system, operation of hospitals, the improvement of roads "or any other vital public function," he said.

Mahoney asserted overhauls of the budget control and accounting systems would, to a large extent, make those reductions possible.

Lane did not mention the sales tax specifically. However, he said a State commission is now making a study of all State taxes looking towards "more equitable distribution of the State tax base and such revision downward of taxes as the State's financial requirements permit." Recently he said it looks as if the exemption base of the sales tax may be raised next year, and that restaurant meals may be exempted.

Governor's Platform

The Governor's platform called for eventual abolition of the State real estate tax, "meanwhile, holding this tax at a minimum level." The rate is now 6 cents per $100 of value—lowest in State history.

Mahoney did not mention the real estate tax in his platform.

Both called for development of mental hygiene clinic and establishment of preventive programs in that field. Mahoney criticized present conditions in the State's mental hospitals. Lane pledged "continued support of the reorganization of the mental hospitals with the highest possible type of treatment."

The Governor said he would carry out the five-year road improvement program started in 1948. Mahoney said that while he favors road improvements, he is opposed to the program started by Lane. Mahoney contended the highways being built under it are costing too much.

Taxi Rider Hurt in Crash With Auto

John L. Henderson, 55, 607 L st. ne., was injured yesterday at 9 p. m. when the taxi he had just retained was struck by an auto in front of his home, police reported.

J. D. Dillard, 28, 1017 4th st. ne., driver of the auto, was charged at Ninth Precinct Station with leaving after colliding, having no permit, and driving on the wrong side of the street.

Henderson was admitted to Casualty Hospital in fair condition with facial cuts, possible brain concussion and possible internal injuries.

Failed to Turn Sharply

Thomas F. Mattthews, 29, 5537 Bass ave. se., driver of the cab, said Dillard's auto turned into L st., headed east from 6th st. Dillard failed to turn sharply enough to avoid the parked taxi.

After hitting the cab, Dillard veered to the right and struck a second auto broadside, police said.

With Dillard was his brother John, 36, of the 4th st address.

In another accident, Lawrence C. Donavin, 31, 1111 N. Pitt st., Alexandria, struck an abutment on the Virginia side of the 14th st. bridge about 5 p. m. yesterday.

In Serious Condition

Donavin, an auto salesman for the Barry Pate Co., was admitted in serious condition at Alexandria Hospital. He suffered a fractured jaw, a possible fractured skull and lacerations.

Pvt. P. W. Johnson, of the Park Police said two witnesses told him they saw Donavin slump behind the wheel just before the crash.

Sergt. Theodore E. Namey, 37, attached to the Fourteenth Precinct, was slightly injured and his car demolished in a collision at Sligo Creek Parkway and New Hampshire ave., Takoma Park, Md., yesterday at 10 p. m.

Pvt. David Dudley, of the Prince Georges County Police, said the driver of the other auto was Walter Longcope, 44, University ln. and Riggs rd., Hyattsville, Md. Longcope, part owner of the Tick Tock restaurant, was charged with reckless driving, unreasonable speed and failure to have an operator's permit in his possession.

Annual Report

Drunk Cases Top ABC Violation List

More Washington tavernkeepers got into trouble for letting drunks remain on their premises than for any other single ABC violation during the 1950 fiscal year.

That is what Alan W. Payne, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, told the District Commissioners in his annual report on the board's work during the fiscal year just ended.

There were 35 instances where the ABC intervened in such drunk cases during the year. Next largest category of violations was in sale of alcohol to minors, with 21 violations reported.

Sale and delivery of alcohol to drunks ranked third on the ABC blacklist, with 18 violations, while there were 16 cases in which tavernkeepers permitted gambling on their premises.

Payne noted an increase of $1,261,840.39 in license fees and taxes collected on alcoholic beverages during the year, because of the sales tax. Of this amount, $622,707.61 was collected on alcoholic beverages other than beer. There was a $1,999.01 decrease in taxes collected on the rehabilitation of alcoholics program, Payne told the Commissioners.

The Board also revoked five liquor licenses, suspended 28 and warned holders of ten other licenses during the year.

Three Firemen Close Careers On Thursday

Three District Fire Department workers will wind up their official careers on Thursday with retirement because of physical disability.

The men are Capt. John R. Ludlam, 47, of No. 13 Engine Company; Sergt. Weldon J. Grinnan, 50, formerly with No. 13 Engine Company, and Pvt. Howard F. Rothery, 51, of Truck Company 3, the department's official photographer.

Captain Ludlam, who lives at 408 St. Lawrence dr., Silver Spring, has served in the department since 1925.

Sergeant Grinnan, who lives at 1305 E st. ne., finished 25 years of service in the department yesterday. He was promoted to his present rank last month and transferred to the fire boat company but became ill within two weeks.

Private Rotherby, who lives at 1401 Beechwood ln., Falls Church, joined the force in 1921. He was commended by the District Commissioners this year for his work on the new Fire Department manual. He also has been commended for electro-cardiographic work at the clinic of the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons.

Future activities of the Coast Guard will be discussed at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday at a meeting of the Potomac Chapter of the Coast Guard League in the Capital Yacht Club, 1020 Maine ave. s.w.

McCullough Named County Trial Justice

Robert W. McCullough, 52, of 4614 Addison Chapel rd., Beaver Heights, Md., has been appointed by Governor W. Preston Lane to be a trial justice of Prince Georges County.

McCullough

McCullough, an attorney, will replace Justice Arthur P. Owens, who is retiring August 31. The new appointee will serve for a four-year term.

A graduate of Havre de Grace (Md.) High School in 1916, McCullough received a degree from the dental school of George Washington University in 1919, then practiced dentistry in Washington while studying law at National University Law School.

He received his law degree in 1929, practiced law beginning in 1930. He is a member of the D. C., Maryland, and American Bar Associations.

A Democrat, he was campaign manager for Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.), in 1938. McCullough is married and has three sons.

Corbin Family's Difficulties Still Persist

The family affairs of Wilfred A. Corbin, Alexandria tavern keeper, were still far from satisfactory yesterday.

On August 14 he, his wife and their eight children were evicted from their home on E. Glebe rd., Alexandria, because they were behind in rent.

By Friday, Mrs. Corbin, who gave birth Tuesday to a ninth child, was in Alexandria Hospital while the eight other youngsters were to stay in Corbin's taproom in Alexandria.

By late Friday—with the aid of friends, relatives, the Alexandria Welfare Department and juvenile court—some progress had been made. The eight youngsters were farmed out temporarily.

Some of those plans went awry yesterday. Corbin's mother-in-law in Manassas, Va., called him to say she hadn't room to care for the Corbin's twins, 17-month-old George and Charles.

A brother-in-law in Charlottesville, Va., had offered the use of his eight-room house, but Corbin said he hasn't transportation there. What's more, he doubted that his wife could make the trip as yet.

Meantime, the Alexandria Community Chest is paying the hospital bill—about $100 for the five days Mrs. Corbin has been there.

Said Corbin yesterday: "I'm just about crazy. I haven't got the slightest idea where to go."

Robinson Resigns Times-Herald Post

The Times-Herald yesterday announced the resignation of H. A. (Happy) Robinson as director of circulation, and the appointment of Charles A. Corcoran, circulation manager, to succeed him.

Robinson was one of seven beneficiaries under the will of Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, late owner of the Times-Herald, to inherit the newspaper. At a luncheon of circulation employes at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday, General Manager William C. Shelton said Robinson will retain his association in an advisory capacity. Corcoran, 50, formerly a carrier boy, was appointed circulation manager in 1937.

Druggist's Invention Designed to Take the Burps Out of Bottle Feeding

D. C. Man Sells Store to Market New Baby Product

A new style nursing bottle designed to take the burps and colic out of bottle feeding has been developed by a Washington pharmacist.

The bottle that glassmakers said couldn't be built has an air vent near its base, sticking out like the capped top of a prescription bottle.

Its purpose, said Pharmacist Benjamin Nusbaum, is to prevent the vacuum locks which occur in ordinary bottle feeding. The locking makes babies fight for the milk, and swallow air in the process.

Nusbaum of 7801 13th st. nw., said he's certain he has the answer to infant feeding complaints. He has already sold his drugstore and begun a new Washington industry.

Incorporated with stockholder friends, he has opened up his own plant at 503-505 Rhode Island ave. ne. It is now being readied to finish and assemble some 40,000 bottles a week.

Nusbaum, 43, has operated his own drugstores in the District since the year following his graduation, in 1928, from Milton University in Baltimore. Last June 19, he sold his Alaska Avenue Pharmacy, which he operated since 1940, at 7806 Alaska ave. nw.

It was while running this drugstore that he got the idea for the new nursing bottle, he said. A woman customer asked him if he couldn't do something for her baby who cried for hours after each feeding. He drilled a hole near the base of an ordinary nursing bottle, and told her to try it out.

"She said it worked wonders," said the druggist. "But I never got her name. I'd like to see her again."

He said he experimented with the idea, trying to find some way to incorporate an air vent in a bottle, yet still have a leakproof product. His first idea was his best, he said, but glassmakers said it couldn't be done.

Nusbaum wanted a bottle built in one piece so that a screw-thread protruded from the side near the bottle's base. Discouraged by glassmakers, he set about on the attack. With plastic, he designed bottles with detachable bottoms, and an air vent which opened on a slight twist of the base. He patented them, but decided they wouldn't sell.

This spring, the druggist went back to Swindell Brothers, Inc., of Baltimore, bottlemakers, and talked over his original idea with their moldmaker. The craftsman said maybe it could be done. He tried, and failed.

Nusbaum got the report of the failure and hurried back to Baltimore. He offered to foot the bill for other trials, and the next mold worked. It produced the bottle of the ordered size and shape, with only the air vent capped with glass.

With one machine, his Rhode Island ave. plant has been turning out 240 bottles an hour. With five more machines to be installed this week, a crew of six cutters and other help to assemble nursing bottle units, he'll reach his 40,000 bottles-a-week goal.

Falls Church Manager Backs 17 Projects

671 Patients

Drunk Clinic Booms, More Staff Needed

The District's alcohol clinic, which opened last February to treat court-committed drunks, is doing such a thriving business it has had to expand its plant and now needs more staff.

In a six months report to the District Commissioners, Clinic Director Leopold E. Wexberg reported that 671 patients have made a total of 3690 visits to the clinic.

To take care of the load, the clinic has had to take over additional space at the Weightman School, 23d and M sts. nw. And though all 16 authorized staff positions are filled, four additional employes are needed, Wexberg said.

Wexberg was cautious in appraising results to date:

"It will take considerable time at this pace until our work will show sizable results," he said. "However, our limited experience . . . shows already that . . . we are on the right track."

The clinic was created by Congress to help chronic drunks that turn up time after time in drunk court.

This is how the clinic operates, Wexberg reported:

Twice a week a staff team goes to Municipal Court to screen suitable patients—those who indicate a desire to be helped. A list of recommendations is given the judge who may, at his discretion, commit the defendants to the clinic.

At the clinic they are given physical examinations and psychiatric treatment, occupational therapy to train them for a job and recreational therapy to give them a leisure-time interest in place of liquor. Patients live at home and go to the clinic a few hours a week for treatment.

The clinic also accepts volunteer patients, and so far these have far outnumbered court cases, Wexberg said. The court has sent 156. The other 515 were volunteers, including 127 who had previously attended a former District clinic.

Roy S. Braden, recently appointed city manager of Falls Church, has recommended 17 high-priority improvement projects to city council for early consideration.

Introducing a new procedure, Braden submitted the recommendations to council for study over the weekend before its meeting Monday.

A bond issue for storm sewers is "our greatest need," he told the council. And he urged new curbs and gutters, to be financed by bonds also.

Another primary need is a belt line highway, bypassing the city's crowded Washington st., which is Lee hwy. within the city limits. He called for cooperation between the county and state on this project.

Other civic needs he stressed include:

Civilian defense planning; codification of city ordinances, many of which will need to be revised and readopted; modernization and painting of the building, plumbing and electrical codes; encouragement of off-street parking facilities; standard specifications for road and street improvements to help "control subdivision expansion and protect the welfare of the city;" a retirement plan for city employes and a policy on annual and sick leave; more control of weed removal, stagnant pools and other health menaces; a stronger ordinance prohibiting developers from dropping dirt and debris on the streets; an ordinance controlling fireworks; up-to-date regulations for taxicabs in Falls Church, and monthly reports from elected officers to the council.

Braden also recommended that the council transfer $11,000 from its surplus fund to pay for unanticipated costs of the city's annexation suit. Falls Church lost the suit for 10.75 square miles of Fairfax land, but will appeal.

Area Woman's Pistol Death Held Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday in the death of Mrs. Grace Rodwell, 55, of 8907 2d ave., Silver Spring, Md., who was found shot to death about 8:30 a. m. in the bedroom of her home.

Police said she shot herself with a .25 caliber automatic Friday night, apparently around 10 p. m.

A son, William Vernon Moore, 24, told police he called his home about 10:30 p. m. Friday and received no answer. He said he returned home about 11 p. m., stopped in to see his mother but thought she was asleep.

About 8:30 a. m., he said, he again went to his mother's room and saw she was dead. He called his brother, Norman Byron Moore of 1405 Somerset pl. nw., who called police and a Silver Spring doctor. The doctor told police he had been treating Mrs. Rodwell for a nervous condition.

Man Killed, Woman Injured Seriously in Morning Falls

Early morning falls resulted in death for one man and serious injuries for a woman.

Fatally injured was Warren Gilchrist, 58, of 622 9th st. ne., who fell 2[illegible] feet from a second-floor bathroom window at his home about [illegible] a. m.

His wife told police she heard a loud thump and on investigation found her husband had fallen from the bathroom window. Gilchrist died a short time later at Casualty Hospital.

A certificate of accidental death was issued by Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy coroner.

Mrs. Virginia Arnold, 29, of 1232 9th st. nw., is in serious condition at Emergency Hospital after falling 20 feet at the 9th st. address into a 5-foot-square air shaft.

Police said Mrs. Arnold was putting some trash in a container on a roof leading from the second-floor window when she lost her balance and fell.

R. E. Olds, Automobile Pioneer, Dies

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 26 (AP).—R. E. Olds, 86-year-old automotive pioneer who developed the "merry Oldsmobile" and later the Reo motor car died today of the complications of old age.

Mr. Olds

Mr. Olds, one of the fathers of the automotive industry, had survived two recent illnesses and was stricken again July 30 upon his return from his summer home at Charlevoix, Mich.

His physician of many years, Dr. Dorothy Dart, said he put up "a game fight until yesterday when he sank into a coma.

Mr. Olds' place in the story of the automobile is alongside that of the Duryea brothers the Appersons, Ford, Haynes and others of the group who created the motor industry.

Mr. Olds was called "The Schoolmaster of Motordom" and "The Father of the Popular-priced Car."

He built his first self-propelled vehicle in the late '80s. In 1896 he formed the Olds Motor Vehicle Co., now the Oldsmobile division of General Motors. Later he organized the Reo Motor Car Co.

He was head of Reo from 1907 to 1924, when he sought retirement. Late in 1933, however, internal disturbances in Reo brought him back into control for a time. He retired finally in 1937. He was 73 years old at the time and explained he wanted a chance to enjoy a "real vacation."

Max W. Stern, Former D. C. Newsman, Dies

Echo Lake, Calif., Aug. 26 (U.P.).—Max W. Stern, 66, former Scripps-Howard reporter and political and editorial writer and a widely-known public relations executive, died here today.

The Sterns were on a vacation when he became ill.

For the past six years Mr. Stern has been in charge of public relations for the Central Valley project. Prior to that he was director of the Social Security Board's information service.

Mr. Stern began his newspaper career in 1910 with the San Francisco News, and for eight years was a reporter and writer for the Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance at Washington.

He is survived by his wife, the former Beatrice Marks; a brother and three sisters.

Oliver Taylor, Parks Service Official, Dies

Oliver G. Taylor, 66, chief of Public Services of the National Park Service, died yesterday of a heart attack at his home, 6313 Georgia ave., Chevy Chase, Md.

Mr. Taylor

Mr. Taylor, was chief engineer of the National Park Service, 1937-43, and 1944-45. In 1944 he was regional director of the Services' Region One, headquarters in Richmond, Va. He was made Chief of Public Services in 1945.

Mr. Taylor joined the Geological Survey Office in 1909, returning to the Survey office in 1919 after World War I service as a captain.

In 1920 he was named resident engineer in Yosemite National Park, Calif.

Mr. Taylor was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, Cosmos Club, American Planning and Civic Association and Friends of the Land.

In addition to his widow, Mrs. Marjorie MacDougall Taylor, Mr. Taylor is survived by a brother, Lee Taylor, of Lebanon, Ind.

Funeral services have not yet been announced.

Widow Named Co-respondent In Divorce Case

Mrs. [illegible] shot a husband, Gaylord, [illegible] alimony and their [illegible] a student at Eastern High School.

The suit describes Gaylord as operator of a radio store, at 2914 Nich[illegible] ave. se., and charges that he deserted Mrs. Gaylord on March 7. The Gaylords were married in New York City in 1932.

Mrs. Foy, who lives at 1816 22d st. [illegible] has recovered from the wound inflicted by her husband Claude O. Foy, 42, last April. After shooting his wife, Foy, a Navy Gun Factory machinist, fired a bullet into his own head. Miraculously, both recovered. Foy ended his life on July 31 by jumping from the Calvert st. bridge. He left a note indicating that the domestic troubles which precipitated the shooting had continued.

The portion of the suit naming Foy as correspondent specifies dates of August 19 and 21. The suit also names a "Jane Doe" co-respondent under dates of May 29, 30 and 31.

Mrs. Foy has two children, Betty, 11, and Robert, 13.

Junior Trade Body Plans Trees Project

Petersburg, Va., Aug. 26 (AP).—The Virginia State Junior Chamber of Commerce today set a goal of planting 400,000 tree seedlings in 1951 as an expansion of a project started this year.

The group's board of directors adopted the plan presented by Vice President Shields Parsons of Norfolk and set a goal of 10,000 seedlings for each of the State's 42 Jaycee organizations.

During the past year, 17 Virginia chapters made possible the planting of 268,000 seedlings in the State. In addition, 12 other states adopted the project and planted more than four million seedlings in the nation.

Robert N. Hoskins, state chairman of agriculture and forestry, outlined the program at the Jaycees' quarterly work conference here. He pointed out that Virginia has 400,000 acres of land in need of planting and emphasized the importance of the project as a "tangible contribution" to the state forestry program.

The conference will close Sunday with a board meeting and a forum at which the principal speakers will be John H. Tample of Petersburg, and Hall Snellings of Portsmouth.

Winners of various awards were announced tonight during the social function. They included:

Best single project, internal—Class B: Virginia Beach, first, handling of State convention; Williamsburg, second, handicapped softball tournament; Virginia Beach, third, installation banquet. Class A: Roanoke, first membership program; Danville, second, installation banquet; Arlington, third, membership drive.

Major Lakin Removed to Walter Reed

Major James T. Lakin, who emptied five slugs from a German [illegible]-gun into his left shoulder last Friday, was reported in "[illegible]termined" condition last night at Walter Reed General Hospital.

The 38-year-old Army Congressional liaison officer, who lives at 818 Florida St., Arlington, was apparently improved earlier in the day to be transferred from Arlington Hospital to the Army Medical Center.

Arlington police said the major was depressed over financial troubles and the possibility of war with Russia.

Man Who Wasn't There Turns Out to Be

Newport News, Va., Aug. 26 (AP). A visitor who stumbled into police headquarters today apparently just wanted to make sure he was the man who wasn't there—but he was.

"Have you got a Connie Williams locked up here?" the befuddled man asked Desk Sergt. Joe Farry. Farry thumbed through his book and then peered more closely at the man.

"No Williams in jail," he said and then turned to his assistant and told him to put the inquirer under arrest for drunkenness.

"And what's your name," Farry asked the arrested man as he prepared to enter the record in his book.

"Connie Williams," was the reply.

Contractor Slain In Richmond

Richmond, Va., Aug. 26 (AP).—A Richmond general contractor was shot and killed a few steps from his office shortly after noon today.

The dead man was identified as D. W. Stoup. His age and home address were not immediately available.

Two men, whose names were not divulged by police, were arrested. Police said one would be charged with murder.

Building Spree Boosts Number Of D. C. Architects

Wartime population shifts and the "terrific amount of building" in Greater Washington has swelled the architect population here by 60 per cent within the past 10 years.

Thomas H. Locraft, secretary-treasurer of the Board of Examiners and Registrars of Architects, yesterday attributed the increase from 267 registered architects in 1940 to 445 to 445 in 1950 mainly to these factors.

The 1950 total was included in the annual report of the board to the District Commissioners, released for publication yesterday.

Blaze Burns Fireman Lying in Bed

Arlington County firemen, responding to an early morning call yesterday at 622 S. 26th st., Arlington, discovered one of the County's paid firemen, overcome by smoke, on a burning mattress at his home.

The fireman, Edward Kay, 38, was treated at Arlington Hospital for second degree burns of the right foot. He was later held in Arlington jail for mental observation, after the hospital released him, according to jail authorities.

Acting Fire Chief Joseph Clements said Kay has been on "temporary leave" from the department due to illness for the past 60 days, but has remained on the County payroll.

County Court Judge Hugh Reid said Kay was held in jail on a similar mental observation charge from August 17 through the 23d. He entered custody voluntarily, Judge Reid said, and was released Wednesday after he agreed to further treatment at the Arlington alcoholic clinic.

Although there has been twice as many cases of poliomyelitis reported in Washington this year as last, the Health Department yesterday gave reassurance that the disease is on the decline.

Officials said the higher number of cases this year is "not an indication that poliomyelitis prevalence this year will be twice that of last.

"In 1944," the department stated, "when the number of cases reported was greater than in any previous or subsequent year, 79 cases had been reported by the 34th week, as compared to 85 this year.

"The disease did not appear until late in July of 1944, increased rapidly and the peak was reached late in August. This year the peak was reached early in August. In 1944, six deaths had occurred by the thirty-fourth week, as compared to one death so far this year."

The department reported 2 paralytic cases, 7 nonparalytic cases and 10 nonresident cases hospitalized for the week just ended, as compared with a total of seven cases for the same week of 1949.

Needle, Door Equal One Home Accident

A sewing needle and a refrigerator door teamed up to produce one of the District's oddest home accidents of last week.

The freak accident occurred when a lady dropped the needle while sewing, and couldn't locate it. It had caught in her housecoat, and was later driven into her knee when she opened the refrigerator door.

It was on of 80 accidents recorded by the District Red Cross Accident Prevention Service among District residents last week. The number included two home fatalities from falls, and one infant suffocation.

Breakdown of the injuries listed 35 falls, eight burns, two accidental poisonings, five foreign bodies and eight cuts. The 22 other injuries were grouped under miscellaneous.

One 5-year-old youngster swallowed a zipper top; two children stuffed small toys in their nostrils. A girl of 10 walked into a lighted cigarette, burning her eye. Two tots drank unknown quantities of camphorated oil and a strong disinfectant.

Last week's home accidents, the Red Cross service reported, brought District home injuries to date to 4162, two more than those recorded for the same period last year. Fatalities from such accidents to date this year totaled 124, the 160 for the same period of 1949.

220 Strayer Graduates Hear Dr. Alexander

Dr. William H. Alexander, Oklahoma City's "flying parson" and Republican nominee for the Senate, addressed the graduating class of Strayer Business College at the Statler Hotel yesterday.

Degrees were presented to 220 graduates by Edmond S. Donoho, president of the college.

The Rev. David A. Rowand, of National City Christian Church, pronounced invocation and benediction.

Va. Politicians Eye Run-Off Vote System

Richmond, Va., Aug. 26 (AP).—Virginia Democratic politicians appeared today to be paying more than passing interest to the possible adoption of the run-off system of primary elections for nominating a Governor.

This apparently is prompted by the fact that potential candidates already are stacking up with the next gubernatorial primary still three years away. And there is a strong feeling current at the seat of the State government here in Capitol Square that three—possibly four—of the candidacies are more actual than potential.

The reason for the interest in the run-off system—in which a second election is held between the two top men if no one gets a clear majority in the original primary—springs from the probability of three or more candidates fighting for the nomination in August of 1953.

It's not just the fact that more than one man probably will want the job—that's why primaries are necessary in the first place. It's, rather, that two or more members of the dominant conservative wing might stalemate themselves against one another while a strong opposition faction candidate walks away with the nomination.

With this in mind, one of the leaders of the dominant faction of the party said he believed it was time to give some thought to adopting the runoff system "or else the opposition may capture the State."

Representative Thomas P. Stanley of the Fifth Congressional District is represented by a number of his friends as almost a sure runner in 1953. Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond jr., who resigned a seat in Congress to accept the job as attorney general, is a name also frequently mentioned. State Senator Charles Fenwick of Arlington and Lieutenant Governor L. Preston Collins are reported in the "receptive" class. And from the anti-organization faction comes the quiet word that delegate Robert Whitehead may carry the banner that Miller waved when he rode against Battle.

Handicapped Will Convene At Statler Hotel on Monday

The American Federation of the Physically Handicapped will convene at the Statler Hotel Monday through Wednesday. The National Exchange Club will hold a convention there Thursday through Saturday.

On the program for the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped is a speech Wednesday at 9 a. m. by Ralph Wright, Assistant Secretary of Labor, on "Labor Standards for the Handicapped."

Highlighting the National Exchange Club's activities will be a reception and ball Friday starting at 9 p. m.

The AFPH National Council will meet Sunday at 1:30 p. m. to map convention plans. Monday at 9:30 a. m. Radford Mobley, president of the National Press Club, will welcome delegates. Other speakers Monday will include Thornton W. Owen, president of the Board of Trade, and Paul A. Strachan, national president of the AFPH.

A panel discussion on "Jobs For Handicapped" will be held at 9 a. m. Tuesday. Reuben D. Silverson, director of the department of manufacturers, United States Chamber of Commerce, will discuss "The Role of the Physician in Total Rehabilitation of the Handicapped Patient" at 1:30 p. m.

A second panel will trade views on "Education of the Handicapped" Tuesday following Silverson's speech. Col. Robert S. Allen will be toastmaster at a banquet at 7:30 p. m.

In addition to Wright's talk Wednesday morning, delegates will hear a panel discuss "How to Increase AFPH Membership." Committee reports and speeches by AFPH national officers will precede adjournment at 6 p. m.

Attendance at the National Exchange Club convention is expected to top 1500. Banquets are scheduled Saturday and Sunday at 7 p. m., and luncheons Sunday and Monday at noon.

Other conventions scheduled this week are:

101st Airborne Division, Washington Hotel, 15th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., Friday and Saturday; American Amateur Press Association, Wilard Hotel, 14th and F sts. nw., Saturday and Sunday; American Contract Bridge League Middle Atlantic Regional Tournament, Shoreham Hotel, 2500 Calvert st. nw., Friday through Sunday; Company L, 301st Infantry Division, Carlyle Hotel, 500 N. Capital st., Friday through Sunday; and 9th Seabees Reunion, Ambassador Hotel, 1412 K st. nw., Saturday and Sunday.

"Grandfather" is getting better and better all the time!

The "grandfather" of all musical instruments is the drum. There is plenty of evidence that prehistoric man beat out a crude rhythm for his ceremonial gyrations on the same sort of hollow log, covered with an animal skin, that primitive tribes use today. Even lower forms of life . . . notably grouse . . . "dance" to drum-beats.

This being the case, you'd think that everybody would be familiar with the "music" of drums. Yet it is a shocking fact that until recently a person could not truly appreciate the deep beauty of modern percussion instruments unless he had heard a great symphony orchestra in person.

For until the discovery of the new process of recording, used by today's superb long playing records, completely faithful reproduction of the deep, resonant "music" of drums was impossible. Mostly, they sounded like a blurred boom.

Now, however, on these new records, every tiny detail of tone and rhythm, every delicate shade of feeling, is being reproduced with faultless fidelity. Of course, to enjoy them to the utmost you must have a modern phonograph, with ample speaker capacity.

So it would seem that now is the time to take stock of your musical reproducing instruments. Listen to your present phonograph critically. Go over your record library . . . and then bring your favorites in to hear them played on a modern machine. Hear how much more beautifully these same selections have been recorded on the new long-playing records.

I'll promise that you have many agreeable surprises in store. You'll say that even the music of "grandfather" drum is getting better and better, now that you can actually distinguish it!

Transfer Of Pupils Called Off

The Arlington School Board yesterday bowed reluctantly to the demands of 45 parents who had objected to transferring their children from Yorktown to John Marshall School.

The board agreed to let the 80 children involved remain at Yorktown, despite predictions by Superintendent William A. Early that the school will be overcrowded.

As the parents remained adamant in opposing the change, Early said Yorktown may be forced to accommodate 36 to 40 children in each classroom.

Warren Clardy, 6309 N. 26th st., and spokesman for the parents, told the school board: "I want to make a pledge to you that we do want to show our gratitude when the school bond issue comes up. We've learned how to get organized."

In order to let the 80 children attend Yorktown, the school board switched another 45 pupils, originally scheduled to go to Yorktown, over to John Marshall. The 45 are nearer to Marshall than the 80, who would have required bus transportation to reach the school.

American University last night announced it would inaugurate an accelerated program next month to permit students to obtain a bachelors degree in 2½ calendar years.

The plan is part of an emergency policy to enable men of draft age to complete as much college training as possible before entering the service.

Paul F. Douglass, president, announced the speedup will start September 25 in the College of Arts and Sciences. Students will study continuously throughout the year, carrying 19 hours in each of two fall and spring sessions, 16 in two summer programs and 18 in the third fall session.

In addition, students who are unable to complete the full course may qualify for the associate in arts or the associate in science—the equivalent of two years of the usual college study. Under the accelerated program, the associate course may be finished in a year of fulltime continuous study, Douglass said.

In cases where a student is called up before the end of a session, he may take an examination covering the completed part of the course, receive a grade on such completed part and receive a tuition refund for the uncompleted part, the university announced.

Upon return, after military duty, the student "may audit the course as a refresher experience without the additional payment of fee, enroll for credit" by paying for the uncompleted part.

Youth Group Adjourns Session Here

Seventy-five bright-eyed youngsters attending a two-day meeting here to plan for December's White House Conference on Children and Youth, adjourned their session yesterday afternoon.

But first they took a few preliminary whacks at solving some social problems, civil rights and prejudice topping the list.

The young conferees passed a resolution urging the White House conference to "take positive action to eliminate the cause of discrimination and to foster an aggressive program of civil rights."

The resolution said the youngsters "are embarrassed to have to take the responsibility of action concerning discrimination." It further asserted that the "deplorable situation. . . . has made perpetually for the unhealthy development of youth and adult alike."

On the subject of adults, the group decided that family prayer and discussion are "helpful."

Adults, they concluded, should realize that youngsters can do certain jobs better than their elders.

There is a need for better understanding between adults and youths, but youth can "concede" more in bringing the condition about.

Prejudice can be broken down, they believe. The Golden Rule can be and should be followed.

Officially known as the Advisory Council on Youth's Participation in the White House Conference, the youngsters represent some 30 national organizations. They will return in December with 175 additional representatives of national organizations, plus—they hope—about 150 unaffiliated "delegates."

Naval Academy Plans Open House

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 26 (AP).—Over 400 families from all parts of the country are expected to attend the Labor Day weekend "open house program" at the Naval Academy, the Navy announced today.

The program has been arranged to acquaint families of plebes (freshman) with the Academy. This will be the first time that families of Plebes, exclusively, have been invited to the Academy.

The plebes, rarely granted liberty, will be swamped with it over this holiday. They will be able to dine with their families on Saturday evening, Sunday evening and at noon Monday.

In return, Cooke received from Turner a key to Washington, and kits containing information about the city's history. He also got a penny—the old superstition that if one gives something sharp as a present, one must take a penny to prevent "cutting a friendship."

The Andrews Air Force Base Band played a half hour concert before the presentation, and then sounded "God Save the King" and the Star Spangled Banner."

The presentation was made as part of a tour of 25 British Air Training Corps cadets in this country under the sponsorship of the Civil Air Patrol. The cadets have visited Fort Worth, Dallas, Detroit and New York. They entrain today for Britain.

At Madison and Jefferson junior high schools, 8th and 9th graders will register at 9 a. m. August 31 and seventh graders and new students at 10 a. m.

At Swanson Junior High School, ninth graders will register at 9 a. m. and 7th and 8th graders at 9:30 a. m. on August 31. New students will register at 10 a. m.

Stratford Junior High School registration will be held at Washington-Lee High August 31, with seventh graders registering at 1 p. m., eighth graders at 2 p. m and ninth graders and new students at 3 p. m.

Junior and senior high school students at the Hoffman-Boston School for Negroes will register from 9 a. m. to 12 noon on August 31.

Prince Georges Sept. 11

In Fairfax County, principals in each school are responsible for setting each registration date in the county's 37 public schools.

In Prince Georges County, schools will open September 11 and new pupils will register September 1 from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. Parents entering first-grade children are asked to bring birth and doctors certificates showing immunization against smallpox and diphtheria.

In Montgomery County, September 11 also is opening date. New students will enroll during the afternoon of September 7 and morning of September 8 at their respective schools. The county expects to have eight new schools completed before the start of school, and it is estimated the new construction will absorb the 4000 overflow of new pupils.

J. R. Stringfellow, Guardian of 8 Presidents, To Retire From Secret Service Post at 70

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

James B. Stringfellow, a big, affable man of 70, who has guarded eight Presidents of the United States, is retiring this week.

At the White House, the younger Secret Service operatives call him "Mr. Jim." This seems partly because of his age, and partly because of something else.

In recent years, Stringfellow's job has been to talk to men and women—some just neighborly, some unbalanced—who call at the White House and "want to see the President." It is a delicate job, naturally, and one that calls for certain qualities; above all, understanding and charity. "Mr. Jim" has them, as did his predecessor, the late and beloved Jimmy Sloan.

When Stringfellow walks out of the White House gates on Thursday, it will mark the end of a career that was supposed to have ended almost a generation ago. In 1922, he was retired from the Metropolitan Police Department as a hopeless cripple, having injured himself in chasing a thief. Two years later, back on his feet thanks to an operation, he joined the United States Secret Service and started out anew.

Paced Taft on Bicycle.

In his cubbyhole of an office the other day, Stringfellow talked of his experiences as a cop and Secret Service agent. He told of pacing William Howard Taft on a bicycle as Taft rode through Rock Creek Park in a horse-drawn victoria; of wordless, early-morning strolls with "Silent Cal" Coolidge, and of guarding such foreign notables as Lord Balfour and Winston Churchill.

Stringfellow had an experience as a youngster of 21 that was calculated to fill him with extra zeal when the time came for him to guard Presidents. The date was September 16, 1901, and the scene was the old railroad depot at 6th and Pennsylvania ave., nw., now the site of the National Gallery of Art.

He had gone to the depot to return to his home in Culpeper County, Va., when he was attracted by one of the saddest spectacles in American history—the state funeral for President William McKinley, who had been shot by an assassins in Buffalo, N. Y., 11 days earlier. It all made a deep impression on him: the great mourning throngs along Pennsylvania ave., some singing "Nearer, My God to Thee"; the cortege, and the clanging of sabers as cavalrymen saluted the martyred President.

At that time, Stringfellow had been working for four months as an attendant at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. He returned there in 1902, and in 1905 won his diploma as a graduate nurse. One night, while he was reading in a ward, an insane sailor named Svimer attacked him, grabbing him from behind and clawing at his face and eyes. He recalls that, from that moment on, the sailor began to improve, and in six months was discharged.

Washington then, needless to say, was a much different and a much smaller city than it is now. Greater Washington—the city and its environs—had about 380,000 population, compared to a population now of more than 1,450,000.

Joined Police Department

Stringfellow gave up his job at St. Elizabeths and joined the Police Department here on December 12, 1905. He served for a couple of months in the Tenth Precinct, and then was assigned to the Third Precinct, embracing Foggy Bottom and the White House.

In those days there was no such thing as a White House police force, and it was the custom to detail men from the Third Precinct to guard the Mansion.

Stringfellow drew the White House assignment, first, in the administration of President Theodore Roosevelt. By the time Taft moved in, he was a bicycle policeman. His job around Foggy Bottom included the handling of traffic and enforcement of the speed law—at that time, as he recalls, 12 miles an hour. There weren't many violations, automobiles being both scarce and slow.

Occasionally, Stringfellow was detailed to guard President Taft on his drives through Rock Creek Park. Taft was to be the first President to use an automobile, but at this time he still was riding in a two-horse victoria, with a coachman and footman. Stringfellow and another policeman, mounted on their bikes, would follow the carriage out 16th st., into the park, and then back to the White House.

Did he have trouble keeping up?

"Well," he says, "it was quite a push up the hills, but we kept up, all right."

Stringfellow solved two murders while he was attached to the Third Precinct, and began winning commendations that were to grow to a total of 22 before he left the force. One of the murder cases had a strange denouement.

The victim was a Chinese laundryman, and, as so often happens, Stringfellow got a tip that put him on the trail of the killers while working on a entirely different case. One of them, it turned out, was a bootblack who appeared every day at the Seventh Precinct Station in Georgetown, at roll-call time, and shined the shoes of policemen.

In 1914, after three years as a precinct detective, Stringfellow was assigned to the Detective Bureau and made a detective sergeant. He figured in some of the outstanding cases of that time, including the capture of Joseph Luzon, known as the "million-dollar jimmy thief," who specialized in apartment-house robberies.

Stringfellow, even as a headquarters man, never got altogether away from the White House. He was assigned, from time to time, to guard President Wilson, usually when Wilson went to church on Sunday or attended a vaudeville show at Keith's.

In World War I, Lord Balfour came to Washington in connection with a loan for the British government. Stringfellow was assigned to guard him at the Breckenridge Long home on 16th st. His partner was Detective Sergt. Jimmy Armstrong, who later was killed by the notorious John McHenry. Balfour, just before returning to England, gave Stringfellow and Armstrong each a set of cuff links. They were from Tiffany's and bore the inscription AJB—1917.

Guarded Harding

Stringfellow also was assigned to guard President Harding in his brief sojourn in the White House. In 1921 Harding attended a ceremony of the Ancient Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine in the old Poli's Theater. Stringfellow, also a Shriner, sat in a box with him.

About this time, Stringfellow's health was giving him much concern. Years before, he and Detective W. O. Embry had caught up with a much-wanted thief named Rufus Speaks. They followed him into a saloon, but Speaks, recognizing them, started running, and dashed into a motorcycle shop. Stringfellow, a noted runner in those days, went after him, but tripped over a motorcycle.

Stringfellow got the fugitive. Later, however, it was found that his leg had been yanked away from the pelvis, with resultant damage to the spine. He underwent several operations, but on October 15, 1922, he was retired for physical disability.

He was stooped over and walked with a decided list, and it was believed that he was washed up so far as further work was concerned.

Dr. John Allen Talbot, well-known surgeon, operated on him later, and Stringfellow gives him credit for his second career with the Secret Service.

He joined this famous organization in 1924, and was assigned to the "midnight watch" at the White House. Actually, he worked from 11:30 p. m. to 7:30 a. m., his post being the usher's room in the mansion.

On his first morning, President Coolidge appeared at 6:30 o'clock, prepared for a walk. It was Stringfellow's job to go with him.

"I greeted him, and he greeted me," Stringfellow says. "When we got over to Lafayette Park, Mr. Coolidge stopped to look at a tree. I thought I ought to introduce myself, so I said, 'Mr. President, I'm Jim Stringfellow.' He said, 'I'm glad to meet you.'

"We walked up 16th st. to Scott Circle, out Massachusetts ave. to Dupont Circle, then back down Connecticut ave. to the White House. I guess the walk lasted about three-quarters of an hour. Mr. Coolidge never said another word."

Stringfellow took many walks with President Coolidge, but not alongside him. Col. Ed Starling, a great favorite with Coolidge, would walk with him, and Stringfellow would follow behind.

President Hoover, who came next, used to like to go to a camp he set up along the Rapidan in Virginia. Stringfellow accompanied him on these trips, and took the midnight shift in guarding the presidential cabin.

In the next aministration, on a trip to San Francisco with Presdient Franklin D. Roosevelt, Stringfellow telephoned to Mr. Hoover, and got an invitation to visit Palo Alto. He and Charlie Fredericks went there. Mr. Hoover offered them cigars, and said to Stringfellow:

"Are you still on the midnight shift?"

Stringfellow said he was, and Hoover remarked that he didn't know how he'd stood it so long.

In 1939 Stringfellow was transferred to the Secret Service field office at the Treasury Department, and remained there for five years. In May, 1945, a month after President Truman took the oath of office, he was sent back to the White House.

Jimmy Sloan, who had been interviewing the people who wanted to see the President, had resigned. Stringfellow now took over the job.

The big fellow, looking back, thinks that his experience as a nurse at St. Elizabeth's has been of great help to him in dealing with uninvited callers.

As he prepares to retire, Stringfellow is thinking about a trip to Florida this winter. He is also thinking about putting up a house on the 56 acres he owns in Culpeper County, Va. For the time being, he and Mrs. Stringfellow will remain in their home, 18 Bryant st. nw.

They have two children, Richard H. Stringfellow and Mrs. Dorothy M. Broders of this city, and two grandchildren.

"Mr. Jim" is prominent in Masonic circles here. He became a Mason in 1908, was made Worshipful Master of Hiram Lodge No. 10 in 1918, and was Grand Commandery of the Knights Templar of the District of Columbia in 1944–45.

The thing that has given him most pleasure in life, he says, has been making friends—even with men he has arrested.

GI Good Samaritan Poorer But Wiser

Corpl. Charles J. Johnson, 29, of Fort Belvoir was out $45 yesterday but much wiser in the ways of the world.

Johnson was discharged from the Army Thursday and reenlisted the following day for overseas duty. He had $300 discharge pay in his pocket at 9 p. m. Friday as he stood at the corner of 5th and G sts. nw.

He was approached by a man later identified as Jack Litton, 28, of 1003 23d st. nw. Litton pleaded for a quarter, declaring he was broke and that he and his wife, Evelyn, 29, who stood a short distance away, were hungry.

"Why, I'll buy you a meal," offered Johnson.

The soldier took Litton and his pregnant wife to a nearby restaurant, looked on happily as they dined, and then paid a $5 check.

Mrs. Litton mentioned that their daughter, seven, was at home and that she was hungry, too.

The soldier decided to remedy that, too. He went to a store and bought groceries and a fifth of whisky, paid $15 and accompanied the Littons to the house on 23d st. st.

Johnson told police that while Mrs. Litton prepared a meal for the child he consumed some of the whisky. At about 3 a. m. he fell asleep on a couch. When the soldier awakened an hour later the Littons were gone. So was his money.

Meanwhile, according to police, the Littons and their daughter had gone to a Washington hotel and tried unsuccessfully to obtain a room. Mrs. Litton told police her husband then handed her $250 and told her to go to her mother's house, 404 2d st. nw. Litton returned to the house on 23d st.

He found an irate Good Samaritan awaiting him. A fight developed and neighbors called police. When Detective Sergts. Paul H. Clarke and Edwin B. Crandall of the robbery squad arrived they found Johnson sitting on top of Litton.

The detectives said Litton denied he had robbed the soldier and attempted to shift the blame to his wife. However, the wife said she knew nothing of a robbery, only that her husband had given her $250. She was released. Johnson got $255 back and Litton was charged with robbery.

Arraigned later in Municipal Court before Judge George D. Neilson, Litton was held in $1000 bond for action of the grand jury.

D. C. Residents Spend Most For Insurance

District residents, whose per capita income was tops in the Nation last year, also spent the most for insurance.

In his annual report to the Commissioners, District Superintendent of Insurance Albert F. Jordan reported that more insurance is in force per family here than in any State.

The amount of life insurance held by District residents is enough to insure everyone of the 792,234 residents for $2100, Jordan reported. That figures out to a total value of more than $1.6 billions.

The insurance business has grown "tremendously" here in recent years and last year was the biggest ever, Jordan reported. In the fiscal year that ended June 30 his office collected $1,801,488 in taxes, license fees and penalties.

Nearly $1.7 millions of this amount consisted of taxes paid at the rate of two percent of premiums paid on insurance policies in force here. At that rate the insurance companies collected more than $84.5 millions in premium payments from District residents during fiscal 1949.

There are 5700 licenses to do business in the District were issued last year to insurance companies

Strasburg Couple Marks Golden Anniversary

A church-born romance between a minister and his church organist will culminate today in a Golden Wedding celebration for Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Carey of Toms Brook, near Strasburg, Va.

Although August 25, 1900, actually was the date of their marriage in the far-off past, the couple will celebrate today instead of last Friday so that more of their family can attend.

The family includes four sons, 12 grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren.

Carey is 81 and Mrs. Carey "admits to being over 50."

For many years, the Careys lived in the 6900 block of Georgia ave. nw. and still own a home there. But four years ago they got a yen for the soil, and purchased a small Virginia farm.

Their principal interests: gardening and caring for their cattle, a flock of sheep and some chickens. In addition, Carey, who retired some years ago after nearly a lifetime as an elder in the Seventh-day Adventist Church, is active in the nearby Adventist Church in Strasburg.

Brought up in Ohio, Carey later attended college in Bering Springs, Mich., was ordained into the ministry and began preaching in Ohio and Kentuckey. It was in the latter state that he met his future wife, then Alma Jones, who was engaged to play the organ at his services.

Their four sons are: W. Lenord Carey of Maurertown, Va.; Edward A. Carey of Louisville, Ky.; John B. Carey of Spartanburg, S.C. and William R. Carey of Tokoma Park, Md.

All Must Do Duty in Crisis, Lawyers Told

The United States is in such a position in international affairs today that "if any one fails to do his duty, we may fail totally" according to Miss Catherine Falvey, associate general counsel, National Resources Board.

Speaking before a regional meeting of the National Association of Women Lawyers at the Dupont Plaza Hotel yesterday noon, Miss Falvey suggested that women lawyers do what they can to see that all people are used to their greatest capacity in whatever fighting we have to do. Germany managed to compete with much larger countries, by making use of the abilities of every person, she pointed out.

Mrs. Dorothy Davis, 28-year-old mayor-elect of Washington, Va., who will take office with an all-woman council Friday, also spoke. She stressed that the home no longer stops at the front door, and that women who want to protect their children's environment must see that conditions outside the house are as they should be.

She and her councilwomen did not run for office because they wanted to help women up another rung in the political ladder, Mrs. Davis said. "Civic interest compelled us to act."

Announcement was made that the national convention at the Carlton Hotel September 15-17 will be addressed by Federal Communications Commissioner Frieda Hennock, John Steelman, assistant to the President; Attorney General J. Howard McGrath and Judges Burnita Shelton Matthews, Harold Stephens and Edward M. Curran.

Experts Convinced Reds Don't Want General War

By James E. Warner
NYHT News Service

IT IS the considered opinion of some of the top military and civilian experts here that Russia does not want a general war now—despite constantly expressed fears that a new Korean "incident" may break out at any time in a new area.

These authorities, who have access to information denied public and press, have expressed this view in separate private conversations over the past fortnight. They do not discount the seriousness of the present situation, or the need for maintaining strong United States and western strength and increasing it; but they are optimistic to the extent that they do not believe the Kremlin wants to commit directly the Red army or other Red forces at this time.

The basic reason for this guarded optimism on the world outlook appears to be that Russia has just about run out of places where an incident can be created without directly involving Russian forces, which might precipitate general war.

A subsidiary reason, expressed by one expert, is that the Russian leaders in the Kremlin are "frightened men with blood on their hands in a big way"—men frightened of what might happen to them if the deep and pent-up bitterness against them in Russia and her satellites ever gets out of bounds. A general war might release this dangerous internal force, and may be one of the deterrents to the Kremlin.

In the opinion of one of the experts, Russia has been consistently "unsubtle and stupid" in advance assessment of western reaction. He cited the Berlin blockade and the resulting airlift which gave the west a victory, and the swift United States and U. N. reaction with force to the Korean aggression.

Another reported that the fear of general war, somewhat paradoxically, has lessened in western Europe since Korea, because the Korean campaign, despite early reverses, has shown the western world that the United States can, and will, fight. This authority cited Turkey as an example of a nation where the will to fight has been strengthened greatly by the prompt United States intervention in Korea.

China, of course, is the big question mark, but the experts are in agreement that Mao Tse-tung, leader of the regime, is not in the pocket of the Kremlin quite so much as is generally believed. Mao is an Asiatic leader in his own right, who cannot be ordered to do things by Stalin; the Russians must negotiate with him rather than order him about as they do other satellite chiefs.

Chinese Communists will not invade Formosa, according to this reasoning, unless Mao is convinced that (1) he has a very good chance of success, and (2) there is something in it for him and his followers.

(On the first point, General MacArthur reportedly has told Washington that the Seventh Fleet, plus airpower and such material assistance—no troops—as we give Chiang, can assure the defeat of any Communist assault).

North Korea wa[s] the only satellite nation with which R[ussia] did not have a mutual assistance [defense" treaty. This enables Russia, wh[ile] undoubtedly the instigator of the att[ack], to pull out without losing face. In othe[r] satellites, Russia would be committed by tre[aty] to assist in any fighting, and if she h[eld] back, her position would be weakene[d] throughout her satellite empire.

There is no pup[pet] army worthy of the name in northern [Iran, and Red troops probably would ha[ve] to show their hand openly if an "in[ci]dent" occurred there. Likewise, it would [be] extremely difficult to maintain even [the] fiction of a Russian "hands off" policy [if] the outbreak occurred in the Balkans or e[ast]ern Germany, according to these evalu[at]ions.

If Russia foments [another "incident," she] will be much more careful, in the opinion of these experts, a[nd] must be assured of a complete and quick victory before U. N. or other outside aid c[an] be rushed to the victim of Communist [aggression. The Kremlin had hoped to d[o] this in Korea, using the puppet troops [and] was considerably jarred when she w[as] unable to do so.

All the experts [acknowledge. They say this is the best evaluatio[n] of what they believe the Kremlin is th[ink]ing as of now. They agree with the "fa[mous last words" saying of Charles E. "Ch[ip]" Bohlen, one of the State Department's top Russian experts. There are two set of famous last words, according to Bohle[n]:

One is, "Liquor [doesn't affect me"; the other is, "I under[stand the Russians."

Although informed experts here are optimistic, this is how two newspaper cartoonists, a continent apart, regard Russia's intentions, as expressed by the Kremlin's Jacob Malik in his actions and utterances as president of the U. N. Security Council this month. Left, Russell of the Los Angeles Times quotes Malik: "Russia had no hand in Korea." At right, "Pincer," by Fischetti, in the New York Herald Tribune

Schizophrenia Torturing Congress

GALLERY GLIMPSES

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

THE present dim shadowland between war and peace is producing a completely new if somewhat schizophrenic chapter in legislative history.

Some day it may be grist for the archivists, but now it clearly is a case study in split personalities, torn between the exigencies of war and the political expediencies of peace.

Pennsylvania's Bob Rich didn't know how right he was when he said that what Congress needs most right now is a good psychiatrist.

For Congress, under this two-party system, has one rule of conduct for war and another for peace. It never tried to mix the two before, especially in an election year.

The effort is producing an entirely new code for the Korean conflict, which is a hot war if ever there was one, but which still hasn't spread into general war.

The idea is to go all out for the war effort and still do the smart thing politically. Above all, one mustn't be caught at any politicking. That's a trick that takes some doing in normal times. In this crisis, it's playing hob with strong nerves.

For there's an added complication we forgot to mention. What was politically clever before the North Korean attack isn't smart any more. The old rules have changed so completely that some members have calloused fingers from trying to feel the public pulse. Others have abandoned the effort and simply play by ear. To their credit, a wise few are trying to forget about politics altogether.

That new chapter in the history books will tell of a Congress that rushed to impose taxes and controls above and beyond what the President said was needed in the present emergency.

A vote for either would have seemed suicidal in any normal election year. But the mass will of the people works in wondrous ways. Now it was not only good politics but "statesmanship."

Some of the other decisions have been more difficult to reach, particularly when they clashed with the old orthodox rules.

Here are some of the surprising results:

The Senate, which has always regarded Federal aid to State highways as a sure route to local affection, matched the roads cut the President asked and then cut even deeper, for good measure.

House-Senate conferees, knowing that flood control and rivers and harbors projects are good for votes in any normal election, banished their once familiar pork diet. They voted instead to build no projects not certified by the President as necessary to the war effort.

Universal military training legislation, denied the late President Roosevelt in World War II and resisted against every effort of Harry Truman to pass it since, started picking up steam on its own. Mr. Truman's protestations that it isn't urgent notwithstanding, the Senate Armed Services Committee is ready to report it out.

To save a half million "nondefense" dollars, the Senate Expenditures Committee unanimously shelved a House-passed bill to pay the premiums on surety bonds which some Government employes are required to take out to hold their jobs.

Each move violated every peacetime election year practice, yet caught the "all out" spirit of the times.

But try to fathom this one: A House-Senate conference committee voted every penny asked by the President for the military, but cut each economic aid item designed to head off a hot war, from the time-tested Marshall Plan to the aborning Point Four.

To add to the enigma, it took over the executive function of formulating foreign policy, approved a mandatory loan to Franco's Spain.

Rumbles in the Rear

IF trying to figure how to vote is cracking iron nerves, attempting to campaign without suggesting that naughty word "politics" is driving others to the brink.

Some thought they had discovered the magic formula. All they had to do was stick on the job in Washington and support every defense measure as they did in World War II.

But last week there were more unhappily restless members pacing the lobbies waiting for important bills to jell than ever before sat out a tempest.

Their uncertaint[y] was due to the furious campaigns being [w]aged against them by opponents back [h]ome while they were twiddling their th[u]mbs in the cloakrooms.

Many have decid[ed] they can't take it, will bolt for home at [th]e first intermission and put in some solid [l]unches before the gong.

Others are dete[r]mined to sit out this session of Congress, [n]o matter how long it lasts, and win or l[o]se on their voting record.

Dial a Questio[n]

ONE of the f[e]w legislators in either House who [h]as developed a really scientific campaig[n] "approach" is Connecticut's Senator Bri[e]n McMahon.

McMahon borro[w]ed the idea from Oregon's Wayne Mor[se], who first used it successfully in his p[r]imary campaign.

When Congress [r]ecesses, McMahon will make a beeline [f]or Connecticut, conduct a "question and [a]nswer" radio campaign all over the State.

He's already li[n]ed up 19 radio stations for broadcasts in [e]ach locality, has even set tentative dates for each program.

McMahon will l[e]d off with a brief speech and then invite li[s]teners to phone in questions. In the tim[e] remaining he will try to answer questio[ns] from the audience and all telephoned qu[e]ries.

The Connecticut Democrat figures the people are thirst[y] for information, want straight from the [s]houlder facts rather than campaign mumbo jumbo.

"If I don't kno[w] the answers, I can get them," said McM[a]hon. "I'll answer these later in State-wide broadcasts."

If Congress dec[i]des to sit out the Korean conflict, or leave[s] only for brief intervals, McMahon will r[e]main on the job at the Capitol, attemp[t] another innovation in hot-war campaigning.

In that event, h[e] will advertise for questions in the local Conn[e]cticut press, get the answers back to co[n]stituents somehow.

Antiquary

PAGE Diogenes[:] Contractors busily remodeling th[e] Senate chamber have unearthed what [l]ooks like an ancient oil lantern, bricked [u]p in the west wall when it was constructe[d] in 1859.

David Lynn, Ar[c]hitect of the Capitol, took the lantern to his office. Funnel-shaped, it is made of leaded tin, has a spout for a wick and a small opening at the top for refilling.

He believes it was used by a workman bricking in the chamber nearly a century ago. Intrigued by the find, he's now trying to research its origin, use and age.

Lynn, who knows every nook and cranny of the old structure and the subterranean passages beneath, adds to his lore with each Capitol repair job. During last year's renovation of the Senate ceiling, he came out with a rude workman's level, apparently as old as the lantern.

In the course of the present remodeling, the curious got a peek at the tiled "cleaning chamber" beneath the floor, first used as part of an outmoded ventilating system but now a link in the Senate's modern air-conditioning.

The old ventilating system piped fresh air into the recess beneath the floor from granite intake towers still located in the Capitol grounds.

In 1896, a pioneer air-conditioning expert was called in to "modernize" the job. What he did was pipe fresh air to each Senator's desk through small vents in the floor.

Lynn recalls that this system really worked. The dust from the Senate floor was blown skyward with the fresh air and Senators complained it was "killing us all off."

The present really efficient air-conditioning, installed in the chamber in 1928, still uses fresh air from the old granite intake towers. But instead of being pumped up with the dust from the floor, the air is refrigerated, flows down from the ceiling and out through the old "cleaning chamber."

SENATOR CLAUDE PEPPER (D., Fla.), chief of the Senate wire tap probers, was holding his daily press conference in the Senate District Committee room. At the peak of the conference, two telephone repairmen solemnly walked into the room, marched over to the desk and went to work on two phones.

The newsmen roared. Pepper joined in the laughter, wisecracked: "Now the wire tap investigators are getting tapped."

Later he explained that the phone men were called in at his order to make the phones ring a little louder.

"If they ring at all, we can't hear them," he said. "Yesterday I missed two quorum calls that way."

Venerable AT-6 Fighting Barehanded

By C. B. Allen
NYHT News Service

EVERY American who learned to fly in World War II—to say nothing of a few thousand of our air allies in that affair—should get a nostalgic thrill out of the Air Force's Korean-front report that the veteran AT-6 not only has gone to war but is stacking up quite an enviable combat record for itself.

The surprise new role in which the AT-6 finds itself at the end of its stanch training-plane career is all the more enhanced by the fact that, in the words of Lieut. Gen. Lauris Norstad, the Air Force's acting vice chief of staff, the venerable AT-6 is "doing its fighting barehanded."

When Norstad returned from his recent visit to the Korean theater, he was full of praise for the job being done at the front by the unarmed and unprotected North American Aviation two-place craft in spotting Communist targets for General MacArthur's hard-pressed forces.

General Norstad, of course, called the airplane a T-6 instead of an AT-6, in accordance with the Air Force's postwar nomenclature, but he made no secret of his pride over the Far Eastern performance of the craft that served both the Army Air Force and the Navy as an "advanced trainer" during World War II.

"The boys over there are using it as a liaison plane with our forward air controller units assigned to the ground forces," he said, "and they have been turning in a magnificent performance. They not only find the targets and relay their positions to our F-80 jet and F-51 piston-engine fighter-bombers; when the planes with the bombs and rockets show up, the T-6s, more often than not, lead them to the attack to make sure they'll hit the right things. They go right down and blow the leaves off the target so the pilots behind them can see what they're supposed to blast."

Other officers who have returned recently from Korea say the erstwhile AT-6 has established a reputation with the Communists as "the most hated airplane on the front" though it never fires a shot or drops a bomb. This is because the appearance of an AT-6 over a North Korean troop concentration, artillery installation, tank or truck column "always spells trouble."

"If the aerial hunting is poor," one such officer said, "the T-6 boys just go snooping around over enemy territory, hovering at low altitude, until they tempt some jittery outfit into firing at them and disclosing its hidden position on the ground. Then they flash the word and the fighter pilots come boiling over the horizon with their bombs, rockets and 50-caliber machineguns set for the kill.

"The fighter-bombers line up on the T-6 'spotter' and he shoves over in a 'Follow me' dive on the target, wagging his wings in a 'There it is, boys,' signal just above the tree-tops as h[e] veers off out of the way of the hardware being unleashed behind him. No wonder [th]e Commies hate the T-6s; they haven't any [th]ing of their own but they certainly have b[ee]n doing a job of putting the finger on th[e] opposition."

The only weap[o]ns aboard the T-6s, he said, are the .4[5] caliber automatic pistols carried by the p[i]lots who fly them and by the Army field f[o]rces officer observer who rides in the bac[k] seat of each T-6. These crews, he adde[d] do not even have the protection of sel[f]-sealing gasoline tanks in the wings of the[ir] airplanes as a safeguard against fire from [e]nemy incendiary bullets. As this officer s[u]mmed it up, "All the T-6 boys have is a g[o]od airplane and a lot of guts."

Despite this, [he] said, there have been almost no casua[l]ties among the T-6 crews although the pla[n]es usually return to base with dozens of b[u]llet holes in their wings and fuselages. P[r]actically all of them have been operating f[r]om flight strips at Pohang and Taegu.

Volunteer pilo[t]s from the Fifth Air Force fly the "barehan[d]ed" T-6s, 29 of which are assigned to the 61[s]t 7th Tactical Squadron with headquarters at [T]aegu. This organization has, in addjtion, four L-5 liaison airplanes of the light "gra[s]shopper" type widely used by the Army in [W]orld War II for the type of work now b[ei]ng done in Korea by the T-6, but all[-]han[d]s seem to agree that the "good old AT-6 [i]s a lot better for such missions than t[h]e "puddle-jumpers."

Mexico City Sinking Back Into Ancient Lakebed

By Ruth Watt Mulvey

Miss Mulvey is a former Washington newspaperwoman now working in Mexico City.

MEXICO CITY—Hundreds of miles from gulf and ocean on a dizzying plateau, the capital of Mexico and its three million inhabitants live with the constant fear that their city is sinking into the earth.

Everywhere, the ornate facades of centuries-old buildings are cracked by settling. The tremendous Palace of Fine Arts has sunk more than 9 feet since it dazzled spectators at the turn of the century.

Pessimists predict that once again the metropolis will became a lake, but the challenge of modern engineering in the form of skyscrapers rises boldly against the blue Mexican sky.

The whole thing began in 1325 when a wandering band of Aztecs saw a patch of land in a great valley lake. There was not much to it, but the promised omen of an eagle with a serpent in its mouth was there. They moved in.

The Aztecs, who have been compared frequently with the Romans, proved themselves marvelous engineers. The chronicles of the Spanish conquerors who arrived in 1519 testify to that.

Sophisticates like Bernal Diaz del Castillo wrote that nothing in Europe equaled the gleaming city of Tenochtitlan, with its high pyramids and its orderly streets, the huge market and the three causeways that connected the island with the land.

Subsoil Is 'Mush'

UNDER Spanish domination, the city grew rapidly over the miles of lake to the hill of Chapultepec and beyond. As a result, most of present-day Mexico City is filled land. The subsoil is a "mush" of soil and water. It will not support a building of more than one or two stories and for centuries the low-slung Spanish type of building prevailed.

It was not until the end of the nineteenth century that building became a headache. That was when quaint old Mexico began to convert to Mexico moderno. Industry and mining became [illegible] acts of the national life and people began to [illegible] crowd the capital.

Cartoonist Freyre of Excelsior looks 10 years into the future and has two tourists questioning a native: "That is where the eagle stopped?" "No. That is the cupola of the Palace of Fine Arts"

Offices looking out into patios were attractive but impractical with downtown land selling by the square inch. Mexico would have to build up, but how?

First, it was decided to use the platform system. Bellas Artis is a monument not only to national artistic talent but to the folly of this idea. Erecting a huge building on a solid base prevented cracking all right, but it did not keep the building aloft.

"But see," the engineers congratulated themselves, "it sinks as a unit. No shearing."

A Glaring Success

TEN years later, builders introduced a new principle into Mexican construction and sizable buildings began to go up—on piles. Since 1930, most of the building has been done in this manner.

Piles are sunk all the way to the bottom of the lake and beyond to bed rock. Most notable example of this perhaps too successful measure is the Independence Monument on the Paseo de la Reforma. Year by year the monument has "risen" above the cracked base on the Paseo as the city continues to fall away beneath.

The very sensible idea of "floating" buildings on the former lake did not occur until a few years ago. This seems to have solved most of the difficulties.

Like naval architects, local building men figure how much the construction will weigh and then an equal weight of the mushy soil is removed. It is simply a matter of displacement. The building is constructed in the cavity and there it floats.

First [illegible] of this type was the National Lottery, which soars over the center of town. This was built with a reinforced concrete foundation like the hull of a ship. Four ballast tanks prevent tilting of the building caused by the varying pressure as new buildings go up around it. Water is shifted from one to another of these tanks so that the building is always on an even keel.

Most of the skyscrapers now going up in Mexico City are constructed on that principle.

Million-Ton Project

EFFORTS to repair damage done by the sinking are going on everywhere. Engineers are planning to restore the Palace of Fine Arts to its original height and redistribute the million tons of weight with new excavations and fills.

It has been estimated that the floor of the valley is dropping as much as one foot a year. Various causes are suggested. Some engineers contend that Mexico City is literally drinking up its foundation.

In the last 30 years, the capital's population has grown from 500,000 to three million. The supply of drinking water has not kept pace. The Derma project, which will bring potable water from outside the valley, is not complete. Countless wells have been sunk—at least 2300, it is estimated.

Thus, more water is being pumped from underground than is deposited by rain.

A few weeks ago, one of Mexico's outstanding scientists came forward with an answer. Make every day an "Arbor Day," is the general idea.

According to Engineer Edmundo Lelo de Larrea, Mexico City's survival is dependent on the rainfall and how much of it is absorbed by the earth. That is where the trees come in.

The sinking Palace of Fine Arts has carried the street with it, so that motorists must park with two wheels on the sidewalk to keep an even keel

Verdure Is Vanished

TIME was when the Valley of Mexico was verdant. Through the centuries, the hillsides have been stripped of their trees, and the brown earth sifts into the city streets in the spring on the winds that come from Texcoco. Everywhere the land is scarred by erosion.

Despite abundant rain, the subsoil is drying because it cannot filter sufficient water from the supply which runs unchecked over the surface. Immediate reforestation, says Lelo de Larrea, is the only answer—enough trees to check the flow of water until it can be absorbed by the soil. Otherwise, when the rainfall decreases the subsoil will be desiccated to the point where it will not even support a house.

Today, the once great Capital of Tenochtitlan is only a legend. Tomorrow, the skyscrapers of Mexico City may become a legend, too. Yet all along the Paseo, in downtown Bucareli and San Juan de Letran new steel skeletons are rising.

One point on the bright side, the builders tell you, is that the sinking, mushy soil is the best shock absorber Mexico could have against the frequent earthquakes which rock the city. More than once, the city has been sayed from destruction because of it.

Ruthless Stalin Favorite Is New Dictator of East Germany

By Tom Reedy

BERLIN—East Germany is saddled with one-man rule again.

This time it's not a Nazi—it's a Communist.

He's cold and ruthless. He smiles without mirth. He tries to look like Lenin but doesn't quite make it. He tries to appear unobtrusive and doesn't quite make that, either. He tries to be friendly but his icy eyes and shrill voice cast a strange pall.

This is 57-year-old Walter Ulbricht, who has slugged his way to the top of the Communist heap in the Russian zone of Germany. A lot of political victims lie in his wake and more probably will follow.

To say that Ulbricht is outright boss of 18,000,000 East Germans is to state a fact that every one of the East Germans has now come to accept. Ulbricht isn't chairman of the ruling Socialist Unity (Communist) Party. He isn't even Prime Minister of the "German Democratic Republic." He's only deputy P. M.

But the spade-bearded Communist of 30 years' loyalty to the Kremlin vaulted into the role of boss just as Stalin did. He whipped and scolded the SED party from within its central committee until he finally got the job he wanted . . . secretary general. The party created the post this summer and elected Ulbricht to it. There was no opposition candidate.

For years Stalin ran Russia without a government job. As secretary general he was party ruler and, therefore, ruler of the state.

This is the position Ulbricht has now forged for himself. From this pedestal he has already lashed out in several major messages of ominous import for the hated West. Ulbricht's creed:

Destroy all opposition within the Soviet zone.

Spread communism westward by any available means, fair or foul, terror or cajolery.

Crush all Germans who turn their backs on the Soviets and the German Communists.

This isn't guesswork. These are summations of Ulbricht's own words. He even threatens "people's court" trials of West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and other elected representatives of the rival republic west of the Elbe River.

Ulbricht probably believes he will be in a position to do that some day. He has watched communism raise its head for a while under the democratic Weimar republic, and then seemingly die under the Hitler knouts. But here it is again, riding high in not only East Germany but other Soviet-dominated lands.

Converted by Lenin

The party's ups and downs have been Ulbricht's ups and downs. Ulbricht started life in Leipzig as a youth who wasn't a very good table finisher in a cabinet-making concern. Between polishing jobs, young Walter stirred up everybody with radical ideas about life and work. He beat the bushes of his trade until he got the job of organizer for the union.

As a Social-Democrat under the Kaiser's regime, Ulbricht was usually just a step ahead of the [illegible] imperial police.

Lenin, mea[illegible] while, made several trips to Berlin and Ul[illegible]richt became a convert. The old Russian [illegible] volutionary fired the young German with [illegible]o much zeal that he let his goatee and m[illegible]stache grow. After years of cultivation, U[illegible]bricht has managed to make it look somew[illegible] it like Lenin's.

Out of Leni[illegible]'s clandestine trips to Berlin grew the old Spartacus Society. Ulbricht was right in there, along with Wilhelm Pieck, Rosa Luxemburg and Karl Liebknecht.

When the Kaiser abdicated, the Spartacus Society took off its vague political cloak and donned one that required no explanation. It became the first Communist party in Germany modeled after the new Lenin-Trotsky-Stalin show in Moscow.

Those were hectic days in Berlin's streets, with socialist and Communist in a constant tug-of-war. Out of the early rioting, Liebknecht and Frau Luxemburg were killed and their bodies thrown into a canal. Pieck and Ulbricht survived. Today Pieck, at 74, is president of East Germany without much to say, while Ulbsicht handles the political hammer and anvil.

Five Who Made Good

Ulbricht kept himself in the limelight and was elected to the Reichstag in 1928. He served there as a deputy until 1933, when Hitler seized full power. Goering burned the Reichstag building and blamed it on the Communists, that was the signal for all good Communists to get out of the way. Ulbricht got out.

He turned up in Spain and served as a commissar with the Republican forces. Franco's legions put Ulbricht to flight again and he wended his way to Moscow.

There a quintet of old German Communists banded together, got into Stalin's inner graces and have stayed so ever since. They were Ulbricht, Anton Ackermann, Franz Dahlem, Wilhelm Zaisser and Pieck.

Ackermann, Dahlem and Zaisser are in the Politburo. Zaisser, commander of an international brigade in Spain under the name of "General Gomez," is chief of the state security administration of East Germany. This is nothing else but a Communist version of the old Nazi Gestapo and Sicherheits-Dienst (Security Service).

These are the big five. Ulbricht is the big one. The others curry his favor, sometimes in such a fawning manner at public demonstrations as to be embarrassing.

Risking No Elections

Under Ulbricht, Communist workers have spent long days and nights to solidify their position in East Germany. If they ever come out for "free" elections, it will be a foregone conclusion that they have finally made the grade and are entrenched so solidly that they can't lose. Meanwhile they don't make the mistake of giving the voter a chance to repudiate them.

Ulbricht stays away from such a possibility as if it were a plague. When he and Pieck got together with Socialist Otto Grotewhol in Berlin in 1945 and dreamed up a merger of the KPD and SPD, Ulbricht was calling the shots. But he did not put himself forward as a public candidate for anything. He let Pieck and Grotewohl take that chance, and as a result they were soundly beaten in the 1946 elections. Even in the Russian sector they took a licking.

Grotewohl is now Prime Minister, with Ulbricht as his first deputy, but his future is conjectural. It grows dimmer as Ulbricht elevates only the old-time Spartacus days Communists and stamps his heel on Johnny-come-latelies.

These are lush times for Ulbricht and his Communist friends. They have outgrown the baggy pants era and now ride around in big limousines with chauffeurs and bodyguards. But Ulbricht keeps an eye on them. Portly Hermann Kastner, the Liberal-Democrat collaborator who sits as deputy prime minister alongside Ulbricht, learned that lesson recently.

His high living habits became street gossip. With a little gentle prodding from Ulbricht, the LDP threw Kastner out as chairman. That means he probably will be thrown out of the government at October 15 election time.

A Stalin Crony

Ulbricht's unswerving and dutiful attention to the party has given him an unusually strong position in Stalin's ring of favorites. This is his real club, and he uses it incessantly. A year ago, Ulbricht held an honored seat on the podium in Moscow when Stalin accepted birthday congratulations. In the past year he has visited the Soviet dictator three times.

Germans fear Ulbricht more than they do any of the others in the east clique. They know they can expect no quarter from him just because they are German. Long ago, Ulbricht's Communist views lost national tinge. Now they swirl only around the great international scheme, regardless of boundaries, populations, race or religion.

By now, Ulbricht speaks Russian as well as he speaks German. His wife is the former secretary of Marshal Zhukov, the first Soviet commander in Germany.

On $54 a Week, British M. P.'s Lunch Frugally

By Sylvia Martin

LONDON—In the dining rooms of the noble Palace of Westminster, members of the British Parliament can get a plain but substantial meal for three shillings, sixpence—about 50 cents. But most M.P.'s will seldom eat those meals. They can't afford them. Coffee and a sandwich in the cafeteria will be their limit, for the salary of the British "congressman" comes to $54 a week—and no extras.

The M.P.'s will get a brand-new building this fall—because the Nazis bombed their former quarters into the ground—but they still won't get any more comforts, any more room, or any more money.

Even the greenest M.P. knows when he takes his seat in the great legislative chambers where so much history is made, that he's not going to get rich in his new job, that he may sometimes be hungry and most of the time deucedly uncomfortable. The working conditions of a British legislator make his American counterpart look like a pampered darling.

In the House of Commons I tried to locate J. P. W. Mallalieu, who represents Huddersfield, film-star James Mason's hometown. I found him in a queue with other M.P.'s at one of the dozen phone booths in the central lobby reserved for parliamentary business. It was 20 minutes before he got his turn.

Sightseers Flock In

LATER, we sat together in his "office." This turned out to be one of the long leather benches along the wall of the lobby. Other legislators, some of them headline makers, were occupying benches, too. While hordes of sightseers came and went on escorted tours, there they sat, in the feeble glow of a museum-piece chandelier, receiving constituents and deputations, being interviewed by the press, writing their speeches.

High above them Big Ben chimed out the hours of the long Parliamentary day, carried by the BBC across the ocean to Capitol Hill—"London calling! Here is the news. . ."

I could see my own Congressman in his suite of offices, telephones at elbow, and a secretary, typist, filing clerk and office boy to help him at the work of that other great democratic parliament in Washington. He makes $12,500 a year. His $2500 expense account for telephone, telegraph, stationery, almost equals an M.P.'s total salary of $2800.

The most munificent—and to his British brother the most staggering—item in his good fortune is his $20,000 allowance for office payroll. On this he can, and sometimes does, place his wife, daughter, or other member of the family, thus upping his family income. He pays no office rent and no postage on his mail.

He looks like a scientist in a streamlined million-dollar laboratory, while his London counterpart is an Isaac Newton groping after the laws of gravity under the old apple tree.

3 Establishments

HERE'S Britain's M.P.—a dedicated soul in a threadbare coat sitting with reverence in the hallowed chambers of the great. Gratefully he accepts the British people's $2800, remembering that less than 40 years ago M.P.'s got no salary at all. Unlike the American Congressman, the British M.P. isn't required to reside in the district he stands for. Our new M.P. represents, say, a Yorkshire constituency. But his own home is down in Sussex. And now he's got to live in London.

This means the poor devil must maintain three establishments—an apartment or hotel room in London, an office in his constituency, and his own home in Sussex which, because of the British housing shortage if for no other reasons, he couldn't possible give up for his temporary job. The expense of all this can't work out at less than $700 a year, even if he shares his London apartment with colleagues in a similar fix.

There are no office facilities in Westminster, save for a few senior ministers. In the new House of Commons, there will be very little additional secretarial—or in fact, any other—accommodations. One or two "interviewing rooms," included in the plans, will be hopelessly inadequate to serve all the M.P.'s, who want to discuss problems of state together or talk over local issues with their constituents.

The central lobby and the corridors leading off from it will remain the "office" for the vast majority of M.P.'s.

Standing Room Only

PRESENT parliamentary-reform measures envisage no financial assistance whatever to the members in providing them with offices, secretaries or stenographers. And the new Chamber, like the old, will still be far too small to accommodate all 625 Members of Parliament at once should they decide to listen to the same debate at the same time.

So the M.P is left in his "office"—a lobby bench or a library reading room.

If he is to do the job at all well, he's got to have a secretary. Even if he shares her with fellow members, this will cost him another $700. And if he takes a London office as well, there goes $650 more, leaving him with $750 out of his $2800. But how about his postage bill? He is conscientious. His letter writing, even when he economizes by answering no mail except that of his constitutents, sets him back $200. His telephone bill is another $100.

Then there's the matter of hospitality, returning drink for drink. In the smoking room, reserved for M.P.'s (and, by rarely broken tradition, male members only), much of the real business of the House of Commons is settled.

Traditionally, nothing said or done in the smoking room can ever be used against or by a member outside its walls. In this holy of holies, members of all parties talk and negotiate with a freedom and frankness they would not dare use anywhere else, sitting back with a drink. And drinks in Britain—whisky 50 cents a nip, beer 20 cents a glass—run into money.

Our M.P. now has about $300 left. On this he must feed himself, get his laundry done, pay his transportation around London, and buy himself a pair of socks now and again. (Let us hope he is a bachelor.) There are no engaging lobbyists, such as swarm on Capitol Hill, to treat him to much as a movie. He figures he'll just scrape by if he dines on a sandwich and a cup of coffee.

A London Evening News gibe at M. P.'s who use the House lobby as offices. The sergeant-at-arms is telling the bedfellows, "You can't sleep here, y'know"

But then there's the world's biggest income tax to pay on the $2800 that he no longer has. Well, he'll have to get along without those badly needed new shirts, beg Aunt Pamela to knit him some draft-proof woolies, and make do without a watch.

The only concession he receives, besides stationery, is free first-class railroad travel between London and his constituency only. All other traveling—and M.P.'s do a lot of it—must be at his own expense.

Once Wealthy

WHEN a member of the Liberal government, just before the First World War, introduced his bill that was to give the M.P.'s a salary for the first time in British history, he came up against strong opposition from his colleagues themselves — it was against all tradition, one could not pay a gentleman for doing his patriotic duty, it would lower the standards. But in those days, M.P.'s were wealthy men, with estates and incomes; or if poor, they had wealthy patrons.

It is different today. Most of them must now live on their pittances. They suffer stoically, and not one will admit that he'd care to change places with one of those affluent American Congressmen.

Suppressed Press Pops Right Back Up in Iran

By W. G. Dildine

Mr. Dildine, a member of the Cleveland Plain Dealer staff, is in Iran on a Reid Foundation fellowship.

TEHRAN. — Police of Persia have suppressed at least 28 Tehran publications since June 27, when Gen. Haji Ali Razmara became Prime Minister.

The suppressions have been carried out under the strict press law passed after the attempt to assassinate Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi in February, 1949. Under this law, nothing may be printed which might inpair the prestige of the Shah, the royal family, cabinet ministers, senators or members of parliament.

Also, nothing may be printed which might damage the national integrity of Iran or its national religion, Shi'a Islam.

Most of the suppressed newspapers have printed criticisms of Razmara or other government officials or have railed against the government's foreign policy. Tenor of most of this editorial comment was that Razmara had been brought to power by American support and was subservient to American and British interests.

Some papers in this parade to the journalistic graveyard have followed the line of Radio Moscow and Radio Baku. Others have been simply antigovernment.

Sounding Boards

THE fact that 28 papers have passed into oblivion in such a short time becomes less impressive when it is considered that Persian publications—there are usually two dozen or so in this city of some 800,000, few in the provinces—are simply stumps for political figures. The sort of news that would make an eight-column headline in an American daily—especially such local news as fires, crime, disaster, graft exposes, weather and the like—is either ignored or brushed off with a paragraph. Human interest stuff, lifeblood of every American newspaper worthy of the name, is ignored altogether.

What makes space is long disquisitions on Iranian politics, lengthy summaries of parliamentary debates and especially editorial matter plugging the views of the editor and his backers.

A few of the better sheets try to give some idea of world news through dispatches of foreign wire agencies. There is also a strong appetite for free boilerplate and for stories lifted gratis from the foreign press.

Law prohibits members of the government from owning newspapers. There is no prohibition against their relatives doing so.

The majority of papers suppressed under the Razmara regime have been one-day affairs which appear in place of some other proscribed publication and are promptly put out of existence.

All publications in Persia must be licensed. To get a license, it is only necessary to be 30 years old and able to read and write. The permit need not be used but must be renewed yearly. There are said to be many such unused permits kicking around.

When a paper is suppressed by police action, its editor need only borrow the license of a friend and resume publication the following day with nothing changed but the title. In one case, such a succession of papers of different names has reached as high as nine in the last few weeks, each sheet appearing for only a day or two.

According to law, suspension is initiated by the prosecutor general. Sniffing a violation, he writes a letter to the special editorial branch of the police department. The police, in turn, write a polite letter to the editor, "requesting" him not to publish until further notice.

One Paper Won

VALIDITY of suspension must be passed on by a civil court. In only one case under the present regime has the court ruled in favor of a suspended paper. This was Besouyeh Ayandeh (Toward the Future), which had printed an editorial attacking American Ambassador Henry F. Grady, calling him "butcher of Greece" and accusing Americans of boosting Razmara into power

Allowed to resume after a week, it repeated the allegations and was suppressed again after one issue. In the interim, two papers under different names appeared briefly in its place. Since the second suspension, still another paper has come out under the same editors. These papers have been notable for following the Moscow line on Korea and world affairs in general.

The organ of the National Front Party, strongly opposed to Razmara and to American policy, has had nine avatars since June 31.

Several of the affected papers have been closely affiliated with Ayatollah (Miracle of God) Haji Abul Ghassem Kashani, strong religious leader and bitter foe of Razmara. There is also a leftist Jewish weekly on the list.

When Razmara came to power, he promised to enforce the press law and prevent vilification of public officials. To friends who have objected to the strict policy toward the press, he has replied that the police actions are entirely legal, and apparently they are.

O'Dwyer Career Is an Alger Story

NEW YORK.—Immigrant kid with $25 . . . 40 years . . . Ambassador Extraordinary to his adopted homeland.

That's the story of William O'Dwyer. It's the Horatio Alger legend come alive. And the story has shaped the man.

What is he really like, this O'Dwyer who steps out next week as mayor of the world's biggest city to become United States Envoy to Mexico? Is he affable Irishman, or irritable officeholder? Progressive mayor or political boss? Does he know what he wants or do his deeds sway with the breezes of opportunity? A bouncing Jimmy Walker or a reforming Fiorello LaGuardia?

Let's look inside those 40 years, and the years before that. They explain much of the man and his acts.

Set for Priesthood

IT BEGAN with an Irish love story, the romance of Patrick O'Dwyer, County Mayo schoolmaster, and Bridget McNicholas, who taught in Bohola grade school. They married and had 11 children. The first-born (July 11, 1890) was named William and the family set him for the priesthood.

He set out in his teens for the Jesuit university at Salamanca, Spain, but he didn't stay there. At 20, telling no one, O'Dwyer shipped out to the United States, had $25.35 left when he landed.

On the piers was work as a coal passer, then he became a stoker on an Argentine-bound freighter. Back to Gotham, he signed as fireman on the Albany excursion steamers. Then O'Dwyer was a hod-carrier, helping build the Woolworth Building and other landmarks.

He lived with his brother, James, on the tough West Side at first. Later, Brooklyn became his long-time home.

Young William next was a bartender at the Vanderbilt Hotel. Contact with sports, actors, writers and the rich fired him with growing ambition. And at the Vanderbilt, O'Dwyer met a telephone operator, Catherine Lenihan.

They were married in 1916 and the next month O'Dwyer received his citizenship papers. Then he became a city policeman, broke in on the rough Brooklyn waterfront.

Pounding beats by day, attending night classes at Fordham University, he won his law degree in 1923. He resigned from the force, hung out his shingle—and lost his first case. To fill in a shaky income, O'Dwyer arranged Irish-American soccer matches, ran a sort of travel agency.

Late Start Politically

NOW all these years O'Dwyer was a Democrat, but not until dandy Jimmy Walker had resigned under fire as mayor and Joseph V. McKee had succeeded him, did O'Dwyer's political career start. McKee named him a city magistrate.

O'Dwyer showed keen interest in juvenile offenders and was appointed presiding judge of Brooklyn's experimental adolescent court. In 1938 Gov. Herbert H. Lehman appointed him to the county court, and in the fall election he was elected to a 14-year tenure.

The following year, as public clamor rose concerning crime in Brooklyn, O'Dwyer resigned the judgeship and was swept into the office of district attorney. He closed in on the infamous Murder, Inc., ring, which would kill a man for $1.

In 23 months his office cleared up 87 murders. Then O'Dwyer aimed at bigger things. He ran against LaGuardia for mayor—and went down in crushing defeat.

During the war he took leave from D.A. duties, rose to brigadier general in the Inspector General's Department, assigned to investigate Army contract graft. In 1944 President Roosevelt made him head of the United States section of the Allied Control Commission in Italy. That bit of diplomatic duty was followed by work on the War Refugee Board.

A New Personality

THEN the man from Bohola came back to New York. LaGuardia declined to seek reelection in 1945, and O'Dwyer was swept into the mayor's chair.

These were the days when O'Dwyer was on his way to achieving the personal popularity of Walker. But New York headed into four turbulent years of labor troubles, transportation difficulties, construction projects, crime probes, fiscal worries. There was even the first water shortage in a generation.

Those around O'Dwyer saw a new personality emerging. He was never a backslapper, but now his easy informality began to vanish. The eyes were apt to glint more; he took personal exception to criticism. Tragedy touched his home life with the death of his wife in 1946. (Two brothers had previously been killed in tragic circumstances.)

O'Dwyer's activities showed an increasing belief in the need for personal intervention in the civic upset. Periods of seeming vacillation took the headlines.

He was against fare boosts on city transportation, then he was for them; "emphatically" he would not seek reelection in 1949, then he jumped in with a slugging campaign when party leaders picked another candidate. In the national field, he plumped for Eisenhower against Truman in '48, then swung around.

Remolded Tammany

IT SEEMED, too, that more and more of O'Dwyer the man was being injected into the work of O'Dwyer the mayor. Leaders of Tammany Hall were shuffled in and out as the mayor tirades. Tammany is strong today under the mayor's molding. After reelection last fall, he reached across the river to bring about changes in Brooklyn's Democratic machine.

In some ways the strict regimen of the LaGuardia era eased. Squads of honorary deputy police and fire commissioners reappeared; some appointments were criticized as not being based strictly on ability. Machine politics, perhaps, but that was all.

O'Dwyer at times swung his influence afield. He spoke sharply against the Taft-Hartley bill, espoused the cause of a united Ireland, kicked up a State fuss by proposing (unsuccessfully) that the Legislature legalize gambling at sporting events.

Lately he rushed to the defense of the police department, accusing a special Brooklyn grand jury of "witch hunting" in its investigation of rackets. Throughout his career, the former cop has been outspoken in his devotion to "New York's Finest."

Near Exhaustion

THE husky O'Dwyer 5-foot 9-inch, 190-pound physique was feeling the strain of office, too. Several times he retreated from the pressure of work on doctor's orders. After the reelection campaign, he entered the hospital on the verge of physical and mental exhaustion.

As he leaves the headaches of municipal government for presumably quieter work in an embassy, O'Dwyer takes with him his second wife, charming and socially talented Sloan Simpson. They wed last December.

Once before O'Dwyer has made an official visit to Mexico. That good-will trip was cut short by the duties of the city where he came as an immigrant and stayed to rule.

Mexico Losing a Friend in Thurston

By Benjamin Muse

Colonel Muse, Editor of the Manassas, Va., Messenger, is vacationing in Mexico.

MEXICO CITY.—While Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York is preparing with due publicity for his entry into diplomacy, a self-effacing but very effective American ambassador is preparing to make his exit from the diplomatic scene. Walter Thurston, whom O'Dwyer will succeed within a few days as United States Ambassador to Mexico, is about to retire after 36 years of diplomatic service.

The Mexicans are flattered that a man of the political prominence of the Mayor of New York is resigning from that office to become ambassador to this country. From all they have heard about them, they think they will like the O'Dwyers.

But there is a feeling of genuine regret at losing earnest, kindly and superlatively tactful Thurston. "He never fussed at us," a Mexican official told the writer. "We could always work things out with him."

In a wide range of activities, Thurston has convinced Mexicans of his sincere interest in their welfare, and particularly in the spectacular industrial development which has taken place here in recent years. Without neglecting any point of American representation, he has been, as a Mexican columnist put it, a "just friend" of Mexico.

Never a Backslapper

THURSTON is a career diplomat who came up the hard way. He worked hard in the days when hard work was not a specialty of diplomatic service men, and he still works hard. In addition to directing a 400-man embassy and attending diplomatic and ceremonial functions, he makes an average of a dozen speeches a month, mostly to Mexican gatherings in Spanish.

To Americans who like a backslapper, Thurston's temperamental dignity is sometimes forbidding. Nobody calls him "Walter." But he has won the respect, and in a measure, too, the affection, of Americans here. They regard his four-year tenure as marking a solid achievement in Mexican - American friendship and rate him high among the United States ambassadors who have served in this capital.

Thurston is ending his long diplomatic career in the city where he began it—as a clerk, in 1914. Two years later he had full representative responsibility in Mexico City for a time, during the difficult regime of Gen. Venustiano Carranza. His subsequent career carried him through 14 diplomatic assignments and included rugged service in revolutionary Spain and in Moscow.

"Thurston is one of us," a Mexican general remarked to the writer. "He's a revolucionario!" That was a high compliment. Revolucionario no longer means an enemy of the established order in Mexico. It is an expression of comradeship among the old-timers who saw Mexico come through her period of revolutionary turmoil and have contributed to her subsequent reconstruction and progress.

The embassy in Mexico City has lacked an ambassadress during the tenure of bachelor Thurston, although the role was filled unofficially until last year by the ambassador's mother. Mrs. Thurston, who has accompanied her son at every diplomatic post except Moscow, is now an invalid, too ill, in fact, to leave this country. Thurston is looking for a house where the two will reside in Mexico City.

Matter of Fact Relations

MAYOR O'DWYER will come to a Mexico which is still touchy on many points—still easily offended by tactless American visitors—but where the foundations of friendship with the United States are more securely laid than ever before in the history of the two countries. There is no enthusiasm about it. It is still unpopular for newspapers or public men to be effusively pro-American. But the republic has settled down to a policy of sober, matter-of-fact cooperation with the United States.

Much water has flowed down the Rio Grande since Mexico was a land of perennial revolution, and since "intervention" was an instrument of American policy. A new generation is leading this country in an economic renaissance, based on increasing cooperation with American business. So much is this true that it has not occurred to responsible Mexicans (although it has occurred to some American columnists with unfortunate repercussions here) to liken the war effort in Korea to the American interventions of 1914 and 1916 in Mexico.

The Communists, aided by their leftist friends and the chronic anti-Americans, are carrying on a strenuous campaign, but there is little prospect of the development of a formidable subversive force here. The danger lies rather in the confusion, and suspicion of the United States, being generated among the ignorant, which may tend to restrain the Mexican government from more conspicuous cooperation with the United Nations.

The propaganda uses many familiar anti-American gripes, but the main emphasis is on peace, with the implication that the United States and the United Nations are instigators of war. The Stockholm Peace Petition, circulated often by children, has more than 200,000 Mexican signatures to date and is gaining momentum.

There is a job to be done by the new ambassador, to which Mayor O'Dwyer's talents may lend themselves, in dramatizing the truth in a manner to bring it home to a wider segment of the Mexican public. An expanded motion picture program, however, would probably be the best means of influencing grassroots opinion here.

Press Backs U. N.

BUT Mexico as a whole is not swallowing Soviet propaganda at present. The leftist minority and its single important newspaper, El Popular, is making the most of the Malik line, but it is far from being the dominant publicity note in this country. The five leading newspapers are stoutly on the side of the United Nations and against communism. Reports from the war in Korea are presented in the press generally in a manner which suggests that the Americans and the South Koreans are the "home team."

Both the Korean war and the cold war, however, seem far away to most Mexicans. The Mexican government has been quietly punctilious in its support of the United Nations effort in Korea, and it has expressed a willingness to consult with regard to measures of practical aid. Several hundred individuals have applied (unsuccessfully) at the embassy for voluntary enlistment in the American forces. But no one is urging the sending of Mexican troops to Korea, and Mexican officials have been emphatic in denying that any plans for sending Mexican troops are under way.

Mexico is a spectator on the American side of the bowl, but still only a spectator, in what is regarded as fundamentally a struggle between Russia and the United States. The Mexican public is grimly fascinated and even frightened at the possibility of atomic warfare, but its concern is vicarious. Mexicans are alarmed for people in the United States and particularly for their friends, if they have any, there. They shudder at the thought of atomic devastation in New York or Chicago. But they are not at all worried about the fate of Mexico City.

There is a notable relationship between the reaction of countries to the Korean crisis and the presumable turn of each country in the schedule of Communist aggression. Mexicans reason that, if World War III comes, Mexico will not be in real danger unless and until the United States is destroyed, and they feel that that is, to say the least, a remote contingency.

Should a Judge Testify As Character Witness?

By Chalmers M. Roberts

Post Reporter

SHOULD Supreme Court Justices Stanley F. Reed and Felix Frankfurter have testified as character witnesses for Alger Hiss at his first trial?

A scholary effort, devoid of headline hysteria, to find the answer has just been made public by the American Bar Association's specially named committee on the Propriety of Judges Appearing as Witnesses.

In short, the committee of five distinguished lawyers found that public policy for 300 years has held that judges with knowledge of material facts may be compelled to testify.

All five agreed that the law includes testimony of judges as character witnesses.

But when it came to considering whether to recommend a new law to relieve judges from having to testify as character witnesses or of having the bar adopt a new canon of judicial ethics, the five committeemen split three ways.

Chairman William D. Mitchell (one-time Republican Attorney General of the United States) and Floyd E. Thompson (Chicago lawyer and former Illinois Supreme Court justice) recommended no action of any kind.

Henry S. Drinker (a Philadelphia lawyer) and Laurence M. Hyde (a judge of the Missouri Supreme Court) suggested new canons of ethics, but different ones.

Kimbrough Stone (retired judge of the United States Court of Appeals) suggested a new law denying compulsory process to force a judge to testify as a character witness except by order of the trial judge.

A Republican Protest

When Reed and Frankfurter testified on June 22, 1949, at the Hiss trial, an immediate cry, mostly Republican, was heard that they were debasing the Supreme Court by their actions. Frankfurter, as a Harvard professor, had recommended Hiss as a law clerk to Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, while Reed, as Solicitor General, once was Hiss' boss at the Justice Department. Frankfurter testified voluntarily while Reed was subpenaed.

Two critics — Representatives Keating (R., N. Y.), and Smith (R., Wisc.) — introduced bills. Keating's would bar a justice from testifying as a character witness in any Federal court. Smith's would provide that Federal judges shall not be compelled to appear as character witnesses.

The bar committee flatly turned down both ideas.

All five committeemen agreed that a judge is a competent and "compellable" witness to testify as to matters which came to his knowledge while presiding at an earlier trial, but that he is not so in a case in which he is presiding.

The committee observed that "although calling judges as witnesses to any fact is considered undesirable, nevertheless the ends of justice and the necessity of obtaining the truth are held to outweigh the objections which exist to allowing judges to appear as witnesses."

Policy to Withdraw

Under present law a Federal judge may not sit in a case in which he is or has been a witness. (Reed and Frankfurter presumably would not sit in the Hiss case, if it reached the high court, under the court's policy of a justice withdrawing from any case in which he has had an interest or a personal relationship. The Hiss case will be argued in the Court of Appeals in October and thus could reach the Supreme Court in the forthcoming term.)

The peculiar problem of judges as character witnesses springs from the reaction of both jury and public to such testimony, the committee pointed out.

"To the public," it observed, "such instances may give the impression that the judge who testifies has become a partisan and is stepping down from his lofty position to vouch for the accused and lend the weight of his position to testimony which indicates his personal judgment that the accused is not the sort of person who would commit the offense charged."

Thus, the committee decided, the problem it was surveying came down to the question of "whether to recommend legislation relieving judges to some extent from testimonial compulsion as character witnesses, or to recommend adoption of a canon of judicial ethics on the subject, and perhaps also a canon of professional ethics, or to do neither and leave the law and the canons as they stand."

Rely on Judgment

These are the main conclusions, in brief, of the five committeemen:

Mitchell, concurred in by Thompson:

"I cannot reconcile myself to a proposal to leave judges subject to compulsory process as character witnesses and at the same time to adopt a canon of judicial ethics which expressly or by implication would seem to cast a reflection on judges who give such testimony.

"The most that could be done by a canon would be to admonish judges when asked to testify as character witnesses, and if convinced that justice does not clearly require their testimony, to endeavor to persuade counsel not to resort to compulsory process. Judges may try that without any canon.

"Furthermore, to require pressure on lawyers not to subpena the judge as a character witness, in the face of a long standing public policy expressed in the law which subjects a judge to compulsory process, is not a forthright way to deal with the problem. If counsel is convinced that justice to his client requires a judge's testimony, he would yield only because he shrank from antagonizing the judge . . . .

"Rather than adopt a canon of judicial ethics, I prefer that no action of any kind be taken . . .

"The judges are the select of our profession. We ought to be able to rely on their good judgment and sense of the proprieties, without any new canon or statute. If any action is needed it should take the form of legislation, difficult as that may be, but I would leave the law as it is until there is more evidence than we now have that a change is desirable."

Lowered Respect

Drinker:

"Should the (Bar) Association consider it advisable to adopt an additional Judicial Canon, I believe that the following involves the principles applicable:

"When a judge is solicited as a witness, he should weigh thoughtfully the lowered public respect which may result from any apparent partisanship on his part in litigation; he should not voluntarily testify if he believes that his testimony is desired primarily because he is a judge, and should testify voluntarily as a character witness only in exceptional cases, when, in his opinion, justice clearly requires it."

Hyde:

". . . I am inclined to believe that additional Canons of Ethics would be helpful.

"It could be stated that a lawyer should not use a judge as a witness primarily because he is a judge, and that a judge should not testify if he could help it when his testimony is desired primarily because he is a judge."

Hyde also suggested "a canon of judicial ethics, which would likewise admonish judges that they should not voluntarily testify except where justice clearly requires it. I think that both canons are needed if either is needed."

Curb on Lawyer

Stone:

He suggested a "reasonable limit" on a lawyer's power to call a judge as a witness in the "form of a denial of compulsory process to compel a judge to appear solely as a witness to character except by order of the trial judge upon determination that such evidence is not otherwise available or is necessary for a fair trial of accused.

"This would deny such evidence to accused only if both the witness judge and the trial judge deem it necessary. Also, it would furnish a means of protecting the courts from unwarranted use of judges as such witnesses."

In a footnote, Stone added that his suggestions "leave a judge free to appear as a character witness voluntarily. It may be that there should be some limitation of voluntary appearance. At least for the present, I would prefer leaving that determination to the sense of propriety of such judge in the light of the situation presented."

The committee report, called for by resolution at the American Bar Association's last annual meeting, will be presented at this year's gathering here in Washington, opening September 18.

Gold an Early Aid in Arthritis

By Alton L. Blakeslee

Associated Press Science Reporter

NEW YORK.—Gold is good medicine for rheumatoid arthritis, especially when it's used early, a new study shows.

The gold is given by injecting gold salts. It's been used in this country for about 15 years against the pains and swellings of this crippling form of arthritis.

Gold stopped the disease nearly 80 percent of the time when used early, Drs. Russell L. Cecil and Chester Adams report in the Annals of Internal Medicine. Early means within six months after the disease started. Gold wasn't so helpful if the arthritis had been under way longer.

They gave gold treatment to 106 men and women, and compared them with 83 others who did not get gold. Both groups had the conventional treatment for arthritis, including rest, good hygiene, aspirin, exercises and orthopedic help if needed.

Of all those getting gold, 66 percent had remissions or relief from the disease within a year, they said. Of those starting gold within six months of getting arthritis, 78.7 percent got remissions. Of those who had arthritis six months to a year, 48.9 percent got relief.

But of those not getting gold, only 24.1 percent had remissions. Results even without gold were better in those getting a physician's care early in the disease.

Patients getting gold treatments won relief from arthritis 10 months earlier, on the average, than those not getting gold.

May Cause Rash

ONE puzzling fact about rheumatoid arthritis is that it often comes and goes for no apparent reason. Why gold helps bring relief, or why people often get better without treatment, isn't known.

All these arthritics have been observed for 18 months to two years. So far, about 26 percent of the gold-treated patients who had remissions have had returns of their arthritis. One third of those who didn't have gold had relapses after first having improved.

One objection to gold has been that it may cause skin rashes, blood changes or other toxic effects. But these can usually be avoided by using gold in small doses at the outset, and by keeping a close check on the patient, the physicians said.

The findings stress the importance of early treatment of arthritis with or without gold, they said. Gold has sometimes been used as a treatment of last resort, but "if gold is to be of any value in the treatment of this disease, it should be used as soon as the diagnosis of rheumatoid arthritis has been confirmed."

The hormones cortisone and ACTH bring dramatic relief from rheumatoid arthritis. But these recoveries usually last only as long as the hormone is given. And the hormones still are scarce and expensive.

Gold probably will continue to be important against arthritis for some time, they said, and it might also help in keeping up the relief obtained through hormones.

TOO MUCH of the hormone ACTH may cause eclampsia, one of the three great killers in pregnancy, says Dr. Sherman S. Garrett of Champaign, Ill. He explains the theory in the Western Journal of Surgery, Obstetrics and Gynecology. It opens the possibility of treatments to prevent the disease.

Eclampsia is a poisoning that kills about 1200 American women a year. Hemorrhage and infection are the other great dangers of pregnancy and childbirth.

Dr. Garrett says the pituitary hormone stimulates the adrenal glands, lying over the kidneys, to produce some of their hormones. The human disease often damages the kidneys, heart and brain, sometimes the liver, and affects the blood. It usually warns of its coming by causing high blood pressure and watery swellings in legs or hands. It often brings on fatal convulsions.

The total number of blind adults increases at the rate of 4800 a year, even allowing for deaths among the blind, says Mason H. Bigelow, president of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness. One reason for the increase—people are living longer, and "in many cases the additional years are bought at the cost of blindness."

More fresh foods for your dinner table could be shipped by rail through a new method of refrigerating railroad cars, says Dr. Donald F. Othmer of the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn. He described his method to the International Congress for Agricultural Industries at Brussels. It uses liquid ammonia, letting it evaporate in coils in a railroad car and thereby cool the car. The ammonia gas is absorbed in water tanks in the car, and the ammonia later is removed at service stations along the route. Dr. Othmer said this system is cheaper than using ice, takes less space and maintains more uniform temperature.

Traffic Inspector

A measure of the quality of service given by Police Inspector Arthur E. Miller is the fact that he twice refused promotion to assistant superintendent to stay with the Traffic Bureau. Inspector Miller, who retires at the end of this month, was in the Traffic Bureau for 10 years. He lived it heart and soul, and he as much as any other person is responsible for the excellent safety record which Washington has established. He is a believer in the scientific approach to traffic problems, and is a recognized expert in accident investigation and prevention. One of his most admirable qualities in his 31 years on the force has been his unfailing courtesy and cooperativeness.

Washingtonians who know the work of Inspector Miller will wish him good cheer in his retirement as an assistant superintendent, a post he held only four months. We hope he will find profitable use for his talents. At the same time, we wonder about the wisdom of a retirement procedure which permits the separation at 53 of an expert whose physical defects certainly do not appear to be disabling. Congress might well take a look at whether the standards under which the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons is operating are realistic, and whether forced retirement for physical disability is being used by the police hierarchy for internal political purposes.

Way To Economize

Conferees on the House and Senate omnibus appropriations bill have devised a rational compromise economy plan as a substitute for the House-approved Taber and Jensen amendments and the Senate-approved Byrd amendment. The Taber amendment provided for sweeping cuts of 10 percent in salary payments to civilian employes of Government agencies and departments. The Jensen amendment, with certain exceptions, prohibited the filling of 90 percent of Federal civilian vacancies during the current fiscal year, and the Byrd amendment called for an over-all 10 percent cut in the budgets of most nondefense Government agencies.

If Congress had approved any of these proposals, Government civilian departments and agencies would have been compelled to dismiss thousands of employes, despite the fact that some of them will have to carry a heavier work load because of the expanded defense program. The savings obtained by this sort of nonselective budget-cutting would have been illusory for the most part, since many agencies would have been compelled to ask for deficiency appropriations later on.

The conference committee's plan calls for a reduction in total Government spending of not less than 550 million dollars—about the same amount that the sponsors of the three rejected amendments hoped to save. However, the Budget Bureau will decide where these reductions can be made "without impairing national defense." This plan will enable the Government to save money in the right instead of the wrong way—that is, by a careful survey of appropriations with a view to eliminating nonessential expenditures for defense as well as nondefense purposes. As it is too late for Congress itself to essay that task, the Budget Bureau, which has already been instructed by the President to restudy nondefense spending as a preliminary to cuts in outlays, is the logical agency to direct the economy drive.

U. N. Team

The United States will have again, as in the past, a strong and well-balanced delegation at the meeting of the United Nations General Assembly. Under the leadership of Warren R. Austin, the chief United States delegate to the U. N., the group representing this country will constitute a genuine team, rounded in experience and capable of harmonious and wholly unpartisan cooperation. In view of the importance of the General Assembly as a forum in which nations must appeal to the minds and sympathies of mankind, the President's selection of delegates and alternates deserves the warmest commendation.

Mr. Austin will have the support of several veterans—John Foster Dulles, Eleanor Roosevelt, John Sherman Cooper and Benjamin Cohen—all seasoned and tested in past forays against Soviet propaganda techniques. The President has added to the group two astute selections from the Senate. He has named Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., a Republican member of the Foreign Relations Committee, and John J. Sparkman, a Democrat who does not sit with that committee, but who has exhibited a large understanding of foreign problems. The choice of Mr. Sparkman is especially gratifying to this newspaper because of his leadership in the new move to set up a U. N. Police Authority. It seems to us altogether praiseworthy and statesmanlike that the President has picked as an additional alternate Edith S. Sampson of Chicago, a Negro, whose presence will help to refute the usual Soviet taunts about American racial prejudices. The delegation is much more than bipartisan. It reflects a choice of the best available American talents.

Rome And Reunion

A strong sentiment toward the reunion of churches has been evident for many years. Among evangelical Protestant groups it has taken form in the ecumenical movement. Among a large and influential section of the Anglican Church there has been strong desire for reunion with Rome. After the Russian revolution the Vatican made strong efforts to induce the Eastern Orthodox churches to return to the Roman communion, but with no great success. Prounion sentiment gained great impetus among both Catholics and Confessional Lutherans during the Nazi persecutions. In some Catholic quarters there was a strong feeling that the psychological attitude and the method of polemics developed by the Counter Reformation had become utterly ineffectual in dealing with the world and mind of the twentieth century. For a time it was even rumored that the Pope himself shared this view.

The whole question was suddenly thrown into the area of public debate last November by a leading article in the Times of London. The Times leader and the correspondence that followed it were given considerable attention in the religious press throughout the world. Some of the correspondence merely emphasized the insuperable obstacles to reconciliation; some of it from both Catholics and Protestants was astonishingly receptive. There were in fact some indications that the Times article might have been prepared precisely for the purpose of testing sentiment of the clergy in both churches on the question.

What new hopes may have been raised by the Times correspondence (subsequently published in the form of a pamphlet) have now been pretty well frustrated by Rome itself. The first warning that Rome was far less eager than had been supposed for a rapprochement came with the apparently official announcement last week that the doctrine of the Assumption will be proclaimed by the Pope, speaking ex cathedra, as an article of faith. This doctrine, of course, is one that has been almost universally accepted among Catholics for centuries; but it would add an almost insuperable stumbling block to any movement toward any doctrinal understanding with other churches.

Now the door to reconciliation appears to have shut entirely by the papal encyclical Humani Generis. The Pope condemns the tendency rendered by the official translator as "eirenism." The word does not appear in any English dictionary, but is evidently derived from the Greek eirene, meaning peace. These pacificators within the church, says the Pope

> . . . are urged by a great and ardent desire to do away with the barrier that divides good and honest men; these advocate an "eirenism" according to which, by setting aside the questions which divide men, they aim not only at joining forces to repel the attacks of atheism, but also at reconciling their differences in dogma . . . Some . . . cherish the hope that when dogma is stripped of the elements they hold to be extrinsic to divine revelation, it will compare advantageously with the opinions of those who are separated from the church, and that in this way they will gradually arrive at a mutual assimilation of Catholic dogma and the tenets of the dissidents. Moreover, they assert that when Catholic doctrine has been reduced to this condition, a way will be found to satisfy modern needs, that will permit of dogma being expressed also by the concepts of modern philosophy.

Against the "eirenists," or pacificators, the Pope reiterates his doctrine that "the Roman Catholic Church and the mystical body of Christ" are one and the same. He insists that an absolute knowledge of metaphysical truth is possible and that the foundations of the Christian faith have been accordingly demonstrated by the "perennial philosophy" which is valid for all times and places. There is an explicit condemnation of such contemporary doctrines as historicism, idealism, immanentism and existentialism.

The tone of the encyclical is gentle and moderate; but the repercussions upon the theological and educational faculties are likely to be almost as profound as those of the "modernist" encyclical of Pius X. The theological aspects of the encyclical are, of course, outside the scope of editorial discussion, and its political consequences cannot be wholly foreseen, though they will no doubt be considerable. Meanwhile, it serves to emphasize how deep and apparently unbridgeable are the psychological and ideological fissures of modern Christendom.

GI School Abuses

For some strange reason the Teague resolution for investigation of abuses in the veterans' training program is hung up in the House. The resolution would establish a House select committee of nine members to study misuse of the education and training program and corrective action taken by the Veterans' Administration and State approving authorities. It has the indorsement of the Rules Committee, and it is for a purpose so worthwhile that there ought to be no question about it. Yet Speaker Rayburn so far has declined to indicate when it will be called up.

Up till the end of July more than 10 billion dollars had been spent by the Government on GI education and training. Inevitably a program so enormous has attracted to it a certain number of gyp artists and fly-by-night rackets. A joint report by the Veterans' Administration and the Bureau of the Budget in February of this year pointed out some of the defects in the lack of uniform standards between States, misleading advertising and the channeling of veterans into already overcrowded pursuits. Legitimate schools, both those long established and those set up especially for veterans' training, ought to welcome an investigation which would separate the wheat from the chaff. There is another more important reason for the investigation. Already, in light of the Korean experience, there is talk of extending the GI Bill of Rights. Before Congress can sensibly consider any such extension, it needs to have full facts about the abuses in the present program and recommendations on how to avoid them in the future.

Bridges On Bail

If Harry Bridges were not presumed to be a Communist he would have been granted temporary liberty on bail as a matter of course pending his appeal from a perjury conviction. Bail is customarily granted in any case when reasonable grounds exist for appeal to a superior court, except in cases involving capital punishment or when there is serious danger that the convicted man will commit the same crime again. But District Judge George B. Harris recently revoked the $25,000 bail on which Bridges had been free following his conviction, on the ground that Bridges might imperil national security because of presumed present membership in the Communist Party and his opposition to American participation in the Korean war. Neither of these counts of itself involves a crime, and no evidence was submitted of criminal activity. The fact remains Bridges was convicted only of swearing falsely that he was not a Communist at the time of his naturalization. His bail was revoked not because he was considered a menace as a convicted perjurer but because he was considered a menace as a Communist.

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has now set Bridges free on bail, saying in an extremely vigorous opinion that the Government's move to imprison him inaugurated a procedure "admittedly without precedent in the history of the Republic, namely, to make the courts the effective instruments of executive expediency." Bridges will go to jail in due course if his conviction as a perjurer is upheld by the courts to which he is entitled to appeal. But it is as a perjurer not as a Communist that he was convicted and deserves to be imprisoned.

Temporarily at large, Bridges may present some threat to national security. But the Ninth Circuit Court was quite right, we think, in saying that "a Bridges singled out and jailed by arbitrary judicial action . . . poses to our minds a more serious menace to the nation and its institutions than does a Bridges enlarged on bail in accordance with the established rules of law and the decisions and practices of the courts." Improperly jailed, he may seem to many a victim of tyranny. Granted all the elements of due process, he can speak only as a beneficiary of the American devotion to justice and fair play.

The Marcantonio Test

The future of Vito Marcantonio, Progressive Party follower and American Labor Party chieftain, is being presented to the voters of the New York Eighteenth Congressional District. Marcantonio, of course, is the most conspicuous follower of the Communist Party line remaining in office in the United States. As The Washington Post said in June, Mr. Marcantonio's speeches in Congress on any subject touching the party or Soviet Russia have read like "so many editorials from the New York Daily Worker" and indeed for at least 15 years he has publicly followed no line save that of the Communists.

The issue in the coming campaign in the New York Eighteenth, the district in the heart of New York City's East Harlem which was once represented by the late Fiorello LaGuardia, is regarded as Marcantonio's subservience to Russia and Russian policies. This is the announcement by James G. Donovan, the Marcantonio opponent. Mr. Donovan, a Democrat, is the coalition candidate of the Democratic, Republican and Liberal Parties, which have all announced their determination to beat Marcantonio. All leaders of the three parties stood with Mr. Donovan in New York the other day to attest their determination to stand by him in his campaign.

Yet it has always been true in our politics that congressional campaigns, like other campaigns, only infrequently revolve around what the opposition describe as the central issue. Marcantonio is the most gifted and cantankerous obstructionist seen for many years in Congress. He is that way in politics also. In his long career he has worn every available political label and was not too long ago the congressional nominee of the three parties now trying to beat him. No trick in the book is unknown to Marcantonio; no irrelevance or diversion beyond him; and, in addition, he is the most adept of men in nursing a district and attending to the requirements of the individuals composing it. In other words, he will be a hard man to beat—there.

BEACH AT CONWAY LAKE

Lydia's hand is like a scalloped shell
And with it she would gather up the lake.
She sups it, closing all the fingers well—
The tears run down her face with each mistake.
She will learn to rest upon the blue
Unquiet surface. One day she will thrust
Her brown limbs under, push her body through
The shifting waters with confidence and trust.
But Lydia not Jean nor Elizabeth
Will ever grasp the water in two hands
And she who cries, "Look! Now!" may save her breath
And watch the moisture trickle on the sands.
Lydia may not learn till she is old
That she can have the lake, but not to hold.

"O'Dwyer To Mexico"

Your August 22 editorial, "O'Dwyer to Mexico," seems to have damned this appointment with faint praise. But this can hardly dispose of the matter adequately. In other days, when there was peace in the world, diplomatic appointments in the way of political favor occasioned little comment. Today, however, foreign policy with its front line of diplomats has been elevated to a point of highest importance due to the critical international situation. There is no place now in the world for a diplomatic sinecure, nor can we afford anywhere less than the most capable of men, whose health at least will permit the undertaking of increased responsibilities created by a maze of world problems.

It is indeed unfortunate that the ousting of a career diplomat of the caliber of Walter Thurston comes at a time when the esprit de corps of the foreign service should be most appreciated. The O'Dwyer appointment will take its place in the seeming endless line of foreign policy blunders, now a matter of great concern to the American people. NORMAN S. COOKE

Korea Solution

In view of the rather depressing situation both on the home front and abroad at the present time I wish to pass on to you a note of cheer which I heard recently from my good friend Maj. George Folding Woods, the military commentator. In spite of Major Woods' well-known habit of looking on the brighter side of things I feel that he may have hit on something akin to the word this time.

Major Woods has been giving the present Korean unpleasantness a good deal of thought and has determined that it will end within a month. In fact he sets the date—September 20. This is how the major arrives at this conclusion:

"It is a well-known fact that East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet. All invaders of China and Korea have been scourges who have picked the land clean. Although known by such names as the "Golden Horde," they have actually been relatively small groups of fast moving horsemen who have been able to live off of the country. When all of the food is eaten they move on.

"The Russians, of course, are different. They have invented the massed infantry attack wherein they use huge numbers of men to overwhelm the enemy. Their supply problem is simple; while maneuvering in the Ukraine, the European breadbasket, they simply reach out and take a loaf.

"Now in Korea the Communists have tried to have the best of both worlds. They have the fast moving tanks and the massed infantry. Unfortunately their maneuvering space is now limited to a front roughly 125 miles long. There is no breadbasket to give them infinite supplies of wheat nor can they move on to more favorable areas. They are simply stuck on the Naktong, our Air Force prevents supplies getting to them, they have picked the country bare and will shortly starve."

Catholic "Machine"

I want to apologize for the indiscretion shown by our machine in New York toward Mr. William Kruger (letter published August 19). Now and then the boys get a little out of hand and don't follow the party line. I understand that at present they are allowing anyone regardless of race or creed to get into Ebbets Field. And this business of an unsegregated subway is too much to take. Above all I can't understand how our censors failed to stop the publication of Mr. Kruger's letter.

Because of such weaknesses in our party structure Mr. Kruger may someday wrest control of New York City from us. But he will never get control of the Eighteenth Congressional District where we have been preaching enslavement for some time. We believe in enslavement so much that back in the twenties we broke the hold of the reactionary South on the Democratic Party. We believe in enslavement of capitalists so much that we are now advocating a system of industry councils to give labor a greater voice in management. We believe in dictatorial control over greed, so that every man can earn a living wage.

Now that Mr. Kruger has exposed us we might as well admit it. We have secretly been believing in social justice all along

Garrison in Europe

As an indomitable Treasury watchdog Senator Byrd has many admirers. His proposal to win the cold war with a garrison of three to five million GIs stationed in Europe falls short of his usual perspicacity. True, they would be symbols of our determination to meet aggression with total reprisal. But we would lose more friends in Europe than we would gain. As occupation troops our uninhibited youth are poor ambassadors of good will.

Cold war mobilization of our GIs in Europe would defeat the aims of containing Communism by self-preservation through self-help. We encourage irresponsibility when we mobilize to protect procrastination. Europe must use its own hands to stay the first onslaught of assassins.

Senator Byrd is on sound ground demanding UMT. This provides effective military power with least waste of all-out production.

Abetz' Warning

Mr. W. F. Clarke (letter published August 25) pooh-poohs the charge that the Vatican informed Hitler in August, 1942, of the coming invasion of North Africa, because it is based on the testimony of Otto Abetz, a former Nazi. The "testimony", referred to, however, was not mere verbal testimony given by Abetz at the time of his trial, but was brought out in connection with documentary evidence which had been dug up from a hiding place in the Black Forest, where Abetz had deposited some papers.

This evidence consisted of letters written by Abetz, as Nazi diplomatic representative in France, to Adolf Hitler. According to the New York Times account of June 21, 1946, "In one of these addresses to Hitler, Herr Abetz recalled that he had advised the Fuehrer as early as August, 1942, of the Allies' preparation for the invasion of North Africa which he said he had obtained from Vatican sources." Since this statement was made by Abetz in a letter to Hitler, its effect would naturally be to make the Fuehrer feel more, rather than less, kindly toward the Vatican.

Communists At Home

How long must the war in Korea go on before we realize that the "front" is really here in the United States? How long must we keep sending boatloads of American boys to be slaughtered by hordes of Russian-trained fanatics, before we start fighting the Communists at home?

"Tax Suggestions"

Your August 20 editorial condemnation of an excess profits tax on individuals as "sheer folly" is a discouraging welcome for a proposal which has much to recommend it. Granted some supposed practical difficulties and certain political unpalatability, your newspaper should have recognized the merits.

Take the clearest instance. Corporation Washit in the laundry business would be subject to an excess profits tax on net income over a base amount. Mr. Smith operating a laundry or Smith & Jones partnership operating a laundry can profit without paying such a tax. Why the difference?

Press the argument further. As a result of war orders Corporation Washit opens a new uniform department and puts Mr. Smith in charge at a substantial boost in salary. Corporation Washit is a war profiteer and must pay an excess profits tax on earnings from that department. Mr. Smith pays no excess profits tax on his higher salary and will undoubtedly righteously deny that he is a war profiteer. And Mr. Jones and a few dozen others find themselves employed full time or even overtime in the new department and probably have an easier time getting raises from an employer with a flush business who knows most of the cost of the raises would go in taxes anyway. They pay no excess profits tax.

Aren't all the Smiths and Joneses who, as a result of war-induced prosperity, get better jobs or make more money, war profiteers, too? Won't an excess profits tax on individuals discourage exorbitant wage demands as much as an excess profits tax on corporations is supposed to discourage price increases. Isn't the individual excess profits tax, if anything, more necessary to sop up increased purchasing power and avoid inflation?

So in the interests of taking the profit out of war for everybody, of combating inflation, and of equal sacrifice and fair shares, I would urge an excess profits tax on increases in individual incomes since July 1, 1950. To take care of arguments about "inadequacy" of former pay, the tax should only apply to increases above a liberal subsistence levy, say $3000 for a single man and $500 for each dependent.

The only "sheer folly" in this proposal lies in supposing that individuals moving to better jobs as a result of war induced prosperity can see themselves as war profiteers. Thus, it is politically impractical. Otherwise, the most serious problem would be one of incentives. But equal treatment, inflation and fair sacrifice are powerful reasons for at least striving to overcome the impracticality.

Opportunity In Foreign Policy

By Mark Sullivan

Campaign Issue?

TEN WEEKS from this Tuesday—on November 7, that is—the country will elect a new Congress. The election and the campaign leading up to it intensify the country's anxiety, by their relation to the war in Korea and the whole nexus of conditions of which Korea is merely a momentarily acute manifestation. What attitude to take about that in the campaign, what plea to make to voters, is the function of the respective party organizations and leaderships.

Conceivably, and justifiably, the position of the Republicans as the opposition party could be simple and brief. They could say merely something like this: "For 17 years the party in power has been continuously responsible for our foreign relations. The whole history of our relations, with the Communist government of Russia has taken place under the Presidencies of Roosevelt and Truman. It began with recognition of that government by Roosevelt during his first year in office, after recognition had been withheld by four preceding Presidents.

"During the last nine years, since our entry into the Second World War, the Republicans have followed the principle that foreign relations should be nonpartisan; they have supported the Administration's foreign policy, and have refrained from making foreign relations an issue in election campaigns. The party in power has been responsible—and our foreign relations are what they are. Period."

The Republicans as a party could say that and stop with that. But of course much else will be said by individual Republicans, candidates for Congress and others, and will have such weight as attaches to the quality of the statements and the status of the speakers. It is recognized now that our relations with Russia, the whole nexus of conditions centering about Korea, will have a place in the campaign. The Republicans in Congress will support measures necessary for prosecution of the war; they have already done so with practical unanimity. But the Republicans will distinguish between support of what is necessary for the crisis, and the history of how the crisis came to be.

Of all the statements from Republican sources so far made, there is one that has such authority as to be practically official. It was put out by the five Republicans who composed the total minority party membership on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee—the five men, that is, who among Republicans of any status have had intimate and continuous acquaintance with our policy and actions about foreign relations. The document was signed by four of the five—Senators Smith of New Jersey, Lodge of Massachusetts, Wiley of Wisconsin, Hickenlooper of Iowa. The fifth, Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, was prevented by illness from participating in the writing of the document, but it was stated on his behalf that "he has seen the text and is in general agreement with the viewpoint here expressed by his colleagues."

IN ADDITION to uniqueness of authority, other conditions give elevation and importance to this document. It comes from men of high quality and clear thought, and this appears in what they have written. It is not a partisan appeal, and the occasion for it is not the coming election; rather than that it is a report to the people called for by the crisis in Korea and a statement of conditions and events which over a period of years have led up to the crisis. The three parts into which the report is divided are specified as: (1) an analysis of the events of 1945 which today bears so directly on America's present world position; (2) an analysis of the crucial events which began in 1947; and (3) our recommendations for future action."

The closing sentence of the Republican members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is: "On the basis of honest recognition of past errors, and courageous resolve for the future, we wholeheartedly pledge our unpartisan cooperation to final victory."

In these words is opportunity for President Truman. Like any person in comparable circumstances, he is a prisoner of past errors, some by himself, others by President Roosevelt. If he should try to defend them, he would impair his confidence in himself and the confidence of the country in him. Better for him and for the country than any other possible course initiated by him would be welcome of the Republican tender of cooperation on a course in which the Republicans have equal responsibility. This would save the country from a political campaign incitive of anger and dangerous to unity.

U. N. Misunderstanding

I propose that the UN Security Council spend one of its useless meetings watching the moving picture "Broken Arrow," which describes how peace was made between the Americans and the Apaches.

This is a very serious proposal. I have always been convinced that all enmities among peoples are monstrous misunderstandings. Only blind minds cannot see the foolishness of what is now going on in the world.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Overwork's Making Senate Surly

By Jack Anderson and Fred Blumenthal

(Drew Pearson is back from his vacation and will write the Washington Merry-Go-Round tomorrow.)

THE SENATE is beginning to show signs of overwork. Sessions are growing longer and tempers shorter. Old feuds are flaring up again. Senators are discarding their courtly manners and snapping at each other. The oldesters, such as Connally of Texas, McKellar of Tennessee and George of Georgia, are catnapping more often in the Senate lounge.

Senatorial dispositions also aren't helped by the fact that this is an election year. Senators are torn between the election crisis at home and the Korean crisis that keeps them in Washington. No matter which one they neglect, it will probably cost them votes.

As a result, there is more petty bickering and backbitting, more such incidents as Senator McKellar's attempted assault with a gavel on Congressman Cannon. Most ill-tempered of the lot, McKellar also has given orders to his staff never to mention the name of his junior colleague, Senator Kefauver. The two have been feuding bitterly over patronage.

Two other Senators not on speaking terms are Harry Byrd of Virginia and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, both Democrats. They have been on the outs ever since Humphrey attacked Byrd's pet Committee on Nonessential Expenditures. The Senator from Minnesota brashly suggested that the committee iself was a nonessential expenditure, and Byrd angrily organized the big guns of the Senate to cut Humphrey down to size. In succession, they lambasted the Minnesota freshman, then boycotted him when he tried to reply. The irrepressible Humphrey, however, retaliated by invading Virginia and delivering speeches against Byrd in his own territory.

Another bitter Senate feud involves two Republicans—Ken Wherry of Nebraska and Wayne Morse of Oregon. This has been smoldering ever since Wherry made a campaign contribution to Morse's opponent in the GOP primary six years ago, but it reached its climax on the Senate floor recently.

Wherry tauntingly asked where Morse had been during the debate on civil rights, and Morse replied that he had been campaigning against an opponent whose views were so similar to Wherry's that Morse considered it imperative to oppose him.

Afterward, Wherry stormed into the cloakroom, smashed a fist on the table and announced, "I have taken all I am going to take from that man." A few minutes later, Morse burst into the hallway, white with rage, and told a friend, "I'm not going to take any more from Wherry."

They haven't been speaking since.

Some of the worst feuds, however, are between Senators from the same State. Owen Brewster of Maine is gallant on the surface, but secretly does his best to undercut his charming colleague, Margaret Chase Smith, and GOP Senators Charles Tobey and Styles Bridges of New Hampshire don't even pretend to be friendly any more.

Utah's two Senators, Democrat Elbert Thomas and Republican Arthur Watkins, also don't get along. Their latest tiff was over the unveiling of Brigham Young's statue in the Hall of Fame. Watkins wanted to make the acceptance speech, and even got Thomas' approval in a letter. However, this left out Congressman Walt Granger, a Democrat. So, to soothe Granger's feelings, Thomas wrote Watkins another letter cutting him off the program.

There is also friction between Senators Irving Ives and Herbert Lehman of New York, Joe McCarthy and Alex Wiley of Wisconsin, Henry Dworshak and Glen Taylor of Idaho, Claude Pepper and Spessard Holland of Florida, Milt Young and Bill Langer of North Dakota, Warren Magnuson and Harry Cain of Washington.

All this feuding has led to such irritation in the Senate that Georgia's Walter George left in disgust the other day, shaking his head.

"It's the biggest wonder in the world that we get anything at all done in this bedlam," he complained.

Glamor Girl

SENATE CRIME investigators are anxious to question Virginia Hill, underworld glamor girl who has kept company with such notorious racketeers as Joe Epstein and the late Bugsy Seigel. In fact, Bugsy was murdered in Virginia's Beverly Hills, Calif., home. Currently, Virginia is married to her former ski instructor, Hans Howser, who was interned as an enemy alien during the war. The latest report on Virginia is that she is expecting a baby.

Farm Prices Zoom

THE FARM Credit Administration is considering a crackdown on farm land speculation, as the result of a recent stampede by big city speculators and some farmers to buy up all the farm acreage they can lay their hands on.

What FCA has in mind is to ask Congress for an excess profits tax on land speculation. FCA Governor Ivy Duggan has already discussed this quietly with the Federal Reserve Board.

Meanwhile, farm land prices in the Midwest are spurting, and Duggan fears the situation will get worse unless something is done. Best way to discourage speculators, the FCA chief believes, would be a steep excess profits levy on the turnover of all farm land purchased since the Korean war began.

Double Jeopardy

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has no use for the National Association of Manufacturers, but even less use for the American Medical Association. Chatting with a group of Senators recently, Truman snorted, "The doctors' lobby is worse than the NAM."

Then turning to Senator Claude Pepper, recently defeated in the Florida primary, the President added, "They're the ones who got you, Claude."

At this, Senator Elbert Thomas of Utah, whose reelection is opposed by both the AMA and the NAM, broke in mournfully, "What are you going to do when you've got both the doctors' lobby and the NAM against you?"

Fulton Oursler's Modern Parables

Talent for Drudgery

DEAR FRIENDS AND GENTLE HEARTS:

Not long ago in these columns, I told the tale of a lad with a low I. Q., and ever since I have been getting letters about it. One of the most interesting comes from a frightened young woman. "Yes, a boy can make his way, even when handicapped. But what about a girl? I'm not blonde and beautiful, and I know I'm not very smart, so I'm scared. Know any girls like me who made good?"

I do—and here is the story of Marjorie.

Marjorie lived in a city not far from the Mason and Dixon Line, and a most unhappy lass she was. Her father was a college professor, her mother was the author of several books, and her brother, in the second year of high school, was top man in all his studies and captain of the ball team.

But when Marjorie was born there were no good fairies around her cradle. Of course, a great many persons have a low I. Q.—I have never dared take a test myself—but Marjorie's position was particularly excruciating because she, who was "slow on the uptake" had to live in constant association with three clever minds, and all their brilliant friends.

When they played a simple game like "20 questions," Marjorie never guessed anything right. More often than not, the point of a joke had to be laboriously explained to her. In all her young life she had never said a sparkling thing—nor had she ever done a clever thing to anyone.

They LIVE in a world where everyone is smarter than you are, is a hard life; take Marjorie's word for it. By the time she was 18, this professor's daughter was eating her heart out, even while she continued to smile blankly at the world.

But luckily she met a wonderful psychologist at her father's college—a man of great scientific standing but also a man of religious faith. One day in his laboratory, Marjorie broke down and told this compassionate and understanding friend how dreary and hopeless life seemed to her.

The psychologist knew that her trouble was deep and real. But he pointed out that an intelligence test is only a report on only part of a human personality—and by no means the most important part. Surely Marjorie's life could be changed; there must be a way by which she could find a serenity, peace of mind and a great deal of joy. But how?

"Well, Marjorie," said the psychologist, "there is a very great work for you to do. If you have only the courage to try it, you can be a pioneer in a wonderful development. Everbody knows how you help your mother at home. You are one of the best housekeepers in town. Why not put that wonderful and blessed talent to work?

There is a great shortage of household workers. The average cook doesn't know how to cook and the average maid doesn't know how to keep a place clean. That is because people of taste and refinement and enthusiasm for homemaking have always looked down on domestic work as something beneath them. That's just pure snobbery, of course. How many homes in this town would be glad to have you in domestic service!

"NEVER mind how bad it sounds. No family you worked for would ever look upon you as a servant, in the contemptuous sense. They would begin by trusting you and they would end by thanking God for you. And then—think of something else.

"Your father and mother are brilliant people, true, but you know that college professors earn poor salaries and there is little income from the fine type of book your mother writes. Your folks have a struggle to keep your home together. How are they going to send your brother through college? Why not take him on—go out and work for the money to send him through?"

Against considerable family opposition, Marjorie took a job as housekeeper in a home around the block. The people she worked for treated her as one of the family. Even more remarkable indeed almost incredible to tell, other girls were inspired by Marjorie's example and during the war did the same thing. In her neighborhood, she ennobled the profession of keeping house; lifted its level, brought love to it and sacrifice and taste and care and interest and thus changed the whole nature of her job.

Somewhere along the line, the young son of the family she worked for had a talk with himself. Was there ever such a jewel as Marjorie? Yes—you can write the finish for yourself.

P. S.: They have four children, according to the latest bulletin.

Matter of Fact

Guided Missiles Project Urged

By Stewart Alsop

A GREAT new project, on the scale of the Manhattan District project which made the atomic bomb, is now being urged on President Truman by some of the ablest of his advisers. The purpose of this project would be to "make certain that the United States wins the guided missiles race."

There is no doubt whatsoever that the world is now on the threshold of the grim era when guided missiles will be a decisive factor—probably the decisive factor—in war. The first guided missile to be produced on a large scale is likely to be the ground-to-air, supersonic, target-seeking missile. If produced in quantity and effectively used, this weapon would make virtually obsolete conventional over-the-target bombing by piloted long-range bombers, like the American B-36.

The meaning of this fact is very simple. The United States now relies solely on its atomic superiority to deter the Kremlin, and on long-range strategic bombers to get the bombs to the targets.

A 1947 Forecast

MORE THAN three years ago, this reporter and his partner made a long, careful study of guided missiles. They then reported as follows, in an article in the Saturday Evening Post:

"From its launching platform [the ground-to-air missile] will soar in a few seconds to 60,000 feet, and there, by radar guidance, will strike down the fastest modern bomber as a hawk strikes down a heron . . . Prototypes may well be in the air, here or abroad, in two to five years' time."

This forecast represented the estimate of the best experts, given an all-out effort. And it is deeply significant that the best current estimate reflects very little change after three years—the forecast now is that this country may produce practical air-to-ground missiles in two to four years. This means that, although there has certainly been some progress, an all-out effort has not been made.

Have the Soviets made an all-out effort in this vital field? This question cannot be answered positively. But there are disturbing signs. For example, last month Pravda, echoing a previous statement by Gen. Vassily Stalin, the dictator's son, announced flatly: "No air pirate on whatever airplane he might fly, however fast his airplane might fly and however high he might try to fly, will dare to cross the air frontier of our great peace-loving country."

This sort of thing may be mere bombast. But it is recalled that in October, 1948, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky remarked cryptically in the United Nations that "it is wrong to believe—and this is a very great error of those who so believe—that there is only one state which possesses a monopoly of atomic energy and the atomic bomb." At the time, this, too, was considered mere bombast. But less than a year later, the Kremlin exploded its atomic bomb.

A Theoretical Answer

IN BRIEF, it must be assumed that the Soviet scientists and their captive German colleagues have been attempting by every means to perfect a ground-to-air, target-seeking, supersonic missile. If their efforts have met with success, then Pravda's boasts would have a real substance.

Not even target-seeking missiles, deadly as they are, could protect the whole industry of the Soviet Union—or for that matter of the United States—from atomic bombardment. But enough such missiles, properly used, could make over-the-target bombing of the most vital areas intolerably costly. This means that if the Soviets produce this missile in quantity, before a counter-weapon is found, very little will then stand between the Kremlin and world conquest.

As with all weapons, an answer to the ground-to-air missile exists in theory. The intermediate answer, is the missile's twin, an air-to-ground missile. This would be carried by a conventional bomber, and released perhaps 50 or 100 miles from the target, out of the ground-to-air missile's range. It could then be guided to the target by a radar-television device. And since it, too, would move faster than the speed of sound, it would be virtually invulnerable to interception.

The primary purpose of the proposed new project would be to produce both these weapons, by an all-out effort, in the shortest possible time. In the last few years, we have been spending about 300 million dollars a year on a great variety of guided missiles projects, run rather haphazardly by all the services. This is now considered inadequate. What now is needed is a vastly accelerated effort, with all the guided missiles projects brought under a single authority, and with that authority empowered to spend between one and two billion dollars a year to win the guided missiles race. And there may be very little time to lose, a fact which Truman's advisers are, fortunately, wholly aware.

Our Political Economy

Russia Really Mobilized Labor

By Ysabel Rennie

WE SHOULD study the lessons of Russia's wartime mobilization of manpower. They afford no grounds for complacency.

The German invasion cost the Soviet Union some 20 million persons dead or missing. It destroyed two thirds of the total wealth in territories which before the war contained half of Russia's population and farm land and a third of its industrial output.

The Soviet Union fought the war under handicaps the Germans believed were insuperable. Its standard of living was so low as to seem incapable of going lower. Productivity was poor, and so was general technical competence. There was an apparent lack of manpower reserves for army and industry. And, finally, the Germans destroyed a major share of its economic potential and much of its manpower.

The Russians proved how flexible a labor force can be. Their most important step was the mobilization of women, who in 1940 made up 38 percent of the labor force. By 1942 the proportion had risen to 53 percent. In certain fields the rise was spectacular: women tractor drivers, for instance, increased from 4 percent of the total in 1940 to 45 percent two years later.

BEHIND these statistics lies the brutal effort of a country where the heaviest tasks are done by hand. Women often labored in the fields for 12 and 14 hours, then went home to cultivate the family garden, chop wood for the fire, draw water, do the washing and ironing. On Sundays they queued up for rations they had no time to draw during the week.

To get youths into the labor force, the government in 1940 imposed stiff tuition fees for high schools and colleges. This shut out all but scholarship students and the children of the upper bureaucracy. Between 1939 and 1942 the proportion of workers and employes under 18 more than doubled.

A labor draft in 1943 brought an additional 7,609,000 persons into the labor force. At the same time that this manpower mobilization was under way, working hours were rising sharply. The average number of hours per month worked in industry rose 22 percent in a two-year period. Workers generally were put on piece rates. Work standards were periodically revised upward in the classic speedup system.

The record of labor on collective farms is hard to believe. According to official Soviet statistics, the total number of labor days per ablebodied worker rose from 254 in 1940 to 352 in 1942, with most of the burden falling on women. In an occupation as seasonal as agriculture, in a climate like that of Russia and with most of the labor done by hand, this meant a prodigious human effort.

A Limited Sphere

THE Soviet government was both ruthless and effective in its use of manpower. It was channeled into the army and into war production. Civilian output all but vanished.

In spite of the mass destruction of industry by the Germans, and in the face of a declining output of steel, the Russians raised their output of tanks from 1000 a month in July, 1941, to a monthly average of 2500 in 1942-44. In the same period plane production rose from 1800 a month to 3300.

There is no doubt that the United States deserves much of the credit for economic aid through Lend-Lease. But this fact should not lull us into underestimating the Russian effort. The Soviet experience showed that a low living standard and low productivity are no deterrent to a successful war effort provided the proper economy is used.

In Russia this was summed up in the slogan "All for the Front." Specifically, the whole Russian effort went into a limited sphere of weapons and warfare: a mass land army equipped with overwhelming firepower in tanks and artillery. The Russians did not spread their effort thin; they concentrated it. Hitler helped them to victory by fighting their kind of war with their kind of weapons.

Our Own Terms

THIS lesson should not be lost on us. In an infantry slugging match, manpower is Russia's advantage and specialization her secret weapon. But concentration on only one type of warfare can also be a weakness, provided the war is not fought as she is prepared to fight it.

The Korean war has shown once again that there is still no substitute for the infantry. The lesson, however, should not be misread. We can never mobilize the infantry Russia can: her manpower is vastly superior and she can, if necessary, draw on the hordes of Asia.

Strategic airpower may have been overrated. Undoubtedly we dreamt too much of a push-button war with Buck Rogers weapons. Even so, in one thing our military planners were right: if we must some day fight in another world war it should be on our own terms and with the weapons at which we excel.

Our strength lies in versatility and technical excellence, not in numbers. We should not throw our advantage away on the land mass of Eurasia against odds which we could never hope to surmount.

The American Game

France Will Lobby

By J. J. Servan-Schreiber

Correspondent for Le Monde of Paris

THE COMMUNISTS in France have a new name for the French government. They call it "the government of the memorandum"—the memorandum being the now-famous second memorandum on armament problems sent by the French government to Washington, stating the French views on the necessary steps to be taken in the present international crisis.

The content of the memorandum is still officially secret, but its main lines are known. The French propose that a three-point program be put into action immediately:

1. A common Atlantic military establishment, with standardization of armament and unified command.

2. A financial pool of the Atlantic nations to support a common arms production.

3. A centralized Atlantic bureau for political and diplomatic affairs, in fact, an Atlantic foreign ministry.

In other words, the French proposal is to establish in fact, if not yet in name, a working Atlantic Federation. Only such an immediate unification of effort will convince the Soviets that an all-out war will not pay and that a number of limited wars will be accepted with by the Atlantic federation.

This policy was started last April by the government founded by Georges Bidault, but in a limited form. The Korean crisis has led the present government to commit itself further along that line.

The American reaction to the French proposals has been very cool. It is felt in Paris that the American Administration is still not very interested in long-range plans for Atlantic unification. It is merely interested in national rearmament efforts, each nation with its methods. Of course, American financial aid will be forthcoming.

But it seems, to American eyes, to be entirely premature to talk of unified command and political centralization.

The same kind of American brush-off was forthcoming last April after the Bidault proposal for an Atlantic high council. But today there is a big difference. Until now, French politicians have thought of America as a monolithic political entity. Once the Administration had said no, it was no. So last April the matter was put aside for the time being—not so today.

The French have observed the American political scene in the last six weeks. They have come to the conclusion that, on foreign policy matters and cold war conduct, there is a running battle of influence between different groups, mainly in both Houses of Congress but also within the Administration. So they have decided to carry on with their policy inside the American political arena.

They are convinced that considerable potential backing exists in American politics for Atlantic unification and they will put France's political weight in the same boat. The next thing to watch is by whom and how the French lobby will be built up in Washington.

The New Crop of Teen-Agers

GI Is Sobered, but Not Panicked

By Saul Pett

NEW YORK—Like his older brother after Pearl Harbor, the average teen-age GI is going off to war with no illusions about liking it—just a grim resolve to get it over with.

Generally, he joined up for what looked like a peaceful interlude of travel. Now he faces the immediate prospect of fighting in Korea, and he is stunned but not panicked.

This descriptive report comes from Associated Services, successor to United Service Organizations as a morale coordinating agency. To help plan expansion of facilities operated by the YMCA, National Catholic Community Service and National Jewish Welfare Board, Associated Services asked directors of 86 servicemen's clubs at home and abroad for an evaluation of the 1950 GI's morale.

The replies indicate that the explosion in Korea has produced an overall sobering and maturing effect, especially among the 365,000 teen-agers in uniform. There is a new concern with serious, practical, personal problems, and many servicemen who never went before are now attending religious services.

FROM an area where troops have been shipping out, came this report:

"The men shipping out are mostly teen-agers. Their general attitude seems to be that of one who is about to get a bitter dose of medicine—'might as well get it over with because it's going to happen anyway.' Many of them seem to be putting on a big front, trying to cover up the fact that they have been stunned.

"They were too young during the mobilization for World War II to be emotionally effected by that. Many had older brothers or other relatives in the service, but now they realize it is they who are being sent out, and they are not waving goodbye to someone else.

". . . If they are actually scared, they're not showing it much. However, the stories of atrocities have made some of them a little more sober in their attitude toward war. Many of them joined the service never expecting to do any more than visit a few foreign ports, get a little adventure and work off a little energy."

The director of a club serving a large military post in the South said:

"These men are definitely sobered. They feel that the vacation is ended and they have a job to do. There is no griping. The general opinion is, 'This had to come.'"

A club director at an Eastern naval base said civilian teen-agers are more vocal and anxious about the Korean situation than those in uniform.

Among the older servicemen shipping West, the chief concern is their wives and children and the hundreds of little details involved in getting them settled. Club directors reported that there is worry, sometimes hysteria, among the younger wives; the older Army wives, the ones who went through the last war, are more inclined to accept the situation with such comments as, "I'm going home to get a job," or, "I'll follow him to the West Coast and then we'll see what happens."

Associated Services now plans a gross budget of $9,600,000, with $3,900,000 of it to be sought from the general public through Community Chest drives and another $600,000 through special New York and Chicago campaigns. Servicemen themselves will provide nearly half the total budget through nominal charges for personal services and certain club activities.

Congress Letting the Well Run Dry

By Harry N. Stull

THERE HAS BEEN much discussion in civic circles over the apparent lack of attention being given by Congress to our water system. The Commissioners six months ago advised Congress of the necessity for a water plant expansion program and said it could no longer be financed on a pay-as-you-go basis. The increased use of water, both by Government agencies and private citizens, has made certain capital improvements necessary.

STULL

Up to 1947, the Federal Government paid nothing for its water. In that year, and in subsequent appropriations, Congress set aside one million dollars of the 12-million-dollar Federal payment for the water fund. Of course there is no certainty as to the permanency of this appropriation; proof of this is the arbitrary cut about to be made in the Federal payment for next fiscal year.

The Federal Government consumes 10 billion gallons of water a year, which, if used by individuals, would bring in $200,000 more than the million dollars paid by the Government.

* * * *

The Public's Burden

As anticipated, the PUC hearings on the Potomac Electric Co.'s application for high rates have brought about a head-on collision between Pepco and the Capital Transit Co. It was testified that the increase would amount to $471,000 for residential consumers and $1,635,000 for commercial users. Very little has been said about the public's share in this increase.

Not only would residential users pay $471,000 additional, but the $710,000 which the District government would have to pay would come out of the pockets of District taxpayers. The same is true of the $661,000 increase which Capital Transit would have to bear. That would be paid by bus and streetcar riders. It would seem, therefore, that the residents of this city have a very large stake in the Pepco rate case.

The interruption in the hearings was caused by the commission's demand that Pepco submit figures showing the cost or servicing each class of customers. This was occasioned by the wide range of increases requested for different groups. When these figures are available, the commission will be in a better position to determine how the increased charges, if any, shall be distributed among the different classes of users.

Crime Council Boosted

The proposal to establish a permanent law enforcement council here to assist in reducing crime, received the support of the Washington Criminal Justice Association in its annual report. This association has fearlessly criticized existing law enforcement procedures, and its advocacy of an independent citizen body to work for better coordination between agencies charged with prevention and prosecution of crime, should help greatly in the accomplishment of that objective. Such a council should be able to bring about better cooperation among judges, prosecutors, police and probation and parole officers.

We cannot continue forever to apologize for Washington's annual crime statistics. A concerted move by all civic organizations should result in a permanent citizen council that would constitute a forward step in crime prevention. The Davis Subcommittee of the House District Committee has been active along this line, and its final report may be helpful in solving the problem.

Industry on the Move in the South

Benjamin Muse is on vacation. In his absence, his column is being written by State political leaders. His guest today, Robert Whitehead, attorney, of Lovingston, Va., is leader of the independent and liberal elements in the General Assembly, where he has been a member of the House of Delegates since 1942. He is widely mentioned as a possible candidate for Governor in 1953.

By Robert Whitehead

NOT SINCE the Civil War has Virginia been presented with such opportunities for real progress.

Industry is on the move. It is Southward bound. A substantial portion of it can be acquired for Virginia if such is the real desire of our leaders and they aggressively go after it. In this situation, Virginia's position is strategic. She is a part of the South, but the gateway to the North. Located on the Atlantic Seaboard, with the marvelous port of Hampton Roads, her great natural resources, her fine climate and her splendid people, Virginia is singularly blessed.

WHITEHEAD

With the coming of new industries we will have increased payrolls, a more diversified economy and enlarged resources.

Increased payrolls will result in a rise in the income level of our people and an improvement in their standard of living. This will stimulate trade. It will open up additional and increased outlets for our agricultural, horticultural and dairy products.

The working man spends his money. When the wages paid him are pumped into the arteries of trade, the effects of the transfusion are invigorating all down the line, even back to and including the producer.

Change Made in 1928

FOR GENERATIONS Virginia was almost exclusively agricultural. Little by little industry took root. Gradually it expanded.

About 25 years ago a determined effort was launched to attract industry to Virginia. In 1928 our constitution was amended to that end. Our leaders extended a welcoming hand. Considerable progress was made. Today industry occupies an important position in our State.

But a change has taken place. Our political leaders awoke to the fact that more industry meant more wage earners and that more industrial workers meant more voters whose political views did not generally accord with theirs. This posed a threat to their continuance in power. It called for a reappraisal of their policy regarding industrialization.

The real strength of the dominant political organization in Virginia is to be found in rural areas and is based mainly upon an agricultural economy. In the light of this, it is to be expected that those in political power will make every effort to preserve the existing order.

This is retarding Virginia's development. It is holding her back. With more shoulders to the wheel and fewer feet applying the brakes, Virginia can move forward rapidly.

'Poor Boy at the Frolic'

THE TIME has come when Virginia should gladly admit to her economic order a new partner—industry. Despite claims to the contrary, there is no real conflict between agriculture and industry. Instead, each will supplement and support the other and provide Virginia with a well-rounded and diversified economy. Both will benefit.

At the 1950 session of the Virginia General Assembly, it was charged, and denied, that the 1948 income-tax increases (for which, by the way, I voted) had resulted in discouraging, if not frightening, prospective industry from locating in Virginia. If these charges are true, we should reexamine the situation and adopt corrective measures. Virginia cannot afford to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs.

The people of Virginia should remember that their economic problems cannot be disassociated from politics. The State has the power to tax and to regulate, both of which vitally affect business. Laws have a direct bearing on business. They are passed as the result of political action. They are administered by persons politically chosen. Equally important is the attitude of those in power. They can hold out a welcoming hand or extend the cold shoulder.

Our people should never forget that the "big money" is not made by the growers. It is not made by the tradesmen. It is made by those engaged in manufacturing enterprises. Therefore, if we are to share equitably in the Nation's great economic advance, we must get our just proportion of her industrial resources. Otherwise, Virginia will become the poor boy at the economic frolic.

Political considerations, however compelling, should not be permitted to stunt Virginia's growth. They should not be allowed to deny to the rank and file of her people a higher average income and an improved standard of living.

Virginia has many talents. May she count them, every one apart, and wisely use them all.

Some Other Fellows in the Race

By James P. Connolly

TRAILING the front runners, Governor Lane and George Mahoney, in the race for the Democratic nomination for Governor are three entries running so far behind that they are all but lost in the leaders' dust. They are Stephen B. Peddicord, Herbert W. Larrabee and Harry Kemper.

None has ever held office. None has any organized support, campaign organization or campaign fund in the ordinary sense, and voters may wonder what they are doing in politics, let alone trying to start at the top of the ladder and presumably work their way down.

CONNOLLY

Well, each of the outsiders has his reason, and in the case of Peddicord, an experienced also-ran, the explanation is simplicity itself. To be Governor is the fixed, not to say fixated, ambition of his life acquired when he was a small jobholder at the Legislature in the Ritchie administration.

In Baltimore, where Peddicord, an electrician, has his home, business and campaign headquarters (all at the same place, 407 West Lombard st.), his lofty aim is sympathetically understood. He gets a lot of fun out being in politics, if only on the fringe, and Baltimoreans enjoy him.

He looks back on his Annapolis experience as just a period of "understudy" to the late Governor Ritchie, as he puts it. He knows the State House jobs he had were only small potatoes but were merely a means of getting a foot in the door—"anything to be down there."

The Ward Boss Manner

PEDDICORD began his political activity in Baltimore at 16 as a runner for the late Frank Kelly, Eddie Gross and Magistrate Tormollan, local district leaders, and later went to Annapolis under their auspices as a member of the legislative small fry. It is obvious that they were his idols as well as sponsors.

Today Peddicord is a past master of the political front or ward boss manner—the close huddle and the art of making whispered confidences out of the commonplace.

In the Annapolis air, he grew to regard Ritchie as "the greatest administrator who ever lived" and his own political ambition matured, only his grasp of the practicalities of politics did not quite keep pace. He tends to overemphasize the superficialities.

He first ran for Governor in 1938, after Ritchie's death, and has been running ever since, being by now the runningest candidate in the game. He has run in every gubernatorial election since 1938 and in one senatorial and one mayoralty race, even though he was not always entered officially—due to circumstances outside politics. Once his filing fee was "liberated" on its way to Annapolis. It, too, is still running.

Peddicord's senatorial and mayoralty races were mere trial runs to pass the time while waiting his turn as Governor. He was not interested in the offices but only in "keeping his name before the public." From a slow political start he gained strength tremendously. In the last election he got 4500 votes. In his first, he got none. He forgot to vote for himself.

His candidacy is unique in one respect: he said he accepts positively no campaign contributions, and the public takes him strictly at his word. Still, he has all the usual campaign accessories—cards, buttons, etc.—and seems able and happy to absorb the expense.

He is also the carpenter of his own campaign platform, combining the best features of all the others, even though they sometimes conflict. For instance, he is for both the Chesapeake Bay bridge and the bay ferries. He is not borrowing the bay bridge plan from Governor Lane, he said; the Democratic Party borrowed it from him four years ago and slipped it under Lane when the Governor wasn't looking.

Others Are Veterans

LARRABEE, retired Navy lieutenant of 26 years' service, now living at Glen Burnie, was moved to become a candidate by his interest in a veterans' bonus—though not for himself. A bonus would not compensate him for his campaign costs. He said he was outraged by Governor Lane's warning that he would veto any bonus proposal that did not provide its own means of payment.

Larrabee, who has been attending law school under the GI bill, has a natural flair for oratory, even in conversation.

Kemper, another veteran and an East Baltimore grocer, also was inspired to become a candidate by his interest in a bonus bill and an old age pension—though not for himself. He and Larrabee are underrating the organizational force against them but are counterbalancing it in their own way.

Larrabee is campaigning among veterans, civic and fraternal groups, Kemper among the salesmen who call on him. Kemper reported that his candidacy recently had "a wonderful boost" in "the food world." If "the food world" can do it, b'hoys, Kemper is in.

TELEVISION-PLAGUED parents don't have to surrender their children helplessly to this modern Pied Piper, says Better Homes and Gardens. Authors Dorothy Diamond and Frances Tenbaum spring to the rescue with suggestions on how to "make TV serve your family, not sever it."

Banning a set from the house won't help matters, they conclude. "Like the automobile and the airplane, television is here to stay. The challenge is how to live with it happily."

Lay down some rules, then get other parents in your P-TA to cooperate, so your offspring can't complain that the other kids watch more often, they suggest.

And don't worry too much about blood and thunder programs for kids over 6. "They may help a youngster to blow off aggressive steam, or learn to pooh-pooh fear."

THE United States is in for a major manpower shortage, Hans H. Landsberg predicts in the Reporter, in spite of a 19 million jump in the country's population in the last decade.

Trouble is, the increase falls among the very young or those over 55, who contribute least to peacetime production or wartime fighting, says the author.

Ranks of the country's 15- to 19-year-olds have been thinned by two million since 1940, according to Landsberg. His conclusion: "Failure to strike the proper balance in using manpower for production of weapons and the raising of forces to use them, could prove fatal to us in modern war."

IDEAS AND MEN: The Story of Western Thought. By Crane Brinton. Prentice-Hall. $6.

A HISTORY of the answers men have given to the "Big Questions" about life and the universe. Dr. Brinton takes on the job of mapping out the ethics, religion, philosophy and to some extent the science of the three ages of Western civilization: the Graeco-Roman, the medieval and the modern. The fact that all of this is encompassed in 550 pages indicates a degree of sketchiness. The Inquisition, for example, gets exactly one brief mention in connection with another matter. In general, however, the book is a useful and at times an extremely perceptive analysis of trends of thought. It is given direction by Dr. Brinton's own idea—that we must develop a "realistic, pessimistic democracy" in order to survive and to be worthy of survival.

Georges Schreiber's jacket design for "Owen Glen," by Ben Ames Williams

Williams' Book Needed a Blue Pencil

A Faint Resemblance to John L.

By Sterling North

OWEN GLEN. By Ben Ames Williams. Houghton, Mifflin. 629 pp. $3.75.

JOHN L. LEWIS has made himself so unpopular throughout the country that most Americans will instinctively resent a sympathetic novel about any character even faintly resembling him.

Owen Glen perhaps is not intended as a fictional portrayal of young Lewis. Yet there are enough coincidences to make the reader wonder.

WILLIAMS

Both Owen and John L. were born in 1880. Both are of Welsh stock. Both had fathers named Tom who mined all day and spent half the night as organizers of the Knights of Labor. Both worked for a few years in the mines, but managed in one way or another to get an informal education and were particularly interested in Shakespeare.

In both cases the fathers were fighters and the mothers of the quiet, shy, retiring sort. Because of the belligerence of the fathers, both families were poor. Both Owen and John L. soon discovered their ability to hold an audience, and both were physically aggressive. Both were introduced to the classics by women they later married. And both were soon labor organizers in their own right.

Beyond this, it is hard to judge, since the story of Owen Glen, although it runs to more than 250,000 windy and repetitious words, ends when Owen is 19.

Despite all this, Glen may not be Lewis. His early scene of action is Ohio, while Lewis first ranted and roared out in Iowa. Glen is attractive, has many of the finer feelings, and above all learns at an early age to control his temper. Glen becomes important in United Mine Workers politics earlier than Lewis did.

Feeling of a Decade

IF YOU can curb your prejudices long enough to get into this book, you may find yourself reasonably interested. Williams, mostly by piling one sentence on top of another, manages to convey the feeling of the decade, the atmosphere of the Ohio town, and particularly the plight of the miners.

Imagine working 9 or 10 hours a day six days a week in a dangerous, badly ventilated mine. In such cramped quarters you could seldom stand and must often kneel at your work. Since the miner must timber his own room and remove the shale, two to four tons of coal a day was maximum production. And when the pay was cut to 45 cents a ton to the miner, a man could work full time and still see his family in need.

There was no doubt in those days about the miners' real grievances, no doubt about their heartless exploitation at the hands of the mine owners, no doubt that strikes and violence were justified in view of their desperate condition. These are facts most Americans do not know or will not admit when they rail at Lewis and his present-day ruthlessness. It should further be remembered that labor learned many of its dirtiest tricks from capitalists of the robber baron decades. (This does not, of course, excuse present Lewis tactics.)

Owen Glen, brought up in such difficult times, rises to the need of his fellow miners. By the end of the book he is a vice president of the subregion and on his way to power.

Meanwhile he has been befriended by the local newspaper editor, has courted, but fortunately not married, two young girls, has continued to love his mother and sister, and finally realizes his true affection for his former school teacher.

Rich Political Portrait

THIS novel has certain virtues. It gives a rich picture of the Administrations of Benjamin Harrison, Cleveland (second term) and McKinley as seen from an Ohio town of 5000 souls. One sees the life of the town, its theatrical entertainments, what it considered humor, how it reacted to the war with Spain (Owen got as far as the poisoned beef in Florida), and something of the economics of an era often viewed nostalgically by soft-headed oldsters.

The Glens lived in a two-room company shack. When the mine owner raised the rent from $4 a month to $6, they could not imagine where they could find the extra $2. When Owen needed a suit of clothes, it was a major crisis.

True, butter then sold for 14 cents a pound and other commodities were at a comparable level. But the Glens were so poor that during one strike Owen's worn-out mother unraveled old socks of neighboring miners, dyed the wool and reknit them for 5 cents a pair to keep her family from starving. One brother had already been killed in a mine disaster. And before the end of the book, old Tom loses both feet in the mine.

Under such conditions, one can understand the dedication of a serious boy like Owen Glen to his fellow workers.

Ben Ames Williams has written better books. Most of the characters except Owen and the newspaper editor are slightly hazy. The device of using jumbled newspaper Local Items to carry forward basic but undigested material might have served if handled sparingly. But Williams, having hit upon this trick, vastly abuses it by continuous repetition.

The big scenes are not fully realized. Most of the sentences are clumsy. The dialogue is strictly amateurish. And the whole effect makes one wonder why some editor at Houghton, Mifflin didn't use the blue pencil.

Grade B fiction.

Life of Ease

Polynesians Shun Strife

THE REASONABLE LIFE. Clifford Gessler. The John Day Co. $2.75.

ONE of the products of our present complex civilization has been a horde of books and essays telling us how to live our lives and not crumple under the strains and tensions of modern speed. We have had advice all the way from how to obtain "peace of mind" to "how to stop worrying and start living." Now we are presented with "The Reasonable Life."

The author contends the folks who have found the "reasonable life" are the natives of Polynesia. Their approach to life is direct. Each day they are in contact with nature.

Each person has a job to do, and is responsible for some contribution either to the family or to the community. No one is on relief. They are rich in their own culture with language, chants and dances carried down by families through generations. They provide their own recreation and know nothing of commercial entertainment.

They are described as a dignified people with true strength of character; a people more concerned with loyalty, honesty, tolerance and kindness than with success. Success to them is living quietly and calmly.

Clifford Gessler became interested in Polynesia shortly after leaving the Chicago Daily News to become the night editor of the Honolulu Advertiser in 1921. Since then he has lived among the Polynesians, studying their history and civilization; and has written several books about the islands.

In this book, he attempts to apply the merits of their life to our civilization.

The book as a whole is interesting. The ideas presented by Mr. Gessler are not at all farfetched. Particularly in this day of crisis after crisis, many of his suggestions carry real logic. RAMONA RANDALL.

Import Gives Inkling Of British Austerity

THE SATURDAY BOOK: Ninth YEAR. Edited by Leonard Russell. Macmillan.

WHEN last December, for my holiday book review section, W. Somerset Maugham chose four books for Christmas giving, he mentioned one which was then unavailable in America and virtually unknown on this side of the Atlantic, "The Saturday Book."

In England, this remarkable and unpredictable annual is in its ninth successful year. I am surprised that so successful a literary potpourri has not acquired an American following and has not even been imported until this issue.

Perhaps this "national institution" will seem a trifle quaint and British to some Americans. To others it will have almost the nostalgic charm it seems to have for the inhabitants of the British Isles, who are already looking back with a passionate sense of loss to the good bad old days when it was still possible to get a meal you could eat in London, still possible to shop, still possible to travel, to laugh and to enjoy life.

The Puritan drabness of modern England, with its "perverse satisfaction" in "needless austerities," may indeed have furnished the cultural vacuum, the spirtual starvation which motivates the avid readers of this book.

Consumers' Foods

FACED every day with the dreary and the utilitarian, the Englishman revels in this book in the beautiful though often useless. Here are magnificent reproductions in full color of Bristol and Lambeth Delftware, Renassance and eighteenth century cameos and medallions, moths, old clocks and Victorian paperweights, carved meerschaum pipes and the ultimate in sheer luxury, Benvenuto Cellini's gold salt cellar.

A whole little gallery of paintings is here reproduced with excellent fidelity of color from lush Renoir to cameo-clear Zoffany. There are unsurpassed photographs of Siamese cats and of sheep on the Hampshire Downs. And to remphasize the lack of consumers' goods, there are pictures of shop windows, beautifully arranged, and filled with nothing you particularly need or would care to buy.

One element which has made all of the Saturday Books fascinating is the series of discoveries and rediscoveries among the arts of the English. I was completely unaware, for instance, that the famous nonsense poet Edward Lear was in his youth a painter of birds, almost as talented as our own Audubon. If you do not believe it, examine the full-color reproductions in this book, particularly those dealing with the parrot family. And I had forgotten that some of the minor eighteenth century lyricists (Samuel Derrick for instance) did verses not unworthy of the better known minor Elizabethans.

Nash Is Answered

ONE amusing exchange of witticism and criticism in this book is Ogden Nash's vitriolic attack on our island dependency entitled, "England Expects," which is answered in equally vitriolic style and in Nash's own type of verse by Virginia Graham. Probably not since the War of 1812 have there been more effective bombs bursting in air between major American and English batteries.

In general, this is the most varied, interesting and provocative collection of essays, articles and pictures we have had in recent years from England. But its principal function is to show what England was and only by painful omission what England is.

Almost Too Much About the Smalls

Acid Etches a Family Portrait

THE THOUSAND DEATHS OF MR. SMALL. By Gerald Kersh. Doubleday. 377 pp. $3.50.

GERALD KERSH has written an acrid novel of family conflict that will stick in the mind like a bit of long-since-overheard smut.

The Mr. Small named in the title was prone to have the large, economy-size snivels in a manner that would arouse indifference on the part of anyone but a paid psychiatrist or Hettie, "that sloppy poultice of a woman" who was his wife. She adored him and called them "moods," and told the children he had a "pain."

Charlie Small would throw himself on his bed, push his knees up to his chin, grasp his ankles, close his eyes and try to understand himself. These oozy occurrences had increased in frequency over a period of years from an approximately bimonthly rhythm to a semiweekly one.

Charlie, living over the past, takes the reader with him.

Nominal New Deal

YISROEL SCHMULOWITZ had left Cracow in Galicia in the 1880s to avoid compulsory military service, and had come to London with a few groschen and a trade, cobbling. Yisroel and his friend, the humpbacked garment worker, Solly Schwartz, were content to ogle the girls on their weekend promenades until a marriage broker got hold of Yisroel.

Yisroel, who was not long on intelligence, was soon tied to Millie, whose family had been in England long enough to change its name from Moses to Moss.

The marriage did not start off auspiciously. Millie, not content with a marital change of name, changed Yisroel's too, from Schmulowitz to Small. She would have changed the Yisroel to Rollo, but he stood firm; and finally, in compromise, the Yisroel was translated as Israel and the initial "I" adopted for business purposes.

Millie, with her pretensions, her ignorance, her self-pity, her jealousy of her sisters and her selfishness—and I. Small, with his bewildered ignorance, his weakness even in anger, his self-pity—fought back and forth all the years, and begot Charlie and a sister.

If I. Small was short on intelligence, Solly Schwartz was not. Single-minded, growing more ruthless as time went on, he achieved wealth and a knighthood. But he never forgot his friend, I. Small, helping him out financially several times and giving young Charlie a job in which he advanced to reasonable prosperity.

Sir Solomon Schwartz had been contemptuous of Charlie to start with. There was nothing to change his attitude over the years. Charlie was as spineless as his father.

When Charlie, yet single, eloped with Ivy Narwall, a gentile lass whose spirit had been beaten out of her by her parents, and her mother pursued her, Charlie fled rather than face the old battleax. All the years afterward, Charlie moaned the loss of Ivy, hated his mother's choice, Hettie.

Chip Off Old Blockhead

IF Charlie was the victim of his parents, he was also the child of them. I. Small used a rolled newspaper to beat Charlie, Charlie used a rolled copy of "Child Psychology" magazine to beat his offspring. When Charlie proposed to the widowed Ivy that he leave his wife and children, and she her children, and they fly England together, and at the last moment she didn't go through with this second elopement, he upbraided her in the manner of his mother.

For a time, Solly Schwartz is a sympathetic character, seemingly the only character for whom one can feel more than the flicker of pity that I. Small occasionally sparks, but in the end Solly is just another huckster.

So Gerald Kersh's story is mostly an acid, unsympathetic portrayal of a family that might have moved next door to Leopold Bloom in "Ulysses."

Much as one may admire on artistic grounds the brilliant job that Kersh has done, the Small family is still like the book on penguins that the little girl read. The book told her, it will be remembered, more than she really wanted to know about penguins.—LEE GROVE.

Cove-by-Cove Scrutiny

A Cruising Baedecker For Chesapeake Area

By Don Olesen

A CRUISING GUIDE TO THE CHESAPEAKE: By Fessenden S. Blanchard. Dodd, Mead. 223 pp. Ill. $5.

The great, wide Chesapeake Bay, haunt of yachtsmen since the days of Capt. John Smith, gets a cove-by-cove scrutiny from Author Blanchard, who, with Robert F. Duncan, wrote "A Cruising Guide to the New England Coast."

The result is a sort of cruising man's Baedecker for the Chesapeake Bay area.

Blanchard went about his job from the top down. In August, 1948, he flew over the Chesapeake in a light plane, then cruised it from end to end in his own auxiliary sloop, "Sea Fever."

When his own boat was laid up for the winter, he shifted to the boats of fishermen, oystermen, Coast Guardsmen and Army Engineers. And he finds the Chesapeake Bay "good—very good" from the slant of the cruising yachtsman.

From City Island

His book deals with specific coves, harbors, rivers; their suitability for refuge in a blow, their attractiveness and general interest, their history, their physical facilities (gas, water, ice, provisions) and how to take their buoys.

Also included is a chapter on the best route from City Island, N. Y., to Sandy Hook for "Yankee" yachtsmen who want to visit the Chesapeake, and another on planning a cruise on the bay.

Spaced in with detailed description are tidbits such as these:

The bridge at Edgewater on the South River will open on signal, "though in a somewhat unhurried way." On Smith Island, half the population is named Evans. On Tangier Island, half the population is named Crockett, and the island was bought from the Indians for a "couple of overcoats." Weddings in the Eastern Shore's Chester River area used to take place at 7 a. m. so honeymooners could catch the 8 a. m. boat to Baltimore.

Names of creeks, coves and "gunholes" (tiny, nearly landlocked ponds with just enough water to float a cruising boat) are wonderful in themselves: Old Man Creek, Cattail Creek, Bivalve Cove, Mother Hawkins Hole, Slaughter Creek, Ordinary Point.

Aerial Photos

The book is well illustrated with aerial photos of the ports and rivers Blanchard describes, and with reproductions of Coast and Geodetic Survey charts. But the serious reader would do well to arm himself with the original charts for a broader, over-all view.

Possibly the only serious objection to a work of this kind stems from the fact that time and tide wait for no author. Many of Blanchard's descriptions of sand bars, facilities, buoys, etc., were based on information gathered as early as the winter of 1949.

Since then, bars have shifted, buoys have been moved and facilities changed. The dock with five feet of water may have only three today.

But on the whole, used in conjunction with up-to-date charts and a degree of caution, the "Cruising Guide" should be a useful addition to the cruising man's library.

A Late Victorian Satire Keyed for Today's Reader

THE NEW REPUBLIC. By W. H. Mallock. Edited by J. Max Patrick. University of Florida Press. $4.50.

MR. PATRICK brings forth a useful new edition of this late Victorian satire on such figures as Pater, Jowett, Matthew Arnold, T. H. Huxley and John Tyndall. Ruskin alone held the author's reverence. The novel is witty—in fact, frequently comic—but only if Mallock's contemporary references are understood. To help the modern reader, Mr. Patrick has added a helpful key to the characters and a bevy of explanatory notes.

Mallock's own ideas are represented by Otho Laurence, a pleasant young man who is the host for a weekend party at his uncle's villa by the sea. He and his carefully selected guests take on a Platonic venture: The construction of an ideal republic.

Their chief concern is what should be the pursuits, pleasures and beliefs of the highest class (themselves, naturally). The whole affair has such a quaintly archaic quality that one can hardly believe Mallock wrote only 75 years ago.

Although he wrote "The New Republic" while still a student at Oxford, the arch conservatism of Mallock's later years and his deathbed acceptance of the Roman Catholic faith are already visible in his work.—KATHLEEN L. BARBER.

Better Than Most First-Rate Fiction

Diary of a Top-Secret Exploit

By Kathleen L. Barber

ILL MET BY MOONLIGHT, by W. Stanley Moss. Macmillan. 192 p., $2.50.

THE CAPTURE of German General Kreipe by British secret agents on Crete was one of the top-secret stories of World War II. It has now been released in the best possible form—the tense, exciting and highly literate diary of his captor, W. Stanley Moss, a 22-year-old captain in the Coldstream Guards at the time of this adventure.

STANLEY MOSS

On a night in April, 1944, Moss and a band of Cretan companions landed secretly on the island (then swarming with German patrols) by way of motor launch from Cairo. Traveling on foot by night, hiding in caves by day, constantly aided by Cretan shepherds and guerillas, the raiding party planned and executed the abduction of General Kreipe, commander of the German forces on Crete, between German HQ at Arkhanais and the general's quarters at the Villa Ariadne.

A Problem in Morse

THERE remained the task of getting the general off the island. Pursued by German patrols, taking good care of the captive "precious baby." After working back to the coast through enemy cordons for evacuation to Cairo, Moss and his cohort, Paddy (Patrick Leigh-Fermor), suddenly discovered that they didn't know how to spell in dots and dashes the code signal which they had to flash to the British launch coming to get them off.

But the story must not be told here. It must be read. If this were fiction, you would not believe it.

The diary is better written than most current first-rate novels, with high suspense and artistry combined. Yet it is published as Moss wrote it during the long daytime hideouts in caves, rock crevices and shepherds' huts. He has added a few paragraphs of explanation, which appear in italics; these notes clarify without detracting from the narrative's freshness.

One such note sets the kidnaping incident in its context of German activities on Crete. Reprisals took the form of 10 Cretans executed for every German killed. As a result, an entire village, even a district, was often totally exterminated. The heroic proportions of Cretan resistance—from sheep thief to village chieftain—match the better known tales of Lidice and the Warsaw ghetto.

Photographs Excellent

THE AUTHOR, in spite of prefatory apologies for his youthful exuberance and self-centeredness at the time of the exploit, writes modestly and with a healthy humor. He emerges from his diary as a most engaging person. Excellent photographs of the young British agents with the Cretan "andartes" strengthen this impression.

Under the terse chapter headings "Coming," "Doing," "Going," "Still Going" and "Gone," Moss writes the kind of prose that will stick with you, the kind that makes you see and feel and hear and live the story.

When the boat wheezes off in the darkness with the general at last aboard, Moss writes: "It was not long before the whole fleeing rusk of Crete had vanished as though it had dropped into the sea. We felt a terrific elation—a feeling that the moon was now only a thing of the night and not a signal for marching, and a knowledge that the job was over."

The book is an experience in vicarious elation—one not to be missed.

Changing a Nation's Habits

Radio-TV Facts That Make You Squirm

By John Barkham

RADIO, TELEVISION AND SOCIETY. By Charles A. Siepmann. Oxford. 410 pp. $4.75.

THE United States is still full of people who can remember when a home was a private place without radio or television. But in a generation from now America will be populated by men and women who have accepted radio and television since childhood, whose social and cultural education has been shaped by them, and whose living has changed from individual to communal largely because of the airwaves.

Despite the far-reaching effects of this Frankenstein, few adequate studies have yet been made of its influence on our society. Now Mr. Siepmann steps bravely forward to remedy the omission with an authoritative pioneer work that no future tiller in this field will be able to ignore.

It must be said at the outset that our author has skirted the most controversial part of his assignment. He has been content for the most part to present his evidence and leave the drawing of conclusions to the reader. But the testimony he turns up is of the utmost importance for those who listen to radio or look at television—which means all of us.

Thus his comparison between our highly competitive radio, with its mass of meretricious programs, and the BBC's deplorable monopoly, with its better programming, will distress the reader who examines the parallel columns of radio material. It isn't difficult to agree with Mr. Siepmann that our radio works worse than it should, while Britain's works better than it has any business to be. Nor will the reader fail to be startled by the revelation that our international radio (that is, the Voice of America) is not only behind that of Britain and Russia, but even behind that of Brazil.

Mr. Siepmann gallantly tackles the subject of television, but admits that he is pointing at a jet plane that is already out of sight of his astonished finger. That it is changing our habits is already a fact; that it will change our lives will be equally true tomorrow. An FCC spokesman has already soberly estimated that in five years one in every two American homes will have television.

Here is a book to read and ponder. It will make the reader think and often make him squirm. But what it says will, in a greater or less degree, apply to all of us in good time.

Fun With the Bards

ANYBODY CAN DO ANYTHING. By Betty MacDonald. Lippincott. 256 pp. $2.75.

THE publishers claim for Betty MacDonald that "everything she touches turns to golden laughter," and for once it is possible to agree. Miss MacDonald has an irrepressible gaiety that just can't be held down—as if anyone would want to. As for the "golden," her previous best sellers explain that satisfactorily. Now comes the third chapter in the epic that began with "The Egg and I" and "The Plague and I," and there seems no reason to doubt that its laughter will be just as golden as that of its predecessors.

BETTY MacDONALD
. . . new ga-ga saga

Betty was a Bard before she married, and this is a book about the Bards, notably Mary, who believed that anybody could do anything. Mary plumped for a policy of audacity, and its application to her business career resulted in her being fired by the best firms in Seattle. "I don't give a damn if you're the biggest lawyer in town, but you can't control my bladder," was a typical riposte to one of her many bosses.

Later Betty herself went to work for the Government and discovered to her pleasure that she wasn't the only bonehead working for it. "There were thousands of us who didn't know what we were doing, but were all doing it in ten copies," she says cheerfully.

Mary, of course, was right: anybody can do anything. She even talked Betty into writing "The Egg and I," for which thousands of us are duly grateful. This new ga-ga saga is just as big a rib-tickler as the other two. Lay down that depressing paper, friend, and have yourself some fun with this book.

Triangle of Emotion

THE SPANISH GARDENER. By A. J. Cronin. Little, Brown. 263 pp. $3.

SOME of Dr. Cronin's readers are going to be puzzled by this one. Here's a real departure from the kind of brand-name fiction customarily associated with his name—no slow burns, no histrionics, no frustrated romances.

This is a simple tale about the relationship between a possessive father, a frightened 9-year-old son and a warm-hearted gardener to whom the boy is devoted. There is only one woman in the story, and she plays only a very minor part. The father, an American consul whose wife has left him, finds himself engaged in a contest with the gardener for the affection of the boy. Without revealing the climax, it can be said that these are all the essential elements of the story.

Dr. Cronin juggles the three people around with the expertness of a seasoned storyteller, using a handful of subsidiary characters to point up the plot, and wrapping up the whole in the gloriously exotic background of a Spanish Mediterranean port.

No doubt many devoted Cronin fans are going to wonder what to make of this book. They will miss the emotional touch of the old master. But what this story lacks in trappings and excitement, it offers in structure and character.

Notes on the Margin

By Lee Grove

AUGUST 27, 1950.—Sir: It had been my intention to communicate this night's findings in person, but as night and cogitation wore on I realized the enormity of my innocent discovery, and the consequent risk to my life.

Even now I almost hear a sound at the front door. Of course, Shelley, the cat. He's still out.

It therefore seems best to commit this to paper, seal it and leave it in the mailbox. To save time, I will tell it as it happened.

I HAD knocked my pipe against the side of the bed and leaned back with the copy of "Soviet Literature" that the courier had brought, to learn about the new "Large Soviet Encyclopedia," when I read:

"In accordance with the latest researches of Soviet scientists, historical truth will be reestablished concerning Tajik and Azerbaijan literatures. This applies above all to writers heretofore incorrectly classified as Arabian or Iranian by bourgeois scholars. Examples are the unfounded inclusion among Iranian writers of such famous representatives of the Tajik people as Firdausi (tenth century), Omar Khayyam (twelfth century) . . ."

Moscow claiming Omar as Russian?

My hand shook as I realized the implications, the enormity of it. The magazine* dropped from my shocked fingers.

Did Louis Johnson know this? Is that why he is talking about more defense? Had Hillenkoetter, I mean "Beedle" Smith, at Central intelligence seen it? Where was Admiral Zacharias! Why hadn't Drew Pearson warned the public?

No. Providence had left it to me, writing a little book column all alone, to see this vital bit of information, evaluate it, grasp its significance.

THIS was the foulest blow yet struck at the American economy by the dictatorship. How did they know that thousands of people bought the "Rubaiyat" yearly? Now it would be outlawed. They might as well have taken away the Bible.

The loss of sales would cause bookshops to collapse. Publishers—Knopf, McGraw-Hill, Crowell, Appleton-Century, Houghton, Mifflin, Little-Brown, all the publishers—would fail. Printers, binders, illustrators, book reviews—all out of work. It would be the great depression the Russians were waiting for.

Think of the young men at Harvard, Princeton, everywhere, who had given the "Rubaiyat" to girl friends. They would be put down as Reds. It would shrivel Love Itself.

Had Luther Harris Evans seen this? He would have to transfer all the Rubaiyats in the Library of Congress from the Persian to the Slavic section. Think of the confusion.

THEN I began to ponder the international implications. Ugly.

Everyone knows that the Russians' interest in Germany is purely literary. It was the land where Karl Marx was born. Their literary appreciation is so great that they are still in Germany. Reading, no doubt.

They had never said Marx was born in Russia.

Therefore, did this mean that the Kremlin had given up its hope in Iran? Was that why they were kidnaping Omar, brazenly taking him back of the curtain as if he were a country? They must have given up in Iran. There's no other conclusion.

But what would be the internal effect on the U.S.S.R., I asked myself.

The cat seems to be scratching at the back door.

What would be the effect of this take-it-easy, drink-and-be-merry-for-tomorrow-we-die philosophy on the people, the Red army, the Red fleet, Ilya Ehrenburg?

* * * *

I LOOKED at the "Rubaiyat." It was there plain as day. I could see it. I could see Stalin looking at a picture of Stalin, saying:

Here with a slug of vodka 'neath the Bough,
A loaf of bread, a book of verse —and Thou
Beside me singing in the Wilderness—
And Wilderness is Paradise enow.

Of course! Stalin was getting old. Omar, the rascally old tentmaker, was corrupting the party line. They were trying to keep the penetration of bourgeois poetry hidden from us. It was making them soft. That was their real military secret. I had pierced the curtain, and found it, all alone in the house. If they knew that I knew!

That's strange. The cat's scratching at the back door and the side window both.

Station Wagon Crowd Teased

NOW THAT SUMMER'S COME, by H. Philip Kemberton. Macmillan. $2.75.

A GENTLE, affectionate satire of the station wagon crowd in Connecticut. The Ferris family is thoroughly likable and its problems make fine hammock reading. Liz and Charles are concerned about Jess, their tall, withdrawn daughter who works in an art museum in New York, and their son Freddie, a senior at Princeton, unsure of his bearings. But they try not to interfere, and somehow everything works out. First rate comedy is provided by Liz's civic betterment committee, which tries to restore an old schoolhouse, the second oldest building in the county. Meetings and members have much in common with the cartoons of Helen Hokinson, who lived up that way, too.

Author Takes Issue With a Critic

The following letter, somewhat abridged, is from Albert Deutsch, MacDowell Colony, Peterboro, N. H. Mr. Deutsch is the author of "Our Rejected Children."

DEAR SIR: It is neither proper nor profitable for an author to take public exception to a reviewer's opinions about his book. But an author certainly has the right to call attention to a reviewer's distortions and misrepresentations of what his book actually says.

In his review of my book, "Our Rejected Children," Sterling North (Washington Post, August 6) writes:

"Deutsch goes to absurd lengths to prove his point of cruel and unusual punishments at Plainfield (the Indiana State Reform School for Boys). He complains that the boys have to wax the floors on their hands and knees (what householder hasn't), and that, after being in the cattle barns, the boys are asked to remove their shoes before going on the spotless floors."

I did describe cruel and unusual punishments at the Plainfield institution. I described, for example, the "Hoosier Duckwalk," wherein boys were forced to clasp their ankles with their hands and waddle around the floor for a specified period of time or until they keeled over, exhausted. I told how corporal punishment was applied there regularly with a heavy leather paddle. I also described a backbreaking form of punishment I had seen in no other institution. But in the two paragraphs on which Mr. North's quoted remarks are based, I was not trying to describe "cruel and unusual punishments"; I was simply reporting my observations as I went through the institution . . .

Mr. North apparently sees nothing wrong with having the superintendent of a "superior" institution for children selected on the basis of political party loyalty, or with having one chosen for his experience in handling cattle rather than kids. I cannot argue the point with him; it is a matter of opinion. But in another paragraph of his review, Mr. North imputes to me a viewpoint utterly alien to my own approach. He writes:

"But Deutsch is talking nonsense when he deplores the establishment of the Security Branch of the St. Charles Training School at Sheridan, Ill. Separating the really incorrigible older teen-age criminals from the boys who have a chance of being rehabilitated is sound sociology and sound penology. The more innocent learn all too rapidly from the hardened young criminals and should be protected from them."

I say categorically that Mr. North could not possibly have written this had he taken the trouble to read my book . . . Time after time, throughout the first half of the book, I criticized the indiscriminate mingling of young and old offenders, the naive with the hardened . . . Had I held the view Mr. North imputes to me, I would not have devoted an entire chapter in praise of the security branch of the New York State Training School for Boys at New Hampton.

Besides exhibiting an appalling ignorance of modern knowledge of hereditary factors in feeblemindedness and delinquency, Mr. North manages to distort my views there, too. His entire review gives evidences of smart-alecky comment on a book that has not been read, but merely leafed through.

To Whom It May Concern:

GUSSIE MORAN'S tennis skill may be questionable, but her financial wizardry has been firmly established. When she signed a contract for $75,000 to turn pro, Gussie was the first to demonstrate lace panties can be negotiable . . . the defeat of Robert Knowles, the Boston golfer, in the U. S. Amateur semifinals, could vaguely be called injustice. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was his great-grandfather . . . some folks still have the leisure to go to daytime ball games. The three-game Yankee-Tiger series by daylight in Yankee Stadium drew 122,727 fans . . . and attendance at Philadelphia hit a new low on one of the same days when only 1500 watched the A's and White Sox in a twi-night double bill . . . in his book, "Par Golf in Eight Steps," Joe Novak tells the story of Tommy Armour to strip the game of its complexities. When a prospective pupil told Armour she wanted to take 18 lessons, he said: 'Sorry, madam, I don't know that much gold" . . . at O'Donnell's the other night, some members of the Cleveland Indians were threatening to expose the phony war record of one player in the American League who has been popping off at 'em all season . . . Walter O. Briggs, sr., owner of the Detroit Tigers, won't let the pro football teams set foot in Briggs Stadium until after the World Series, wherever it is played, thus penalizing his son Spike, who is a heavy stockholder in the Detroit Lions . . . Yogi Berra is on a one-man crusade against the Tigers. Eight of his 16 homers this year have been against the league leaders.

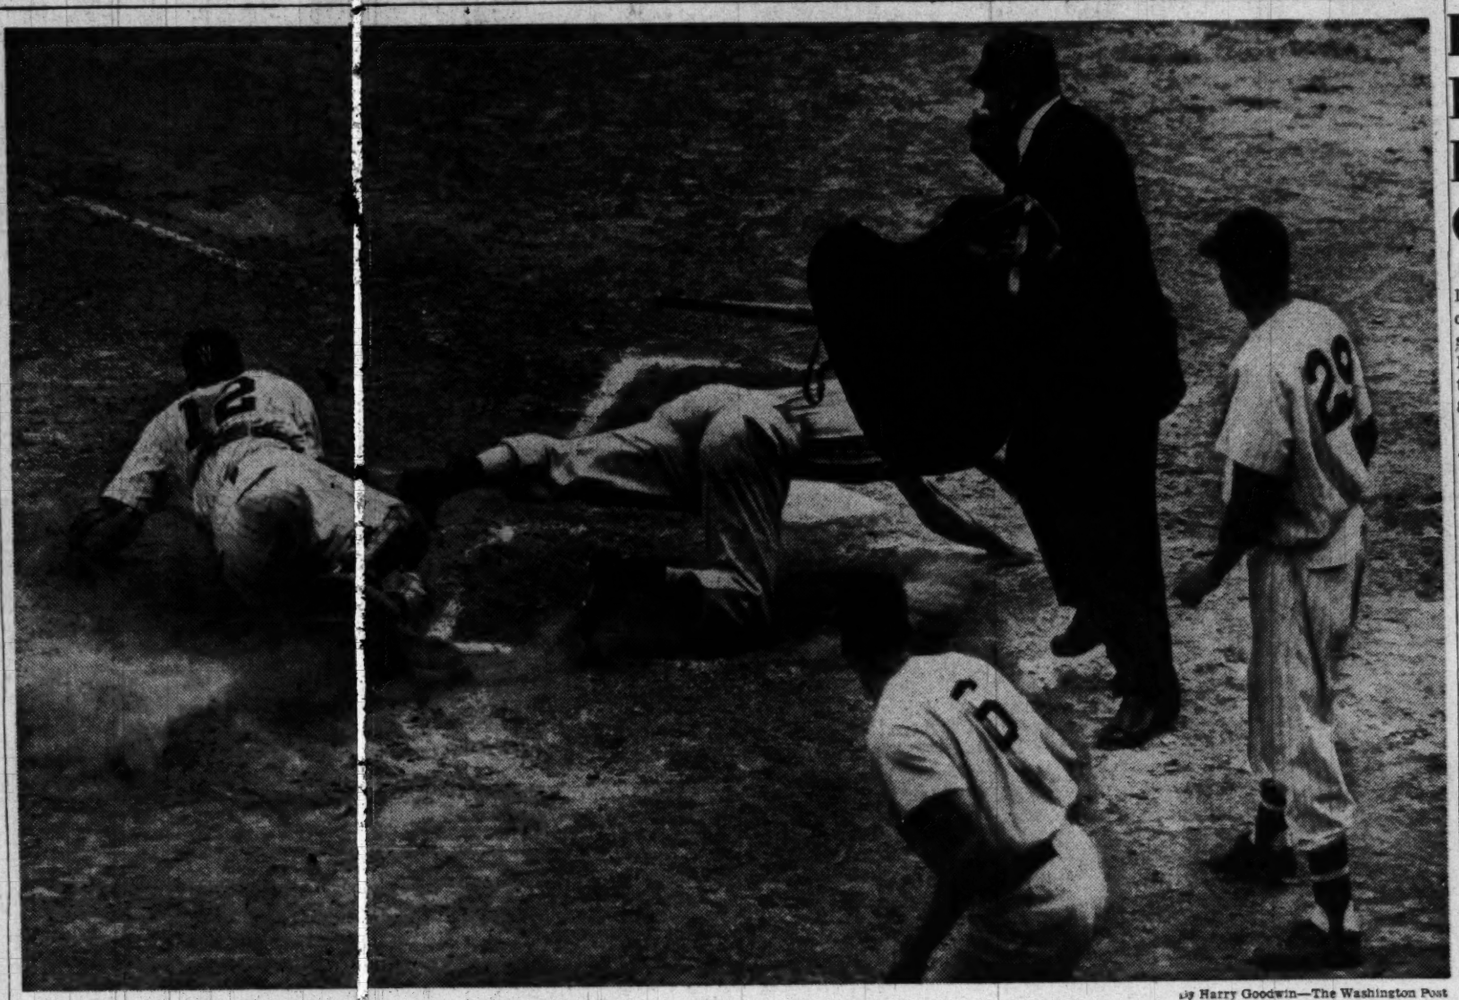
THE INVITATION to the annual Southeast Texas Fox Hunters Association Bench Show and Barbecue September 2 reads: "Bring your hounds and friends," and thus do the fanciers put mankind in its proper place . . . Joe Louis has arrived at no settlement with the Internal Revenue on his tax troubles yet, but he is hopeful he can make a "deal" by turning over his purse from the Ezzard Charles fight. In addition to what he pays the Government, Louis is pointing out that if the fight grosses a million, the Government gets $200,000 from the 20 pjercent admission tax. His return to the ring makes that profit possible for the Internal Revenue . . . that slim crowd of 16,000 which watched the Colts play the Bears in Baltimore was a shocker to the Colts' stockholders . . . Willie Pep, training at a camp near his Middletown, Conn., home for the Sandy Saddler fight September 8, moans that he is being bothered by mosquitoes. "I made the mistake of killing one," he says, "and a thousand came to the wake and remained to bite me" . . . Eddie Erdelatz, Navys new football coach, gulps when asked about the guard situation on his squad. He lost five lettermen guards by graduation . . . the last?place Pirates in the National League are outdrawing the league-leading Phillies . . . Lloyd Mangrum, who has golf's best-paying pro job at George S. May's Tam O'Shanter Club in Chicago, didn't get it by accident. May announced back in 1946 that he'd offer the job to the winner of the triple play-off for the National Open title, and Mangrum beat out Vic Ghezzi and Byron Nelson.

ON THE betting front: The Phillies are now 3-to-5 favorites to take the National League pennant, Brooklyn is 5 to 1, and you can get better than 10 to 1 against the Braves and Cardinals. In the American, it's Detroit 2 to 1, the Yankees 3 to 1, Cleveland 4 to 1, and the Red Sox 5 to 1 . . . Joe Garagiola, Cardinal catcher, is out for the season, because of an injury to his left arm. It doesn't interfere with his throwing, of course, but he can't raise it high enough to catch a high pitch . . . how far does a fish travel? A carp caught in the Missouri River bore a tag showing that it had been deposited three years before in the Meramec River 250 miles away . . . So you think you have to wait for new cars? The McGregor Co. is nine months behind in its attempt to fill orders for its newly weighted, snub-faced matched irons, so great is the demand . . . the Navy has just chartered 80 buses to take the Midshipmen to College Park for the Maryland game September 30 . . . there are critics who wonder if Ray Krouse, Maryland's All-American tackle, is the best football player on his own team. The dissenters point emphatically to Bobby Ward, the watch-charm guard . . . for the third time in three seasons, the Red Sox have staged their longest winning streak at a time when Ted Williams is out of their lineup . . . Don Bisplinghoff, the 15-year-old Orlando, Fla., who went to the third round in the U. S. amateur golf, is the son of a former Chattanooga pitcher.

MONEY-MINDED players of the second, third and fourth-place teams are hoping that Yankee Stadium or Cleveland will be the scene of the World Series, thus giving them a bigger share of the receipts . . . Casey Stengel now consults Catcher Yogi Berra is he suspects Yankee pitchers are losing their stuff . . . The Red Sox's favorite playmates this year are the Browns, whom they've licked 18 times in 19 games . . . the Philadelphia Eagles are now despairing that their all-league tackle, Al Wistert, will be ready for the season's opener. He was hurt in the All-Star game at Chicago . . . Clark Griffith has weakened on his determination to throw television out of his park next season, but he'll hike the price to the sponsors . . . Relief Pitcher Jim Konstanty is leading in a newspaper poll to select the Phillies' most valuable player . . . Joe DiMaggio fans now have renewed hopes that he'll nudge his batting average up to .300. He's hitting .285, thanks to his recent splurge . . . the Dodgers reacted to Branch Rickey's bitter denunciation of their complacency, by taking off on a nine-game winning streak . . . Earl Caddock, who died last week, was the handsomest of the wrestling champions in the long ago when the game was honest. And he never weighed more than 185 . . . Andy Seminick, the Phils' good catcher, is their legacy from Bucky Harris who had frequent run-ins with Owner Bill Cox for keeping Seminick in the lineup when Harris was managing the Phils.



NATS CUT HIM DOWN—Dave Philley, Chicago rightfielder, is out at the plate in the third inning of yesterday's game with the Nats at Griffith Stadium. Len Okrie, Nats catcher, goes to the ground after spilling Philley. Gus Zernial (6), Chisox left fielder, and Gene Bearden (29), Nats pitcher, watch intently. Umpire Cal Hubbard signals the out. The Nats won, 7-6, scoring three runs in the eighth inning. The victory ended the Nat's losing streak at seven.

Pesky's Boot In 9th Helps Detroit Push Over 4 Runs

Boston, Aug. 26 (AP).—The league leading Detroit Tigers checked the 11-game winning streak of the onrushing Boston Red Sox with a four-run rally in the ninth inning and gained an 8-6 victory here today.

An error by Third Baseman Johnny Pesky on a double play grounder opened the way for the Tigers' last ditch rally. Johnny Lipon climaxed it with a bases loaded double to score the final two Detroit runs, and put the Tigers in front, 8-4.

The Sox, fighting back, hammered across two runs in their half of the ninth before Hal Newhouser retired Vern Stephens on a short fly with the bases loaded to end the game as 29,992 paying fans groaned.

Hutchinson Wins 14th

Freddie Hutchinson who replaced Starter Hal White with nobody out in the first inning, lasted until the start of Boston's ninth, and was credited with his fourteenth victory. Marlin Stuart and Newhouser followed Hutch to the mound in Boston's ninth.

The two clubs went into the stormy ninth tied at 4-4.

Vic Wertz started Detroit's rally with a double off the left field wall, and with one out, Johnny Groth worked losing pitcher Walt Masterson for a walk.

Don Kolloway slashed a double play grounder toward Pesky, and the ball went through Johnny for an error as Connie Berry, running for Wertz, scored. Pat Mullin walked to load the bases and Hutchinson squeezed the second run of the inning home with a bunt-single down the first base line.

Lipon sent in the third and fourth Detroit runs with a two bagger off the left field wall.

Batts Hits Into Double Play

Bobby Doerr doubled to open Boston's ninth, and Hutchinson was lifted for Stuart. Al Zarilla singled Doerr to third, and Matt Batts rammed into a double play as Doerr scored.

Pinch hitter Buddy Rosar kept Boston's hopes alive with a single against the short wall, and Dom DiMaggio and Pesky followed with singles to load the bases.

Newhouser replaced Stuart, and his first act was to walk Billy Goodman and force in the second Sox run of the inning. However, Stephens ended the game with a fly to short center.

The loss dropped the Sox back 4½ games behind the Tigers, who still have a 1½ game edge over New York and Cleveland.

Urzetta Wins In Amateur

By Harold Classen

Minneapolis, Aug. 26 (AP).—Sammy Urzetta, son of a Rochester, N. Y., janitor, won the United States amateur golf crown today on the thirty-ninth hole of the longest match ever played to decide the title.

His victim was Frank Stranahan, millionaire son of a millionaire father, who pushed his tee shot out of bounds on the 537-yard thirty-ninth hole and then gamely played out the hole in hopes of staying even with the 24-year-old youth from New York.

"I knew I could get him," was all the affable Urzetta had to say as he started the long trek back to the clubhouse of the Minneapolis Golf Club, where he was presented with the trophy. Stranahan said nothing.

They finished the hole with Urzetta getting a par five and Stranahan a six.

For the long day, Urzetta was even with the par of 71 while Stranahan was one over—the one blow that cost him the crown both he and his father had made it their purpose to win.

The heartbroken Stranahan thus failed for the sixth time to win the prize he long had made his prime objective. It was the longest match in the 50-year history of the National Amateur tournament.

Stranahan also lost his chance to add this golden anniversary championship to the British Amateur crown he won earlier this year. Winning both would have given him a rare "slam" in international amateur golf.

Papa Stranahan, wealthy Ohio automobile parts manufacturer, was here to see his son lose. Papa Urzetta received the word of his boy's triumph by telephone.

The old record for the length of a championship final was set at 38 holes in 1923 when Max Marston defeated Jess Sweetser at Flossmoor, Ill.

The decisive hole was almost an anti-climax. The New York

Lenhardt Holds Ball, Berra Scores

Yanks Win on 'Sleeper Play'

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—The New York Yankees were handed a 3-2 victory with two out in the ninth inning today when Don Lenhardt, first baseman of the St. Louis Browns, went to sleep.

With two out and Yogi Berra on second base via double, Hank Bauer beat out a hit to deep short. George Stirnweiss fielded the ball and threw to Lenhardt. Berra sped past third base and scored when Lenhardt froze with the ball instead of throwing to the plate for what should have been an easy out. Ned Garver was the victim of Lenhardt's trance.

The victory allowed the Yanks to remain in second place, a game and a half back of Detroit and two percentage points in front of Cleveland.

Tom Ferrick, who relieved Ed Lopat in the ninth was the winner. Lopat, after spinning shutout ball for eight innings, yielded two runs in the ninth on a pair of singles, a balk and two-run single by Les Moss.

The Yanks scored twice in the first against Stubby Overmire on a three-base error by Stirnweiss, single by Berra and triple by Joe DiMaggio.

3 in 8th End Losses at 7

By Shirley Povich

Post Reporter

All of a sudden, the strangest thing happened at Griffith Stadium yesterday. The Nats won a ball game. As late as the eighth inning, they were being confronted with their eighth straight licking, when they turned on the White Sox and scrounged out a 7-6 victory.

The climactic run was not exactly of the Nats' making, however. It was the gift of White Sox Relief Pitcher Howie Judson who let Cass Michaels get away after a two-strike-no-ball count, and walked him to force the run home.

Judson moved in after the Nats whacked Bill Wight out of the box in the eighth. He had two out and was doing a man-sized job of it until Eddie Lost bashed a single off Hank Majeski's unstretched glove to tie the score and leave the bases filled.

Nats Lead by 4½ Games

Only 4047 fans, including 1657 Ladies' Day guests saw the Nats strike their telling blow for their preservation of fifth place. The victory upped their margin over the sixth-place Sox to 4½ games, at a time when it threatened to be pruned to a skimpy 2½.

Back in the fourth inning, they gave Gene Bearden four runs and a 4-1 lead over Wight, but Bearden gave five runs right back to the White Sox in the fifth, like some ingrate, and Al Sima took over.

The Rookie lefthander, Sima, was the day's pitching hero. He shut the Sox out in his 4 2/3-inning relief stint before he was pulled for a pinch hitter in the eighth. He was credited with the victory when Sandy Consuegra

Pittsburgh, Aug. 26 (AP).—Philadelphia's National League front runners had one of "those days" today and it was last place Pittsburgh that fashioned their first loss in six starts as the Bucs downed the Phillies 14-4.

Wally Westlake slammed his sixteenth home run for the winners in the third scoring Ralph Kiner and Jack Phillips ahead of him.

The Phils stepped out to a 1-0 lead in the third when Eddie Waitkus, who had tripled, tallied on an error by Jack Phillips. The Pirates took over in their half of the home frame on Westlake's

Eddie Sawyer's pennant contenders collapsed in the next inning. Robin Roberts, seeking his eighteenth victory, gave up four hits and his mates contributed an error before a Pittsburgh batter was out.

Gilmer Passes For Three Touchdowns

By Morris Siegel

Post Reporter

Denver, Colo., Aug. 26. — The Washington Redskins, led by Harry Gilmer, who passed for three touchdowns, won their third straight exhibition game tonight as they trounced the Chicago Cardinals, 31-7, before 17,302 fans.

It was the fourth straight loss for the winless Cardinals, who played their fourth game in 10 days.

The Redskins scored in every quarter except the last, when an all-rookie team was on the field.

The winners scored once in the first quarter, twice in the second and again in the third period.

Chicago's only touchdown came late in the last period.

Gilmer connected with end Hugh Taylor for two scores and also hit Harry Dowda for the first Redskins' touchdown in the first quarter.

Hall Haynes ran 31 yards for the final touchdown in the third period. Bill Dudley kicked all four extra points and also chipped in a 30-yard field goal.

FIRST QUARTER

Bill Dudley's opening kickoff went into the end zone and the Cardinals put the ball in play on their own 20-yard line. Frank Tripucka passed the Cards to the Redskins' 46-yard line, hitting Frank Polsfott and Gene Logel on successive tries. The attack bogged down, however, when Ed Berrang spilled Tripucka for an eight-yard loss and Jim Hardy punted to the Redskins' 16-yard line. Frankie Spaniel fumbled, but Laurin Niemi recovered for the Redskins.

Three minutes before the period ended, the Redskins got a break

BROUGHT BACK from Southern Conference football meeting at Chapel Hill, N. C.:

One of North Carolina's schools has notified the NCAA that it is "out of compliance" with the highly-controversial sanity code. This school long has been a leader in NCAA affairs, and its compliance with the code has never been questioned.

The NCAA replied by requesting that this institution NOT make public its noncompliance until after the next NCAA general meeting in Dallas in January "because of the embarrassment it might cause" the NCAA.

SOME OF the larger schools again are talking about forming a new conference. Among its members would be Duke, Maryland, North Carolina, North Carolina State, South Carolina. Virginia, not now in the conference, would be invited to join this new group. Seventeen schools currently belong to the Southern, the most unwieldy conference in the land.

THE RICHMOND Rebels offered Charlie Justice $5000 per game for six home games or $30,000 for the season, with only one practice required of him each week. "I turned it down because I knew I could not do justice to football, or myself, under those conditions. Football has been too good to me. I would be giving the game a kicking around."

Justice, sticking with an $8000 a year job with North Carolina Medical Foundation, will be a contact man to raise a million or two for the university's medical school . . . The Washington Redskins never have made Justice a definite offer. They merely mentioned that National Football League top salaries were about $10,000 (some few exceptions, of course). Yet the Redskins talked with Justice by long-distance telephone several times after Justice's brilliant play in the All-Star game . . . Justice is satisfied with the way he closed out his playing career. He was selected

Campanella Cracks 3 Homers, Drives In 6 Runs in 7-5 Victory

Dodgers Top Reds, Trail Phils by 4

Cincinnati, Aug 26 (AP).—Roy Campanella cracked three mighty home runs today to lead the Brooklyn Dodgers to their 10th straight victory, a 7-5 decision over the Cincinnati Reds.

Each of Campanella's blasts landed over or against the laundry behind the left field fence and came with Gil Hodges on base to account for six runs. The blows increased Campanella's homer output to 27.

The victory moved the high-flying Dodgers to within four games of the league-leading Philadelphia Phils who bowed in Pittsburgh.

Campanella connected in the second, fourth and eighth innings off veteran Ken Raffensberger. Campanella's eighth inning poke featured a three-run rally that broke a 4-4 tie.

Erv Palica started for Brooklyn but was relieved in the ninth inning with the tying run on base and two out. Ralph Branca got Connie Ryan to pop out on the first pitch to end the game.

The Dodgers broke their National League record for consecutive games in which doubleplays are made. The Dodgers came up with a twin-killing in the eighth to run their streak to 13.

HOT AT HOT CORNER—These pictures give you an idea as to why third base is called the hot corner. Left, Jerry Clubb, third baseman for the Union Printers, goes after a hot drive by Jim Faulkner, FBI catcher, in yesterday's game on the Ellipse. It went through for two bases. Right, Jack Weigandt, FBI third baseman, goes to his left for a smash by Al Buschling of the Printers. It, too, went through for a hit. The Printers won, 5-2, in the Department League playoffs

Fading Cards Only Game Out of 5th

St. Louis, Aug. 26 (AP).—Sal Maglie was liberal in granting hits today but stingy in allowing runs as he pitched the New York Giants to a 3-0 victory ove rthe fading St. Louis Cardinals.

Maglie permitted the Cards to hit safely in each inning and granted 11 blows but bore down in the clutch to post his 12th victory The triumph advanced the Giants to within a game of the fourth place Red Birds.

Meet for Crown Today

Union Printers Defeat F. B. I., Even Departmental Playoff

The Union Printers defeated the Federal Bureau of Investigation, 5-2, yesterday on the Ellipse and tied the Departmental League playoffs at 1-1.

The teams meet again at 3 p. m. today on the South Ellipse with the winner representing the Departmental League in the city series which starts tomorrow.

The Printers, behind 2-0, tied the score in the fourth inning. Frank Ciango, Phil Boundford and Joe Glotzback singled, loading the bases. Ciango and Boundford scored on Teddy Watson's fielder's choice.

The victors scored twice more in the next inning when Bill Valentine walked, Ciango singled, Boundford walked and Glotzback singled home Valentine and Ciango. They added one more in the sixth.

Gene Collins went the route for the Printers, hurling a six-hitter, striking out five and walking nine.

At His Beanery

DiMaggio's Slump Helps Swell Crowd

DENVER, COLO., Aug. 26.—Sports shorts of all sorts:

When Joe DiMaggio was riding the bench two weeks ago, business at DiMaggio's restaurant in San Francisco picked up 25 percent. "People streamed in to find out if we know what was the matter with him," the head-waiter explained . . . all week long before the Chicago Cardinals-New York Yankees' exhibition game, Card's coach, Curly Lambeau warned his punters to kick away from Buddy Young, the Yanks' swift-footed fancy-running safety man. The first time quarterback J. M. Hardy punted in the game he kicked right to Young and Young breezed 73 yards for a touchdown . . . when Admiral Billick Whelchel was fired as Redskips' coach in the middle of the season last year, he was 23 pounds underweight . . . television of baseball games in Los Angeles is much better than in Washington. On the Coast, a camera is placed behind home plate—you can actually see the ball curve . . . Pacific Coast League teams speeded up their games an average of 15 minutes a game by having the pitcher in the batters' circle waiting his turn at bat rather than fiddling around the dugout when he's the next batter . . . except for this and the slick chicks who attend the games in Hollywood, there's nothing to recommend the Coast League as a third major league . . . it was nothing new for End Bones Taylor, of the Redskins, to score a touchdown the first time he got his hands on the ball this year against San Francisco. In 1946 he scored a touchdown for Bo Rowland's Oklahoma City University team the first time he got his hands on the ball. And in his first pro game, in 1947, the first pass Sam Baugh threw to him against the Philadelphia Eagles went for a touchdown too . . .

BOB FEERICK, who quit the Caps last year to coach basketball at Santa Clara, his alma mater, has "recruited" Jim Young, Wilson High star, for the Redskins . . . Feerick, incidentally, doesn't believe his Caps' successor. Bones McKinney, will quit playing. "He's foolish if he does, because he's his own best player," Feerick explained . . . In Los Angeles, most of the pro football writers are already asking for the dismissal of Jumbo Joe Stydahar, Rams' coach . . . The only thing certain about the 1950 Redskins is that they won't sell any more season tickets this year than they did in 1949. They printed only 20,000 books, the number they sold last year, one of their leanest advance sales seasons in years . . . Football at Southern California earns $500,000 a year. "It's hardly a drop in the bucket when you consider it takes 20 million dollars a year to operate the school, but it's certainly more than the English department earns," quipped Bob Smith, Trojan publicity man . .

STANFORD will never have an outstanding football team again until the players are taught how to block and tackle, claims Ernie Nevers, the greatest of all the former Stanford greats. "They don't go in for that stuff up there now because they think its ungentlemanly, but Pop Warner did when he was at Stanford and I don't recall anyone on his teams being bums," Nevers said . . . going into tonight's game against the Cardinals here, halfback Frank Spaniel, of the Redskins, hasn't played on a losing football team in five years. Notre Dame was unbeaten the four years he played for the Irish and the Redskins won their first two exhibition games this season . . . air transportation in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps is so needed for troop movements now the Quantico Marines have contracted with a commercial airlines to fly the Leatherneck footballers to their away games this year . . . when Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf took over as head coach of California in 1947, every member of the squad lived within 60 miles of Berkeley, Calif. today, with the Waldorf recruiting system in full swing, it's difficult to find a half dozen Californians on the team.

MORRIS SIEGEL.

Nats End Tailspin, Beat Out Chisox, 7-6

held the Sox scoreless in the ninth.

Masi's infield single put the tying run on base, but Consuegra made white meat of Eddie Robinson and Gus Zernial.

Zernial singled to center to give the Sox a 1-0 lead in the first after Bearden lost control with two out. He hit Masi with a pitched ball with walked Robinson.

Dente Starts Rally

Dente touched off the Nats' four-run third with a single to center. With one out, Bearden also singled to center. Yost singled through short for the first run, and when Michaels' fly ball drifted away from McCormick for a double, both Bearden and Yost scored. Noren singled home Michaels with the fourth run.

Bearden promptly lost his 4-1 lead in the fifth. Zernial, Majeski and Fox banged him for singles, and then he committed the high crime of walking pitcher Wight to fill the bases. Whereupon Carrasquel doubled to right for the second and third runs of the inning.

Sima moved in at that point, and Dente saved him temporarily with a sparkling grab of Philley's smash, but Masi singled to left to make it 6-4, White Sox.

With Sima keeping 'em in the ball game, the Nats were doing no good however against Wight until the eighth. Then Mele led off with a long double to center and moved to third on a wild pitch. Ostrowski drew a walk, and Coan singled to right to get Mele home and Wight out of the game.

Judson took over and was in deeper trouble when Masi threw wild in a try to pick Ostrowski off second. On the error, the runners moved to second and third. Dente was no help with a grounder to Majeski, who threw him out and held the runners. Pinch hitter Sherry Robertson drew an intentional pass.

Judson appeared to be getting out of it nicely when pinch hitter Ed Stewart popped a fly to McCormick in short center on which nobody could run. It was the second out. Then Yost gave the Nats a reprieve. Majeski leaped high for his line drive but it bounded off his glove for an infield single, and Ostrowski scored to tie it up at 6-6.

All of which set the stage for Michaels' game-winning walk. Judson and the Sox didn't like Umpire Cal Hubbard's call on the 3-2 pitch, but the Nats thought it was quite gorgeous.

IN SHORT . . . The front office hopes that the Nats' attendance will match their 1949 figure of 770,000 are fast fading . . . The 2390 customers of yesterday constituted the smallest paid crowd of the season . . . If Bob Kuzava returns from his visit to his sick son in Michigan, he will team with Joe Haynes in pitching today's doubleheader against the Browns . . . Sam Dente drove in no runs yesterday but his shortstopping cut off a half dozen . . . Bill Wight wandered too far off first base in the eight on Carrasquel's pop fly to Michaels, and was somewhat embarrassed when he was doubled up.

Around The Town

JCC Honors Griffith

Junior Chamber of Commerce members will pay tribute to Clark Griffith at their weekly luncheon at 12:30 p. m. Thursday, September 7, at the Burlington Hotel.

The luncheon will precede the All-American Amateur Unlimited baseball tournament scheduled to open in Griffith Stadium September 12, under the sponsorship of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the D. C. Recreation Department.

Connie Mack, president and manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, has accepted an invitation to be present when the JCC honors the Nats owner and president.

Midgets Back at Lanham

Midget automobile racing returns to West Lanham Speedway at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday with two 50-lap championship events scheduled. One race will involve Ford V-8 cars, the other Offenhausers.

Ed (Dutch) Schaefer, George Fonder and Len Duncan will be among the leading pilots competing.

Final Rifle Match

The final match of the summer series of the Maryland Rifle League will be held at 10 a. m. today at the Greenbelt Gun Club range. Firing will be at 50 and 100 yards with telescopic sights optional.

The League is finishing with the closest race in history. Three teams are battling it for the title and the right to represent this area in the National team championships next month.

The National Capital Rifle, the Greenbelt Gun Club and the Terrapin Rifle Club all have a chance to win the League title.

Meeker Wrestles Carnera

Ronald Meeker, Shreveport, La., meets Primo Carnera in the feature wrestling match Wednesday night at Turner's Arena. Winner of the match will meet Antonio Rocca at Griffith Stadium Monday night, September 11.

Rocca originally was scheduled to meet Carnera this Wednesday at the ball park but Antonio dislocated his shoulder. Meeker was brought in as a substitute for Rocca and the show has been transferred to Turner's without any change in prices.

Circus Rose Holds Jumper Lead in Show

By Harry de Mawby, Jr.

Australians Complete Davis Cup Rout by Taking Doubles

NEW AMATEUR CHAMPION—Sam Urzetta (left), 24-year-old janitor's son from Rochester, N. Y., receives congratulations from Frank Stranahan, Toledo, Ohio, after Urzetta won the national amateur title yesterday by beating Stranahan on the 39th hole in Minneapolis athlete, who also holds national collegiate records in basketball free throwing, dubbed a pitch shot on the thirty-sixth hole. The ball moved only eight feet. His next try moved it to about seven feet from the pin.

Then while Stranahan, who also had overshot the green, lined up his next poke, Urzetta sat on a hummock nearby, his head down and his hands folded as in prayer.

Stranahan struck the ball too crisply and it rolled 12 feet past the pin. He came back to within a quarter of an inch of the cup—and a quarter of an inch that brought both moans and cheers from the gallery of 2000 and gave Urzetta a life. The new champion easily sunk the putt and off they started on the extra holes.

The match was rugged and tough all the way, although Stranahan never once was in the lead. But only once, and then for but two holes, did Urzetta have a two-hole advantage. He made the turn of the morning round one up and went to lunch with the same margin.

Urzetta went two-up on the twenty-second when Stranahan chipped clear across the green, then had to chip again before putting.

But Stranahan won both the twenty-fifth and twenty-seventh holes when Urzetta's putter balked and the match was even again. The new champion birdied the twenty-ninth with a 15-foot putt to go one-up again, an advantage he held only until the twenty-third, where his putter betrayed him once more. That evened the match.

From there they toiled six more holes, including the climatic thirty-sixth,

Willie Herbert Upsets Ann Gray for D.C. Title

By Gordon Beard

Mrs. Willie Herbert celebrated her eleventh wedding anniversary yesterday by upsetting Mrs. Ann Gray, 7—5, 2—6, 6—4, to win the District of Columbia tennis championships at the Woodmont Country Club.

The victory was the third-seeded Mrs. Herbert's first in eleven tries against her top-seeded opponent, from whom she had not taken a set since their first meeting in 1942.

Mrs. Herbert smartly played a net game against the soft-hitting Mrs. Gray, scoring placements with sizzling corner baseline volleys. Erring three times in the eighth game of the first set with her usually accurate backhand, Mrs. Herbert fell behind 3-5 and appeared headed for her eleventh consecutive loss to Mrs. Gray.

Mixing her shots to keep Mrs. Gray off balance, Mrs. Herbert rallied to take the next four games and the set.

Mrs. Gray took the second set and a 3—1 lead in the third. Then Mrs. Herbert pieced together another four-game string to go ahead, 5—3, winning the crucial, tie-breaking seventh game after trailing, 15—40.

Later in the doubles, Mrs. Herbert teamed with Sosie Girgosian to score a somewhat milder upset by beating Virginia Boyer and Mignon Plaza, 8—6, 6—4.

In the men's singles semifinals, eighth-ranked Elston Wyatt upended third-seeded Barney Welsh, winner of last year's tourney, 7—5, 6—3, while top-seeded Jim Thackara won over unranked Jerry Thomas, 6—1, 6—4.

The winners will meet for the the title today at 2:30 p. m. The mixed doubles and men's doubles championships will be decided at 10:30 a. m. and 1 p. m. respectively.

Women's singles, finals — Mrs. Willie Herbert defeated Mrs. Ann Gray, 7—5, 2—6, 6—4.

Women's doubles, finals—Mrs. Herbert and Sosie Girgosian defeated Virginia Boyer and Mignon Plaza, 8—6, 6—4.

Men's singles, semifinals—Jim Thackara defeated Jerry Thomas, 6—1, 6—4; Elston Wyatt defeated Barney Welsh, 7—5, 6—3.

Men's doubles, quarterfinals — Clayton Burwell and Col. Ramsey Potts defeated Don Leavens and Thackara, 2—6, 6—2, 6—3. Semifinals—Fred McNair and Alphonse Smith defeated Tim Coss and Welsh, 6—1, 6—4; Burwell and Potts defeated Alex Kelles and Kahl Springs, 8—10, 6—3, 6—4.

Mixed doubles, quarterfinals—Potts and Plaza defeated Hugh and Barbara Lynch, 5—7, 7—5, 6—1; semifinals—McNair and Mrs. Gray defeated Potts and Plaza, 3—0, default.

TODAY'S PAIRINGS

Men's singles, finals—Wyatt vs. Thackara, 2:30 p.m.

Men's doubles, finals—Smith and McNair vs. Burwell and Potts, 1 p.m.

Ferrier Holds Canadian Lead

Montreal, Aug. 26 (U.P.)—Jim Ferrier of San Francisco blasted par for the third successive day in the Canadian Open golf tournament today with a six-under-par 66 to take a commanding four-stroke lead over his nearest rival, Stan Leonard of Vancouver.

His 68-67-66 gave him a total of 201 for 54 holes of the 72-hole $10,000 tournament.

Ted Kroll of New Hartford, N. Y., was in third place after a 68 with a three-day total of 207. One stroke back of Kroll with 208 was Doug Ford of Brierquest, N. Y.

Glen Teal of Memphis, Tenn., Art Doering of Richmond, Va., and Gerry Barber of Philadelphia were in a tie for fifth place with 209. Teal and Doering both shot 68 today while Barber got a 69.

Marty Furgol of New York came back into contention with a 66. He had posted a four under par 68 the first day but soared to 74 yesterday. His 54 hole total was 210.

Pre-tourney favorite Sam Snead had a three-day total of 214. Snead had a par 72 today after rounds of 72 and 70.

Petty Wins Trapshoot Title

Vandalia, Ohio, Aug. 26 (AP).—Julius E. Petty of Stuttgart, Ark., 39-year-old fur dealer and gun club operator, today won the national doubles championship at the fifty-first Grand American trapshoot, with 97 of 100.

Petty outshot four others in a 30-target shoot-off after the quintet had tied at 97.

Petty broke all 30 in the shoot-off. Bob Allen of Des Moines, Iowa, missed one to take second place.

Tied for third were Richard Shaughnessy, the former national skeet champion from Dedham, Mass., John Doran of Shreveport, La., and Vic Reinders, University of Wisconsin professor from Waukesha.

Rudy Etchen of Bellevue, Wash., won the professional crown with 98 of 100.

Taylor Stands Pat, Still Picks Yanks To Take Pennant

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—Zack Taylor, manager of the St. Louis Browns, is sticking to his mid-season pick in the American League race—the New York Yankees. Zack thinks their pitching will do it.

"Balanced pitching is going to decide it," said Taylor before last night's game. "And Casey Stengel has it. He hasn't the best pitcher but he's got the best pitchers.

"The Yankees are like a guy with a good education," Taylor continued. "If you got it, you just got it."

Dot Kielty Wins Canadian Title

Winnipeg, Aug. 26 (AP). — Dot Kielty of Los Angeles won the Canadian women's open golf championship today for her second major golf title in three weeks.

Miss Kielty bested the defending champion—Grace De Moss of Corvallis, Ore., 5 and 4, in a scheduled 36-hole final over the St. Charles Golf Club course in Winnipeg. The Los Angeles star three weeks ago won the Tam O'Shanter—billed as the world championship amateur tournament.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 26 (AP).—Wisconsin's football team will play Rice Institute in 1952 and 1954, Athletic Director Harry Stuhldreher announced tonight.

Schroeder, Mulloy Lose In Five Sets

By Gayle Talbot

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 26 (AP). After a lapse of 11 years, the coveted Davis Cup went back to Australia today as its brilliant team swept to its third straight victory over the United States to clinch the International trophy.

With more than 11,000 thrilled fans getting in on the kill, John Bromwich and Frank Sedgman completed the rout with a tingling five-set doubles win over Ted Schroeder and Gardnar Mulloy.

The scores were 6—4, 4—6, 6—2, 4—6, 6—4, and it was a humdinger of a struggle.

Two more singles will be played tomorrow, but only for the record. The Aussies were congratulated and told the cup was theirs in a lively ceremony on the stadium court immediately after they quit knocking our lads around today.

Aussies Last Won in 1939

As the challengers captured both of yesterday's singles without loss of a set, thanks largely to the sensational play of a youngster named Ken McGregor, the count in sets tonight stood at 9-2 in their favor. Such a decisive margin of victory could not have been imagined before the series began.

If they win both of tomorrow's singles, the boys from down under will match the feat of the American team which snatched the cup from them in the first postwar matches at Melbourne in 1946. The next challenge round, incidentally, will be played at Sidney in the winter of 1951.

The hero of today's clincher was one of the pair of Australians who last won the trophy by defeating the United States at Merion in 1939.

"Old" John" Bromwich, at '32, the world's most gifted doubles player, and he demonstrated his wizardry to the satisfaction of today's crowd.

Yanks Fight Hard

The two Americans put up a better scrap than had been expected. They fought like lions and slugged it out toe to toe in many an exciting rally. At times it looked as though they might even win.

But in the end Bronwich, with his court "savvy" and his soft returns and miraculous saves of apparent winners, slammed the door in their faces.

The youthful Sedgman probably brought more roars from the crowd with his slashing volleys and overhead smashes, several of which bounced high into the stands, but it was his veteran partner who did the dirty work in the clinches.

In the first and fourth sets, which they won, Mulloy and Schroeder struck out fiercely at everything they could reach. Even from the back court they poured searing shots at their opponents, and they did all right at it. They forced Bromwich into netting eight times in the fourth set. A tremendous number for him.

But when the final set came around Bromwich again had them playing pit-pat in the forecourt, and that game they were no match for the pair who won the National Doubles title last week. The Aussies broke Mulloy's serve in the third game and then ran out on their own deliveries, though Sedgman twice came within a point of dropping his in the eighth game.

The Australian players made a point of giving their non-playing captain, Harry Hopman, his share of the spoils. They said his coaching and master-minding were largely responsible for the victory, and they could have been right. The last time he captained an Aussie team was in '39 at Merion. He hasn't missed yet.

It was Hopman who "discovered" the 21-year-old McGregor only two short years ago and who in that time has developed him into a player who might completely dominate world amateur tennis for years to come. The experts say nothing like him has come along since Don Budge 15 years ago.

Two winters ago McGregor acted as ball-boy for the Jack Kramer-Bobby Riggs professional troupe when they played at Melbourne on their world tour. He wanted to see how the big boys played the game.

If the two captains follow the original pairings, McGregor will play Tom Brown jr., in tomorrow's final singles. Sedgman and Schroeder will meet in the other.

Schroeder, Mulloy, Brown On Way Out

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 26 (AP)—A dynasty ended today—the United States hold on the Davis Cup—and like all fallen rulers, the Americans are going to start rebuilding from the bottom.

"For one thing," said non-playing Capt. Alrick Man, jr., "You probably have seen Ted Schroeder in a cup match for the last time. Ted and I talked it over, and agreed that it would be best if he didn't play any more.

"As for Tom Brown, our second singles player this year, he told me he will want to devote all his time to his law practice in the future. And Gardnar Mulloy is not getting any younger at 36."

That just about eliminated the entire 1950 team from further consideration.

Man shrugged, and said:

"What are you going to do when you get beaten so decisively? That was one of the greatest Australian teams I've ever seen. And its captain, Harry Hopman, did a superb job. I've always maintained he was the best.

Highs Start Football Drills This Week

By Bill Gilbert
Post Reporter

LOCAL scholastic football starts full-scale operations this week.

Eight of the nine Interhigh League teams, one prep school, two Catholic High Leagues and two Northern Virginia Group I League schools will hold practices.

Ed Solomon of McKinley Tech plans to have his boys out tomorrow, as does Forest Powars of Chamberlain. Gil Conn's Coolidge Colts and Joe Carlo's Wilson Tigers start Friday and Fred Mulvey at Western plans to start September 5.

Anacostia, Eastern, Roosevelt and Bell will launch their workouts within the next 10 days.

JOE KOZIK'S Gonzaga team got the jump on all the area schools by starting on August 16. The Eagles held their first scrimmage Friday at their 34th and Benning rd. ne. field.

Joe Gallagher of St. John's has had his Cadets out since last Monday at their new Military rd. field. There is still quite a bit of work to be done on the stadium, however, and Gallagher does not expect to play any games in it this year.

Devitt Prep, with Bob Killen as its coach, starts limbering up Tuesday at 16th and Kennedy sts., nw.

Roland Woodson at George Washington High in Alexandria and Washington-Lee High of Arlington started workouts Friday for the Northern Virginia Group I League.

SPECULATION as to who will coach the Eastern team was slowed down yesterday when Jan Jankowski, former football coach at Central, said he believed Dick Mentzer would continue to instruct the Ramblers.

Jankowski, who coached Catholic University last year, said, however, that he would be on hand to watch the workouts and aid Mentzer in shaping up the team. It is up to Eastern Principal John Paul Collins to select his coaches.

Hardy Pearce, director of public high school athletics in Washington; last night denied an earlier report that some of the Interhigh games this year would be played in American University's new stadium, which is now under construction.

Pearce said that the teams will continue to play on their home fields and that the idea of playing at A. U. was not even a possibility.

Garvin's Girls Take D. C. Title

Garvin's Grill scored three runs in the top of the ninth to break a 1-1 tie, and went on to defeat Mailander, 4-3, and win the District of Columbia Girls' Amateur Softball Association playoffs at Greenbelt yesterday.

Ruth Sondheimer of Garvin's pitched a no-hitter for the regulation seven innings and allowed but three hits in the extra frames.

In the men's playoffs, Johnny Hughes twirled a two-hitter and fanned 10 to lead Thrifty Beverages to a 2-0 win over Harding Hardware.

Lippencott Wins Star Yacht Title

Chicago, Aug. 26 (AP).—Robert Lippencott of Riverton, N. J., became new world's champion of Star Class racing at the International Star Class Yachting Championship today.

He skimmed his 22-foot Sea Robin to victory ahead of Lockwood Pirie of Wilmette, Ill., and E. W. Etchells of central Long Island sound.

Sportsmanship's Not Dead

Fazio's as Good a Loser as He Is a Winner; Mrs. Chaimson Just Misses Hole-in-One

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

THE AFFAIRS OF FAZIO: One of the most revealing things about any athlete is the way he acts when he loses. It's great to win; tough to lose. Which brings to mind one George Fazio, new Woodmont Country club pro.

Recently we have seen George miss some shots that might reasonably be expected to upset him, especially since they were in tournament play.

But there's never an alibi from Fazio; never an expression or gesture by him that says he's snake-bit. Fazio goes on playing with a smile and if it's the least bit forced the guy's a greater actor than Barrymore.

Recent pro sweeps at Columbia is a good case in point. Playing par golf on a slow course until the 14th, Fazio had some tough luck and took a seven on the par four hole.

It must have been particularly bitter to him in view of considerable sniping, some subtle, and some not-so-subtle, that's been aimed at him. This has included one irresponsible statement by a Baltimore newspaper that he's "through" at Woodmont. Fazio wanted to win—badly—and the seven ended his hopes of that.

He didn't make the slightest alibi. He played par golf the rest of the way in, was relaxed and sincere in his congratulations to the winner.

In a day when the ethics of Leo Durocher seem to be the rule in most sports, it's nice to run across a good sportsman when the pressure is on him to win.

TOUGH LUCK department: Mrs. Fred Chaimson had one of golf's most agonizing experiences at Prince Georges. Her tee shot on the 134-yard 14th rolled to the lip of the cup—and stopped.

Thirteen-year-old Jimmy McGuire, pride of Anacostia, who has been trying to break 80, seemed to have turned the trick, but took double bogeys on 16 and 17 to card an 81.

QUALIFYING dates for the Women's District Public Links championship have been moved up. Originally scheduled for September 5, contestants may qualify at any time from today until then. Entry fee for the event is $1. Call Fort Dupont Manager Fred Williamson, VI. 9846.

TOMORROW'S Middle Atlantic Golf Association Pro-Am at East Potomac promises to be the largest of the season, with more than 200 expected. Manager Tee Gibraski also calls publinx golfers' attention to the men's District publinx championship tournament, September 18-20.

GEORGE PIGOTT is an unhappy man. Playing in a match with Steve Olds at Indian Spring, he holed a 40-footer on the fifth for an eagle three. Considering the wager on the hole practically money in the bank, he dismally watched Olds hole out a 35-footer to match his eagle.

DICK HUGHES, assistant pro at Rock Creek, reports that 14-year-old Larry Spellman is one of the area's up and coming golfers. Larry has hit par several times.

LONG SHOTS: Bob Suit had a 340-yard drive at Glenbrook . . . Doug Smith drove the 364-yard first green at Fairfax twice last week . . . Bob Miller, former Oklahoma A. and M. end, has been getting off some 300-yarders at Rock Creek.

STRICTLY PERSONALS: Fred Chaimson got his first eagle on the first hole at Prince Georges . . . put his second shot in the cup on the par four, 320-yard hole from 90 yards out with a nine iron . . . Earl Marcy, twice East Potomac champ, who represented the Middle Atlantic area in the publinx national finals this summer, is out of the hospital following a serious operation . . . Anne Hall, petite member of a skating vanities troupe just back from Europe, tried her hand at golf for the first time at East Potomac. Had a 57 for nine holes.

While vacationing at Bretten Woods, N. H., Dr. Isidore Shulman, 2480 16th st. nw., made a hole in one on the 195-yard first hole. Doctor Shulman was presented a silver ash tray. The course, designed by the late Donald Ross, is considered one of the finest and most difficult in New England.

Rice Gains Quarterfinals

Second-seeded Austin Rice edged eighth-ranked Emory Grantham, 9-7, 2-6, 6-3, and Art Dreyer, seeded third, romped over Walter Pate, No. 6 player, 6-0, 6-0, in the quarterfinals of the Army-Navy Country Club tennis tournament yesterday.

In a third round match, top-seeded Lykes Boykin eliminated Pete Pressinger, 15-year-old junior champion, 6-1, 6-1.

Lemon, a seven time loser, preserved the Cleveland victory and since no Indian pitcher, in the opinion of the official scorer, pitched long enough to earn the win, it was credited to him.

as the outstanding player in the Collegians victory over the Philadelphia Eagles. What greater honor could come to Justice in pro ball? No greater honor, Charlie; just the cash. A new home for Justice is under construction in Chapel Hill, and a van will drive up one day with $1500 worth of furniture as a gift from an admirer.

ONE OF THE changes in football rules for next season eliminates the fair catch, and some of the coaches don't like the idea. They say that the team with a punter who can kick the ball high for average distance will be in a position to take advantage of this change. If a receiving back tries to catch a high, floating punt with tacklers swarming down on him, he is running too great a risk.

TWO OF the finest players on Oklahoma's unbeaten team of last season, Quarterback Darrell Royal and Tackle Wade Walker, will teach the Split-T to North Carolina State's freshmen, but the varsity will continue to use the straight T under Beattie Feathers . . . The new Justice at Carolina is expected to be either Dick Bunting, 5-9, 163-pound senior from Salem, Va., or Billy Hayes, 5-11, 182-pound senior from Arlington, Va.

NORTH CAROLINA was host to the football crowd and press, and threw one of the season's better golf parties at the university's new Finley course, dedicated on this occasion. Chuck Erickson, golf coach and assistant athletic director, has built 18 holes that will be the equal to swank Pinehurst in a year or two. Maryland's Jim Tatum, with 38 on the par 36 first nine, and 34 for the round, won the coaches' low net with 61.

Battlefield Wins Hopeful In Storm

Saragtoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 26 (AP).—Battlefield, owned by George D. Widener, president of Belmont Park and chairman of the Jockey Club, further solidified his claim to the juvenile championship today when he convincingly won the forty-sixth Hopeful, richest prize of the upstate meeting.

A crowd of 23,132 packed the old course as the highly successful 24-day sussion came to a close and saw the son of the War Relic drive home a length and a half before Cain Hoy Stable's Battle Morn.

Greentree Stable's Big Stretch, a length farther away, was third, while Woodvale Farm's Away Away finished fourth in the field of 10 2-year-olds.

The getaway card drew miserable weather. Rain, lightning and thunder which drove thousands under the stands following the fourth race, continued through the feature. The track however, drenched as it was, remained fast, as witness Battlefield's excellent time of 1:18 for the 6½ furlongs.

Battlefield, coupled with Mrs. George D. Widener's Knowitall, was ridden by Eric Guerin, and paid $4.60, $2.90, $2.50. A bargain yearling purchase at the sales here in 1949 for only $4,500, the fleet colt earned $47,550, and increased his total to $113,712. He now has won eight out of 11 starts, including six stakes, notably the Saratoga Special, Youthful and Tremont.

Following the Hopeful, the storm grew in intensity, reaching hurricane proportions. By this time, it was impossible to see ten yards away, and the track was turned into a sea of slop. A flash of lightning struck the jockey board in the infield and knocked part of it off.

Caddie Championship

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 26 (AP).—Mel Woelfling of Ashland, Ohio, won the 1950 PGA National Caddie Golf Championship today by trouncing Larry Mussio of Norwood, Ohio, 9 and 7.

J. L. McGhie's Dram Shows Drug Trace

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 26.—The second doping case in two days was disclosed here today when stewards announced the suspension of Trainer J. L. McGhie. The Maryland conditioner saddled his wife's Dram in the first race yesterday. Chief Steward Joseph Flanagan said the urine analysis revealed the presence of the drug (amphstamine).

Dram, in winning the first race of his career, paid a $10.40 mutuel and participated in a payoff of $61.80 on the daily double.

McGhie, questioned by Steward Flanagan and representatives of the racing F. B. I., denied any knowledge of the use of a stimulant of any nature. Under Maryland rules the trainer is held responsible for the condition of his horses at all times.

The case is similar to that of Charles H. Lamparter, the Laurel (Md.) trainer, who was suspended as the result of the use of the same drug when his Electron won the first race on last Thursday's program.

Both cases have been referred to the Maryland Racing Commission and a hearing will be held within the next 10 days. In the meanwhile all horses under the care of McGhie and Lamparter will be banned.

Mrs. J. B. Hatfield's Mi Scandal drove to a three length victory on the El Ray Farm purse, featuring the closing day program. Anthony Russo, the current apprentice sensation, booted the son of Court Scandal to the wire three lengths in front of Mrs. Samuel Huyett's Frank's Moose. In third position came Wild Goose Farm's Ned Canron.

Mi Scandal in making it two straight at this track was installed the favorite and returned a $4.60 mutuel. The 4-year-old was clocked in 1:27 3/5 for the seventh furlong over a fast track. A crowd of 7000 saw the final program.

Russo One Up

The victory put Russo up on Jimmy Baird in the battle for riding honors at the meeting. Baird rode three winners earlier in the day. The score after the feature was Russo 16; Baird 16.

Russo clinched the crown in the last race, winning with Frigate, a $6.20 favorite.

Frank's Moose set the early pace but Russo was rating Mi Scandal during this period. At the far turn, Mi Scandal, placed to pressure, took command. Russo took no chances, however, and kept his mount to a drive to the end.

Ned Canron, a disappointment in his first appearance here, rallied mildly today but hung in the final drive his backers having to be content with third money.

Today's betting totaled $406,723, the best single program wagering for a year on a minor track and also tops any on the trotting tracks.

Betting for the meeting totaled $2,890,078. The figure was 12 percent under the 1949 total of $3,293,908. Attendance averaged more than 6000 daily, slightly under last year.

Hill Prince Roars Home In American

Chicago, Aug. 26 (U.P.).—Christopher T. Chenery's Hill Prince, rated off the pace for nearly half the distance, roared the last half mile at full speed under Eddie Arcaro today to win the 40th annual American Derby at Washington Park.

By winning, Hill Prince picked up $60,050 to increase his season earnings to $210,565, and strengthened his bid to surpass Middleground as the top three-year-old of the year.

But it was a hard-fought battle. Calumet Farm sent out a two horse team of All Blue and Theory, and All Blue ran a good race to finish second. William Goetz's Your Host, the California sensation, was third.

Calumet apparently had the race planned. Theory went to the fore at the break and stayed there for fully half a mile while All Blue remained in third.

Your Host, previously a front runner, remained just off the pace and Hill Prince was far behind. But as the field headed into the back stretch Hill Prince lengthened out and began to pass horse after horse.

When the field reached the head of the stretch, Theory gave way to All Blue. But Hill Prince swung outside and a furlong before the finish he pulled in front to win handily.

Hill Prince's official margin of victory was a length-and-a-half over All Blue, who had another length over Your Host.

Hill Prince, the favorite for the event, paid $6.40, $3.40 and $2.40. The time for the mile-and-a-quarter was 201 1/5.

It was Hill Prince's first start since June 24 when he finished second behind Greek Song in the Dwyer Stakes at Aqueduct. It was his first victory since the Preakness in May when he outran Middleground.

Hoyas Drill Monday

2 Colonials Alerted for Service Call

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

College football makes its annual late summer comeback here this week with Georgetown the first to open practice and George Washington first to feel the pinch of the Korean crisis.

The Hoyas, 55 strong, report for twice-daily drills tomorrow morning, 9:30 on their Medical Field. G. W. and Maryland suit up for the first time on Friday.

The Colonials' elation at being reinforced by last year's fine unbeaten freshman team, was sobered by word that two of their mainstays have been alerted for early call to the service.

End Bill Szanyi, target for many of Andy Davis' passes last year, is expecting to be summoned with the rest of his National Guard Unit around September 3.

And Tackle John Sestokas, 230-pound captain of last year's freshman team, has been told to stand by with the rest of his Naval Reserve group.

Hoya Coach Bob Margarita said he expects about 55 players to report Monday.

Margarita moved up his starting date because Penn State, Georgetown's opening game opponent, began working out August 14. "We couldn't afford to let them get too much of a jump on us," said Margarita.

Bob's No. 1 project will be converting his All-East end of last year, Bob Noppinger, into a tackle. He's deep in ends with veterans Dick Losh, Henry Schmitt and Gus Fornarciari returning. Noppinger, at 220 pounds, might make a whale of a tackle, thinks Margarita.

Maryland expects to have about 60 candidates for what may be its greatest of all football teams. Led by All-America hopefuls, Tackle Ray Krouse and Guard Bob Ward, and a standout quarterback prospect in sophomore Bob Scarbath, the Terps will work out at old Byrd Stadium.

Their new stadium, in the final stages of completion, is being sodded.

G. W. will work out at its familiar Frog Island retreat on the Virginia side of the Potomac off 14th st.

Catholic University won't start until September 15. Coach John Jankowski doesn't expect any of his players to be called up because most of them are Engineering majors, and practically draft exempt.

However, Little Wilson Teachers College, which planned on resuming football after a 15-year layoff, may have to cancel its five-game schedule because so many of its prospects are being called. Gallaudet and Howard haven't set their starting dates yet.

Jim Baden, Vic Scott Tie for 2d

By Happy Walker

Baltimore, Aug. 26.—The Maryland Yacht Club opened its historic Star-Spangled Banner Regatta here today with under a hundred of the East Coast's fastest drivers on hand to thrill thousands of spectators.

The first half of the afternoon's program, featuring the flying outboard hydros, starred Ben Jankowski, former USAF pilot and veteran Long Island (New York) driver, who set a blistering pace to make a clean sweep of the C and F hydro classes with twin wins in each.

Washington's trumpet-playing Jimmy Baden, who races his C hydro, Poison, on off days, accounted for third place in the C hydro class and second in the F hydro event. Vic Scott, national high point holder, alternated with Baden for a second in the C hydro and a third in the F hydro classes. Both Baden and Scott tallied 1050 points for the day's high-point standing, headed only by Jankowski who racked up 1600 points.

The newest class in speed-boat racing, the stock utility class, made and impressive showing today in its first major regatta appearance. William Carbo, jr.., Francis Pasquini and Joe Clagett, all of Washington, made impressive showings against a brilliant field.

Carbo, set the pace for twin wins and 800 points in the BU class, beating out Bob McLean, Reading, Pa., and Fulton Dowell, Dowell, Md. who took second and third respectively out of a field of 15 starters.

Francis Pasquini, Washington, trailed Eddie Deitrich of Baltimore for third place in Dinga Boy.

Tomorrow's program gets under way at 10 a. m. with 22 steller events on tap, featuring the heavier and faster inboards and hydroplanes.

D. C. Ousted After No-Hitter

Johnstown, Pa., Aug. 26.—Hugh Waln pitched a no-hit, no-run game today to give Washington a 1-0 victory over Johnstown, but the Capital City team was eliminated in tonight's semifinals, 8-7, by Baltimore.

Waln's feat marked the first time that a pitcher has hurled a no-hitter in the tournament.

Earlier, Baltimore, Md., won its fourth consecutive game without a defeat, beating Central Jersey 7-0. It was Central Jersey's first loss of the tournament.

Coach 'Bothers' Shirley May, Dad Threatens Suit

Somerset, Mass., Aug. 26 (U.P.). Shirley May France's father said today he will go to court for a restraining order to prevent her swimming coach, Harry Boudakian, from "bothering" his daughter.

J. Walter France said he did not care where his 18-year-old daughter stayed as long as it was not with the Boudakian family.

Shirley, who twice has failed to swim the English Channel, left her home here Wednesday night and went to live with Boudakian and his wife at nearby Dighton. Later today she left there to live with two girl friends in their home at Fall River.

Shirley has said she would not return home because her father only "wanted to make money on me as a swimmer."

Connolly Beats Jahn for Title

Philadelphia, Aug. 26 (AP).—Maureen Connolly, 15-year-old San Diego, Calif., star, retained the National Girls Tennis title today, defeating Laura Lou Jahn, 17, of Clearwater, Fla., 10—8 6—0, at the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Miss Connolly, taking the title back to California for the fifth successive year, needed only 48 minutes to polish off the same opponent she whipped in the finals last year.

In Swimming Meet Tomorrow

Bettie Roland Puts AAU Title on Line

Men's and women's 100-yard freestyle will be the features of the eight races scheduled to close the District of Columbia AAU's 1950 senior outdoor swimming championships tomorrow night at Takoma Park pool.

Although Dave Scott, a plebe at West Point, will not be here to defend in the men's event, his former Ambassador teammates Stan Tinkham, Dick Twining, Don Tindal and Ray Hoffett are capable of making a close race of it.

The Takoma team is also presenting formidable entires in Milton Michaelis, Chick Hallock, Bob Lalor and Bill Roth. Michaelis, erstwhile Georgia Tech star, is a former D. C. AAU freestyle titlist. Hallock, a letter winner at the University of Virginia, displayed his caliber earlier this season by winning the 200 in the annual A. Earle Weeks Memorial meet, and Lalor and Roth are among the most promising of entries making initial bids for senior crowns.

The women's field is headed by defending titlist Bettie Roland of Takoma Park, and Barbara Hobelmann, the women's senior national 1500-meter freestyle champion from Ambassador. Miss Hobelmann finished fourth last summer, but she is determined to take not only the title, but the record as well, this year. The first national champion ever to represent the District of Columbia, the tall, blonde lass, is the area's most improved swimmer of the year.

Little Ellen Oberti and Mary Freeman, Ambassador's other point winners in the nationals, will also start, and there is a good possibility that the first three to finish in the 100 will crack the present standard.

Frank Wall Wins Again For Quantico

Wichita, Kans., Aug. 26.—With Sergt. Frank Wall hurling his third straight victory, the Quantico Marines advanced to the fourth round of the National Semipro baseball tournament here last night.

The Marines, hitting with men on bases and playing near errorless ball, defeated the El Dorado (Kans.) Elks, 6 to 2. They next play in the undefeated bracket next Tuesday with their opponent to be determined later.

Quantico scored in the first as Adam Gruca tripled and came in on a wild pitch by Lee Beran.

The Marines increased their lead to 3-0 in the fourth. Bill Hawkins led off with a single but a double play erased it. Then Gerald Donovan sent a home run over the right field score board. Stan Sidloski singled, a walk and a single by Glenn Omholt followed counting one more run and sending Beran to the showers.

2 Swim Pools Close Today

Two public swimming pools will be closed for the year after today and the remaining six will be closed after Labor day, September 4, recreation department officials have announced.

Rosedale and Georgetown, the first two, had the highest attendance figures for June and July in recent years, they said. August figures have not been completed.

Francis and Mckinley also showed an increase in attendance in June and July over the same months last year, but the other four pools dropped off sharply, Government Services, Inc., said.

Here are the figures for the public pools:

June and July combined totals for 1950. Anacostia, 13,000; Banneker, 24,000; East Potomac, 21,000; Francis, 1300; Georgetown, 12,100; McKinley, 17,000; Rosedale, 32,000 and Takoma, 28,000.

For 1949. Anacostia, 20,000; Banneker, 30,000; East Potomac, 50,000; Francis, 10,000; Georgetown, 7900; McKinley, 10,000; Rosedale, 17,100; and Takoma, 80,000.

Alexandrian Wins Sailing Crown

Milford, Conn., Aug. 26 (AP). Frank Marquardt of Alexandria, Va., won the 1950 Thistle class sailing championships at the Milford Yacht Club on Long Island Sound here today.

Marquardt piloted his 17-foot "White Shadows" to first place in today's two final races in the three-day meet to amass a point total of 156¾.

Second spot for the meet went to Tom Hendrickson of Sandusky, Ohio, whose blac Jac amassed a meet total of 147½ points; while Jack Smith of Washington, D. C., skipper of the "Witch Woman," was in third place with 144 points. Last year's champion, Dr. Walter Lawson, of Washington, D. C., was in 10th place with 120¼ points.

30 Days 'Til Maryland

Navy Gridders Start Practice Tomorrow

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 26 (AP).—Navy's top football talent will hit the field Monday when head Coach Eddie Erdelatz calls out the 40 leading candidates for positions on the Academy's 1950 squad.

On the same day, 43 men will report to Junior Varsity Mentor Frank Foster.

Erdelatz, who will have exactly 30 days to prepare the varsity squad for their first game, said the Middies will work out twice a day "for about the first two weeks of practice," but that "depending on our progress, we may revert to the regular one-a-day practice schedule sooner."

Eddie, who relieved last year's head coach George Sauer, will have 19 returning lettermen, led by end and captain Tom Bakke, to form the foundation of this year's team. The team will be minus 12 lettermen from last year's squad but will retain the old first-string backfield—quarterback Bob Zastrow, halfbacks Bill Powers and Frankie Hauff and fullback Dave Bannerman.

"We hope to use the two-platoon system. However, how the available personnel shapes up in preseason practice will determine this for us," Eddie said.

Navy's 1950 nine-game schedule will be: Septemper 30, Maryland at College Park; October 7, Northwestern at Baltimore; October 14, at Princeton; October 21, Southern California at Baltimore; October 28, Penn at Philadelphia; November 4, Notre Dame at Cleveland; November 11, Tulane at Baltimore, and November 18, Columbia at New York. The Army-Navy classic is set for December 2 in Philadelphia.

Table Tennis Sept. 23

The District of Columbia Table Tennis Association will hold a tournament September 23 at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace beginning at 8 p. m.

Events will include men's singles and doubles and women's singles. Prizes will be awarded the winners. The public is invited to participate.

The Law Goes Fishing

'Charge of Light Brigade' Fails at Bluefish But Trout, Spot Provide Fun at Sharp's Light

By Ralph Murdock

It was the "Charge of the Light Brigade" all over again Thursday when several prominent Maryland State Troopers and law enforcement officers of the Maryland Tidewater Fisheries Commission boarded the "Arundel" at Annapolis to try their hand at the bluefish.

Murdock

The anglers in khaki failed in their contemplated assault on the blues even with Colonel Cary Jarman, superintendent of the Maryland State Police leading the attack. Nevertheless, every one had a lot of fun with the trout and spot at Sharp's Light. They boated 25 nice trout and an equal number of spot.

Incidentally, the "Colonel," who served in both world wars, was the youngest captain in the Twenty-ninth Division in the First World War and commanded the 115th Infantry Machine Gun Company at the age of 21.

The other anglers were Capt. Weber, Field Force Commander of the Maryland Troopers, Capt. Carl Dillinger, stationed at Waterloo, Md., Capt. Charles Magaha, Frederick, Md., Richard W. Bruckman, accountant, Capt. Louis Bloom, Communications Officer and Jerry O'Connell, director of training for the traffic institute at Northwestern University.

Monk Foster, in charge of enforcement for the Tidewater Commission, Howard Hartge, Howard C. Shenton, skipper represented the Fisheries Commission. Also aboard was Jimmy Wild, who had been writing sports for the Baltimore Sun for 15 years, Harry W. Smith, publisher of Sportsmen's Guides, and your correspondent.

The bluefish failed to surface and all of our fish were taken while still fishing. Sorry to add—we also failed to catch a single illegal haul seiner.

FISHING IN the same area, about two miles from us, a catch of 69 blues and one rock was made. The party consisted of Father Roach, pastor of St. Jerome's Catholic Church, Hyattsville, Md.; John A. Clarke, his wife, Stella; Jack and Regina Stewart of Baltimore, Md., and Lee Auth and his two youngsters.

Capt. Doyle Kendall at Deale, Md., was the skipper. The fish surfaced about a mile southwest of Sharp's Light.

OLD AGE has claimed the West Virginia Conservation Commission's prize rainbow beauty which for years disported herself in the display basin at the Marlinton trout hatchery to the delight of thousands of fisherman and others. This fish was one of several kept in a small pool as an attraction for visitors to the hatchery. She was 30 inches long and weighed as much as 8 pounds.

But for a month before she died she had eaten almost nothing and at her death weighed only 5¾ pounds. It is reported by the attendants that the fish reached the ripe old age of 7 years—a long span of life for a rainbow.

REDSKINS—From P. 1-C

Redskins Run Over Cards, 31-7

when Pete Stout intercepted a Tripucka pass on the Cards' 30-yard line and returned it 15 yards. Two plays later, it was 7-0, Redskins. On second down, Harry Gilmer passed to Dowda who caught the ball on the goal line and fell over for a touchdown. With Sammy Baugh holding, Dudley kicked the extra point to make it 7-0, Redskins.

SECOND QUARTER

Sammy Baugh took over the Redskins' quarterbacking as the second quarter got under way. Bob Goode and George Thomas ripped off two straight first downs for the Redskins, but the drive was stalled on the Redskins' 45 and Dudley kicked out to the Chicago 27.

Paul Christman made his first appearance in the game for the Cards midway the second quarter.

After Eddie Saenz ripped off 10 yards around end to give the Redskins a first down on the Cards' 32-yard line, Baugh passed the Redskins to the Cards 13-yard line. He hit Hugh Taylor for 16 and then connected with Goode for three.

Dowda picked up two more, but the touchdown drive was halted when the Redskins drew a 15-yard holding penalty. With fourth down and 16 yards to go Bill Dudley kicked a 31-yard field goal to move the Redskins in front 10-0.

Four minutes before halftime, Hall Haynes intercepted a Christman pass on the Redskins 23-yard line and returned it 35 yards to the Cards 42-yard line.

In two plays the Redskins scored again. Gilmer missed on pass intended for Tereshinski, but followed it up with a perfect shot to Taylor who caught the ball in the end zone for a 42-yard touchdown pass. Dudley added the extra point again and the score was Redskins 17, Cardinals 0.

Thirty seconds before halftime, Guard Johnny Badaczewski recovered Christman's fumble for the Redskins on the Cardinals5 24-yard line. It took only one play for a touchdown this time, Gilmer connecting with Taylor again in the end zone.

Once again, Dudley's kick was true and the Redskins now led 24-0.

THIRD QUARTER

The Redskins got rolling the second time they got the ball following the kickoff. From their own 31-yard line, they went for a touchdown in five running plays. Hall Haynes, the defensive ace from Santa Clara, raced 31 yards for the touchdown, breaking offguard for the score.

Previously, George Thomas had ripped off 19 yards and Haynes had added 14 on his first offensive play of the season. Dudley again kicked the extra point, and now it was Redskins, 31, Cardinals 0.

A 15-yard penalty for roughing the kicker gave the Cardinals the ball on their own 29-yard line and Hardy immediately launched a passing attack. Three straight tosses to Dove, Kutner and Dove again moved the ball to the Redskins' 29-yard line.

Three running plays got the Cards only seven yards and on fourth down, Hardy, trying a quarterback sneak, fumbled and Dowda recovered for the Redskins on the Washington 21-yard line. It was Chicago's deepest penetration so far and only the third time they had passed midfield. The quarter ended with the score, Washington, 31, Chicago, 0.

FOURTH QUARTER

Nick Sebek, rookie from Indiana, moved into hte quarterback slot for the Redskins in the final period as Coach Herman Ball sent in a stream of reserves. With Sebek's entrance into the game, the Redskins had used all of their 41 players.

After Joe Bartos and Henry Hollar moved the ball 20 yards to the Redskins' 45-yard line, Sebek raced 13 yards on a "keeper" play to the Chicago 43-yard line as the Redskins moved goalward again. Tackle Paul Lipscomb and Guard Herb Seigert were the only veterans in the Washington line-up.

The drive came to grief, however, as Jerry Davis intercepted Sebek's pass on the Chicago 14-yard line.

Hardy launched another Cards' passing attack with three minutes to play and this one paid off with a touchdown. He passed four times to Kutner and once to Dove. A pass interference penalty against Dudley gave the Cards an automatic first down on the Redskins five-yard line and Fullback Lindy Lauro banged over for the touchdown. Hardy added the extra point to make the score Redskins, 31, Cardinals 7.

Washington	7	17	7	0	—31
Chicago Cards	0	0	0	7	— 7

Touchdowns—Redskins: Dowda (pass from Gilmer), Taylor 2 (two passes from Gilmer), and Haynes. Cardinals—Lauro. Field goal—Dudley. Extra points—Dudley 4 Hardy.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Price Boosts Stir Labor Unrest

Livingston

The job of getting on with the Korean war, of organizing a long-time defense program against Communist Russia, isn't helped by: (1) The threat of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors to tie up the nation's railroads; (2) the open conflict between Secretary of the Treasury Snyder and Federal Reserve Board Chairman McCabe on Government interest rates: (3) the upward dance of prices and corporation dividends; (4) the General Motors Corp. nickel-an-hour wage increase as a result of the April-July jump in the cost of living from 167.3 to 172.5, and (5) the subsequent Chrysler decision to grant employes an immediate 10-cent-an-hour wage boost.

Once again the brunt of the nation's strivings—political, economic, social—falls on the President. He has so much to do, so many decisions to make, as ambitious, determined men—each satisfied he is morally right—elbow one another.

The railroad trainmen and conductors insist they are entitled to 48 hours pay for 40 hours work even though a Presidential Emergency Board recommended 44½ hours pay for 40 hours work. Brotherhood leaders argue that the nonoperating unions got 48-for-40 a year ago from another emergency board.

Better Seized Than Out

Trainmen and conductors who work in the yards and terminals don't want less pay when the cost of living is shooting up. What will they have to spend in their extra leisure? It puts W. P. Kennedy, president of the Trainmen, successor to the late A. F. Whitney, on the spot. He faces his first convention as president on September 20 at Miami Beach. He wants to go in a winner and shut off any opposition that might develop. If he doesn't get the 48-for-40, he wants to be able to say that the President seized the railroads, that he, Kennedy, bowed to the supreme authority, even as Whitney in 1946.

Rail labor's unrest is symptomatic. You can't look at a newspaper these days without finding announcements of price increases. Hundreds of items have gone up since Korea: Shoes, stainless steel, print cloth, gasoline, carpets, pig iron, passenger car and truck tires, worsteds, magnesium ingots, sheets and pillow cases, cigarettes, sugar, television sets, and on ad infinitum.

Once again, the race between the cost of living and wages is under way (see chart). That's why Walter Reuther, in his frank, picturesque fashion, declared that G. M. workers are being paid in the "wooden nickels of inflation." He wants an all-out price freeze. That's why William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor asked for a 13 percent general wage rise before wages are frozen.

Good for the Other Fellow

Nearly everyone argues restraint—for the other fellow. But the worker wants to beat any wage freeze with a wage increase. The corporation and business man want to beat a price freeze with a price increase and a dividend-freeze with a dividend boost or extra. During World War II it was bad taste to be generous to stockholders. So prices and costs go up. Incidentally, this will raise the defense bill—the tax bill. It will hike the prices we pay ourselves for airplanes, tanks, guns, and ammunition.

After the bumper profits reports in the first half, corporation executives might well take the lead in exercising self-restraint. In this, Charles E. Wilson, president of G. M. set a worthy example. He declared G. M. would try to avoid a price rise in spite of the five-cent-an-hour wage boost. But, as the Chrysler action shows, workers in other companies and industries will want wage boosts to match those of G. M.

Hit-and-Miss Phase

Within the government, checking the rise in prices isn't made easier by the Snyder-McCabe rift. The Reserve Board has been anxious for months to make money more expensive. It has wanted to curb credit expansion, to make borrowers pay more for loans. The effect would be partly psychological. But the Treasury has insisted on paying an extremely low price for its funds—1¼ percent for 13-months notes.

When the Reserve raised its rediscount rate from 1½ percent to 1¾ percent, it broke with the Treausry. If the Reserve has its way, interest rates for everybody, Secretary Snyder included, will go up—and serve as a deterrent to speculation and over-expansion.

Meanwhile, we're still in the fouling-up stage of the war effort. The government has yet to establish the machinery of controls. The Treasury and the Reserve Board have not reconciled differences over monetary and credit policy. And workers and business men are trying to get in their "preparation"—their protection—first.

As usual, we're going to fight this war among ourselves as well as with our enemies—on a hit-or-miss basis. We're going to knock common sense into one another the hard way. We'll learn the blessings of restraint by not exercising it!

Lumber Shipments

Lumber shipments of 428 mills reporting to the National Lumber Trade Barometer were 10.2 percent below production for the week ending August 19. New orders of these mills were 15.9 percent below production. Unfilled orders of the reporting mills amounted to 64 percent of stocks.

Metropolitan Bank to Open First Branch

By S. Oliver Goodman

The National Metropolitan Bank will open its first branch tomorrow in the Spring Valley section at 49th st. and Fordham rd.

Hildebrand

Francis E. Hildebrand, long a vice president at the main office at 613 15th st. nw., will head the branch assisted by selected personnel, President C. F. Jacobsen announced yesterday. Hildebrand is a resident of the 49th st. area.

The new branch is in a three-story building of Colonial Williamsburg design, constructed by the W. C. and A. N. Miller Development Co. The bank facilities are on the first floor and include a trust department, tellers' windows, safe deposit boxes, air-conditioning and a night depository. Ample auto parking space is provided as well as a drive-in window on the Fordham rd.

Main entrance is on the 49th st. side. Rest of the building, it was learned, will be occupied by a furniture firm.

National Metropolitan Bank, organized in 1814, is the oldest national bank in Washington. It has the distinction of being the first national bank in the country to be granted trust powers under the Federal Reserve Act.

Assistant manager of the branch will be Bernard E. Thomas. Including Hildebrand and Thomas, there will be seven staff members at the new office.

PROFITS: The second quarter of 1950 was the most profitable period on record for industrial corporations, according to an analysis by Standard & Poor's Corp. The increase of 2.5 percent shown for the initial three months of 1950 was swelled to a gain of 21.3 percent for the first half, based on the returns of 835 companies reporting to date. The unusually sharp rise in corporate profits this year, particularly in the second quarter, was attributed mainly to the following factors: (1) the high and rising rate of production and sales; (2) the stable or rising trend of commodity prices, and (3) the benefits accruing from the operation of modernized and expanded plants.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Admiral Jonas H. Ingram, retired, has been elected vice president of Reynolds Metals Co. in charge of sales. He served as commander of the Atlantic Fleet in World War II and has been associated with Reynolds since December 1, 1949. . . . Albert W. Stompe has resigned as general sales manager of Marathon Corp. to become Diamond Match Co.'s vice president in charge of sales. . . . Jack H. Hornsby has been promoted to eastern division manager of Schenley Distributors, Inc. . . . J. William Costello has joined the Capehart-Farnsworth Corp. as sales promotion manager.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 26 (AP).—A little short-covering in the last half hour left the grain market with a steady tone on the Board of Trade today. It was a pretty dull market, notable mainly for a slackening in the hedging pressure which has been exerted against wheat this week.

The late short covering was attributed to traders who did not want to be on the short side of the market over the weekend, particularly in view of the international situation. The same small-scale buying movement was noticed late last Saturday, too.

Wheat closed ⅛@⅝ higher, corn ⅛@⅜ higher, oats ½@1⅛ higher, soybeans 1@1½ higher and lard 26@10 cents a hundred pounds higher.

The day's activities were carried on without any stimulus from the news. The range follows:

Varied Factors Blamed for Drop in Stocks

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—A long rally snapped short in the stock market this week.

For the first time since mid-July the market turned in a losing score on the week. The decline was small and was caused more by uncertainty than fact.

Traders faced the weekend with a full quota of unanswered questions and many prudently took to the sidelines to wait further developments.

Caution was influenced by a number of factors, some of which came to a head on Friday.

Congress had not yet made up its mind on either an interim tax-increase bill or war control legislation, for one thing.

At the weekend there were disturbing signs that an excess profits tax was still in the running despite earlier indications to the contrary.

Wall Street is more or less resigned to an excess profits tax but has gone on the theory, by and large, that it would not be written into the law until the next session of Congress.

A national railroad strike was called late in the week and the President's plans to cope with the threat were not immediately available. Seizure of the rails was announced after the market closed Friday.

The international picture was blurred by a request from Communist China that the United Nations order the United States Seventh Fleet out of waters off the coast of Formosa.

Last—and possibly most important—was the fact that the market had risen for five weeks without serious setback.

Long experience has taught Wall Street that the market does not go very far in any direction without an adjustment. Many brokers claimed that Friday's batch of unfavorable news was merely an excuse for canny traders to lighten their holdings.

Pressing Steel Shortage Seen Possible in '50

Pittsburgh, Aug. 26 (AP).—The real pinch for steel may come in the last three months of the year.

In the closing quarter of 1950, defense orders may gain new momentum. So far, they have accounted for only a small proportion of the heavy steel demand that has kept mills bustling at near capacity levels.

Steel men hope military orders won't bring the hectic conditions of World War II. One factor they cite is this:

In the last war, enormous quantities of steel went into ships—both fighting and freight.

The Korean emerency, or any new crisis, will find hundreds upon hundreds of those ships laid up and stored away for duty when and if needed.

Steel executives insist they can handle howling demands for steel if left to themselves. They want to impose their own system of allocating steel. They contend their experience with needs of customers gives them know-how the Government couldn't possibly get in short order.

The current situation, officials say, isn't presenting any great strain compared to recent months.

PIANOS—THE ONE AND ONLY
Incomparable Haddorff

Incomparable because only the Haddorff console has two sounding boards, and not just one. Artists, teachers and tuners alike are amazed at its beauty of tone, and say it compares favorably with high quality baby grands. The effective or "speaking" area of its sounding boards is greater than that of many grand pianos. We have on display a 37-year-old Haddorff piano whose beauty of tone and responsiveness of action is exactly like new yet only seventy cents worth of new parts were needed to place the piano in first class condition. Exclusively with COLONIAL PIANO CO., 637 D ST. N.W., NA. 4870.

PIANOS—Steinway, Knabe, Chickering, Weber, Story & Clark, Cable-Nelson, Wurlitzer, Jesse French, all slightly used or like new in every respect; spinet, grand, console and upright models in a variety of finishes; all pianos reasonably priced; convenient credit terms. Ship Talk Is Shop Talk

Regatta Queen Boasts Salty Heritage

By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

QUEEN of the President's Cup Regatta, Miss Marilyn O'Neill, daughter of Vice Admiral Merlin O'Neill, is photographed in the Westchester apartment of her parents. She will be crowned at the Watergate on Thursday evening, September 8, and after that her life will be quite nautical. She will attend all regatta events and a number of parties will be given in her honor

By Elizabeth Maguire

A THOUSAND ships were launched by Helen of Troy, but our regatta queen will be crowned by a thousand launches. The evening of September 8 a fleet of spectator boats will cruise to the Watergate to see Miss Marilyn O'Neill made queen of the President's Cup Regatta. Fair-haired and blue eyed, she's the daughter of Vice Admiral and Mrs. Merlin O'Neill, and after September 8 her life will be quite nautical.

She'll view the regatta from a boat in the Potomac on the line where races start and finish. Sailing events September 23 and 24 will be of greatest interest to her, for she's an accomplished sailor. Her father is commandant of the Coast Guard, and all her life she has listened to ship talk.

Power boats will race September 16 and 17. These tiny craft don't go to sea, but buzz off and circle back before they've left. And the winner gets the President's Cup.

Coolidge Presented Gold Cup

THE regatta was initiated back in 1926 by members of the Corinthian Yacht Club. Later, in 1933, the President's Cup Regatta Association was formed to make the festival a yearly civic undertaking. It was called the President's Cup Regatta because President Coolidge was the first President to present the regatta's gold cup to the winner of the power boat races.

Each succeeding year the cup has been presented at the White House by the President in office. The regatta was not held during the war years, 1944 and 1945. In 1938 the cup was not presented by the President, simply because President Roosevelt had congratulated the winner immediately after the race, and felt a later presentation at the White House superfluous.

A special event for Queen Marilyn's reign this year will be a mock battle between scale models of the Constitution and Guerriere, fighters in historic sea battle of the War of 1812. Designed by Comdr. Carl M. J. Von Zielinski, the boats are 30 feet long with crews of four to six men. Further repetitions of the historic battle will be September 7, 8, 16, 22 and 23.

These events and many others will be viewed by the queen and members of her court from the decks of a committee boat.

Twentieth Queen of Regata

MISS O'NEILL is the twentieth queen of the cup regatta, and she is certainly one of the prettiest. Her beauty admirably suits an admiral's daughter. She wears her hair brushed neatly back with just a hint of curl around her forehead. A part in the middle keeps a straight line with her patrician little nose, and she has wide-set, beautiful eyes which she says "I guess would be considered blue."

She likes to paint and do cartooning. When she graduates from Bouve School next June she plans to teach physical education.

We asked her what she was doing this summer. "Not a thing," answered the Queen. She is spending the kind of summer she likes the best—no plans, no routine, just quiet leisure and time to be with friends and family.

Summer at Scientist's Cliff

SHE lives at the Westchester with her mother and father, and most of her weekends are spent at their summer home at Scientist's Cliff, Md. "That's a bit of heaven I could talk about for hours," says Marilyn's mother. "The Point was settled by scientists from Smithsonian Institution and professors from George Washington University. The cliffs are the old Cliffs written about by John Smith.

Miss O'Neill was graduated from Garrison Forest School in Garrison, Md., in June 1947. She has been away from Washington about six years except for brief vacations. She and her charming mother follow the Admiral to his different posts. During the war they lived first in Norfolk, then Baltimore, then Washington, and then Norfolk again. Patricia O'Neill, the queen's pretty sister, married Ensign Richard T. Penn, jr., on June 10, and Marilyn was maid of honor. Now she's the Queen.

MISS MARILYN O'NEILL, Queen of the President's Cup Regatta, takes the wheel on board Commodore Jack Miller's cruiser, Sea Nymph. The Commodore goes along as passenger, as the queen is a good sailor and knows how to steer a straight course. Her father, Vice Admiral Merlin O'Neill, is Commandant of the Coast Guard

Country Club Slates Annual Bal Masque

By Virginia Cullen

REHOBOTH BEACH, DEL., Aug. 26.—The August full moon next week will enhance the setting of this resort's International Ball to be held on the open air terrace of the Rehoboth Beach Country Club Thursday evening.

This will be the Art League's twelfth annual bal masque. Heading the general committee this time is one of the younger set of Lewes, Miss Adele T. Chambers, who teaches the league's summer class of small children. She is the daughter of one of the breakwater town's best-known Delaware River and Bay pilots, Capt. George E. Chambers. Her assistants are two young Lewes matrons, Mrs. Mervyn L. Lafferty and Mrs. Gilbert M. Wiltbank.

The huge dancing terrace of the country club, fringed with the overhanging boughs of trees, is lending itself nicely to the decoration scheme in the capable hands of Artist Clarence C. Flatt. He has secured from the United Nations at Lake Success, N. Y., an assortment of "good will" international posters and U. N. flags of all countries. These will form a background for the dancers.

Second Annual Auction Will Raise Funds

A WEEKEND attraction for the whole resort colony will be the second annual auction Sunday night at 8:30 of the Rehoboth Kiwanis Club, to raise money for its underprivileged children's fund.

A large rostrum is being erected on the boardwalk in front of the old Hotel Henlopen, including a ramp for an impromptu fashion show. Leading Delaware women's shops are providing models who will wear complete fall outfits to be auctioned off for the benefit. Everything has been donated, including the services of the Stuart-Kingston Galleries' manager and its top auctioneer, Maury Stein and Sidney Cohan, respectively.

Charles Hein of the boardwalk's Cabana Club is handling a musical entertainment.

Such benefits are popular with the summer crowds at Re-

Parents Present Miss Fletcher

One of the season's biggest events in the Virginia Hunt Country was the tea dance debut yesterday of Miss Elizabeth Carter Fletcher at the Middleburg Community Center. Dressed in pale pink starched lace, Miss Fletcher was presented by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clinton Fletcher, to friends from Washington, Virginia, and Maryland.

Rooms of the Community Center were decorated with lilies, dahlias, gladioli and tube roses. Outside on the terrace were long tables with punch in giant silver trophies and platters of Virginia ham and turkey. Dancing was to the music of Jack Morton's orchestra.

Debutante, Mother Receive

The debutante and her mother received their guests before a large screen of periwinkle, pinned with corsages sent Miss Fletcher. Miss Fletcher's frock was fashioned with full skirt and long sleeved jacket, and she carried a nosegay of pink roses, blue delphinium, snapdragons and babies' breath. Mrs. Fletcher wore a mist blue taffeta dress with a corsage of orchids pinned at the waist.

Miss Fletcher was graduated in June from Fairfax Hall and will enter Bard Avon in Baltimore this fall. She will make her formal bow to Baltimore society at the Bachelor's Cotillon in December. She is an accomplished equestrienne and hunts with the Piedmont and Middleburg Fox Hounds.

Out-of-Town Guests

Among the out-of-town guests attending the party were Mr. and Mrs. Dan Dugan,, Judge and Mrs. James Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Smith, Miss Carter Carroll, Miss Sally Daingerfield Zantzinger, Mr. and Mrs. William Moncure, Mr. and Mrs. Addison Clark, and Mr. and Mrs. Medford Canby.

This afternoon Mr. and Mrs. George R. Slater are entertaining at a tea at their home "West View" in honor of Miss Fletcher.

Miss Yowell is a graduate of Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia. Her fiancé is a graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute. The wedding will take place in October.

Patuxent Is Nice, But—

Navy Flight Nurse Yearns for Duty in Korean Zone

By Norma Lanum

YOU'D think Sophie Kenyes would be satisfied. You'd think that after seven years service all over the world the veteran Navy flight nurse would be content to be based at the Patuxent River Naval Air Station.

What a paradise! Just imagine swimming and sailing along the beautiful beaches of the peninsular base jutting into the Chesapeake Bay at the mouth of the Patuxent River. Just imagine living on a lovely Navy base where the ratio between women and men is something like seven to 500!

What would be better, you ask?

Korea would, retorts 28-year-old Lieutenant Kenyes. Yes, Sophie wants to go to Korea.

The petite attractive brown-eyed nurse joined the Navy shortly after her twenty-first birthday because she wanted to be of service to her country. And for that very same reason she'd give anything to get to Korea and help evacuate the wounded. She's already asked the Navy to send her there.

Now She's Sitting Tight

For the present, however, Sophie must sit tight on her job at Patuxent awaiting action on her request for transfer to the Pacific. But "sitting tight" for a flight nurse is not likely to lead to boredom.

Sophie's job as flight nurse for the Navy Air Transport Squadron No. 1 takes her to several bases in this country and Cuba and Port Lyautey in French Morocco to evacuate the Navy's sick and injured.

She flies in Navy hospital planes, taking most cases to the special treatment centers in Bethesda, Md., Long Island, and Philadelphia. The less serious cases are customarily flown to hospitals nearest their home towns, she explains.

Of course this is important duty, too, Sophie admits, and it gives a girl plenty of chances to see the world. But Sophie's already seen her share of the world.

She was in the Pacific during the last years of World War II and the immediate postwar years. She was a flight nurse then, too, evacuating patients from Guam, Midway, Wake and Kwajalein.

Flew to European Cities

THEN last spring she flew to London, Paris, Rome, Athens, Tripoli and many other European cities on her vacation.

The Navy is wonderful, Michigan-born Sophie Kenyes says sincerely. She joined up following her graduation from the Grace Hospital School of Nursing in Detroit and plans to stay in just as long as they'll have her.

And despite that burning urge to serve in Korea, Sophie really likes her work at Patuxent. She's a popular lass at the regular Saturday night dances at the officer's club and an eager sports enthusiast. When her schedule permits, she plays golf on the base's 18-hole course, swims and sails along the clear beaches or takes an occasional dip in the indoor pool at the Officers' Club.

Sophie knows she's a lucky girl to be selected as one of the Navy's 45 flight nurses from the entire Navy Nurse Corps of some 2000. She's proud of her job and proud, too, of the emblem on her uniform that so few girls are priviledged to wear. It's a pair of silver wings with an acorn, ancient emblem of the art of healing, and an anchor in the center.

Sophie's a happy girl, all right! But she'd be one of the happiest girls in the world if only they'd send her to Korea.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Feels She'd Go Mad From Grief If She Remained in Seclusion Following Recent Loss Of Loved One; Are Social Activities Proper?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Six weeks ago I lost a loved member of my family, a person whom I loved completely. It was a terrible shock,—sudden, with no warning.

This is why I am writing to you: I have resumed my normal activities, golfing, swimming, attending concerts and, of course, running the home for the rest of my family. I fear that eyebrows are being raised at my return to normal so soon after a great bereavement. Yet if I don't do these things and try to keep occupied, I feel I shall go mad with grief.

I am better company for my family, I am sure, since I picked myself up and became active again. My parents were sturdy down-to-earth people who accepted God's will and taught us likewise; and having accepted God's will in this, I try to be as I was before my loved one died. Though one smiles, the heart cries!

Am I doing right in going out so soon, or should I stay home out of respect for the dead? I do not want to do anything that may look disrespectful, and my husband feels as I do. Please give us your opinion.

A. J.

Grief Is Malady; Spurn It

DEAR A. J.: Grief is a kind of malady, from which the afflicted should recover as quickly as possible. However, running away from one's thoughts, or trying to, may not be the deep curative, although activities that fully occupy one's mind and hands, in waking time, may be good medicine during the first or shock phase of bereavement.

When the emotions are normalized, one is better able to appreciatively remember the dead-and-gone than when the soul is sick with sadness or numb from sudden loss of a beloved companion. Thus it is sound instinct that says pick yourself up and concentrate on customary pursuits, as an exercise in reviving mental health.

When a person is nearing the limits of his endurance in any trial, his nervous system tells him so. And if you feel that you might go mad with grief if you tried to digest your sorrow in social seclusion, then it's your duty to self and family to go amongst friends and relax the brooding tension.

Surely you would be proclaiming poor judgment and general unfitness to cope with vicissitudes and meet responsibilities, if you were to "go against nature" and try to conform to fixed Rules of Etiquette, in this emergency. Someone has said, "Love God and do as you please,"—meaning that when one's heart is right and one's purpose rational, one's actions will be constructive, even if "different" by conventional standards.

Mourning Rites Are Simpler Today

IN THE last quarter century, the etiquette of mourning has been much simplified in our culture, except in high official and diplomatic circles, where behavior is still "stylized."

Amongst average persons in the rank-and-file, it is no longer considered obligatory good form to shun social occasions or recreational activities for a fixed period of say six to eight to 12 months after the death of a near relative. Black mourning garb has more or less gone by the boards, unless in the case of "official" families. And ordinary folk who have experienced utter bereavement are respected for going about their business as usual,—not signifying in dress, disposition or otherwise that sorrow walks along with them.

Now, having said this much in support of your health-seeking policy, may I suggest that your program of activities might profitably include more emphasis on "good works" and rather less on play, for six months or so. That should take the arch out of the neighbors' eyebrows.

M. H.

Wed at Blessed Sacrament

Miss Roberta Faith Patterson Bride of Stafford R. Grady

Miss Roberta Faith Patterson became the bride of Stafford Robert Grady yesterday morning in the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament, the Rev. E. Carl Lyon officiating.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Patterson of New York City and Atlantic City. She is the granddaughter of the late Brig. Gen. Robert F. Patterson, former consul general of the United States to Calcutta, India. Mr. Grady is the son of Mrs. Sidney J. Darling of Grand Rapids, Mich., and the late Mr. Grady.

Given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Joseph C. Wells of Alexandria, the bride wore a gown of cream-colored satin and imported French lace in a rose design. Her veil of French silk illusion was held by a French lace headdress and she carried a bouquet of white roses and stephanotis.

Mrs. William J. McCabe attended the bride as matron of honor and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Gerard T. O'Brien and Miss Therese Grady, sisters of the bridegroom; Mrs. Robert W. Leavenworth, and Mrs. George C. Corrigan. Miss Joanne Wells, niece of the bride was junior bridesmaid.

James G. Grady, brother of the bridegroom, was best man and the ushers were Gerard T. O'Brien, Richard D. McCormick, John M. Proos, C. Frank Reifsnyder, Dr. MacAlphin Arnold, J. David Boland, Lieut. Thomas L. Cobb, USMC, and R. D. Siverson.

The papal blessing was bestowed on the bridal couple at the end of the wedding ceremony.

Following the reception at the Hotel 2400, Mr. and Mrs. Grady left for a wedding trip through the New England States and Canada. They will reside in Washington on their return.

The bride attended Holy Spirit Convent School and New Jersey College of Commerce. Her husband, an assistant United States attorney, attended St. Thomas Aquinas School, George Washington University and George Washington University Law School.

New Plaids Put Youngsters on High Road

WRINKLE-SHED tartan plaid in a Dan River cotton fabric is ideal for the grade school miss when she trots off to meet her new teacher. Sturdy and strong, this material requires no starch to keep it fresh and crisp, sheds both spots and wrinkles. Plaid frocks in this fabric are available at Lansburgh's

DESIGNED for campus cuties in the teen-age bracket is this jaunty little cap of scotch plaid. Borrowing from the jockey's taste in headgear, it has a peaked brim of velvet, topped with a little bow. Available at the L. Frank Co.

By Peggy Preston

THE young folks are due to have squares before their eyes when they scamper off to school next month. Everywhere they look they'll spot a chum clad in Scotch plaids.

One glance around the children's and teen-age sections of local shops and you come away convinced that Lassie—the beautiful Scotch collie of movie fame—must have had a paw in this year's fashion pie. The colorful tartans of Scotland's proud clans are everywhere in evidence, brightening even footwear and handbags.

When this reporter was school-bound, the best we had around was an authentic Scotch plaid tam-o-shanter, complete with big, wooly nob at center top. Not so today's lads and lassies. They'll wear their plaids in snappy, up-to-the-minute copies of grown-up fashions.

Smallest Fry Wear Cottons

THE wee ones, those in kindergarden and early grade school, will take their plaids principally in cotton fabrics. In dark colors of brown, blue, green and red, these make the most serviceable outfits for the small fry who habitually court mud and soot stains. If the cottons are treated chemically so as to be spot resistant, as well as wrinkle repellent, all the better. Many manufacturers of children's wear are using this type of cotton this winter and the majority of local shops carry dresses and shirts made of it.

Woolen tartans start with 4-year-old models and go right up through the entire size-range. Cunning little girl outfits include all-around pleated skirts with suspenders and matching jackets. For heavy weather there are reversible snow suits of gabardine and wool plaid.

Plaids Turn Up Everywhere

UP IN THE teen-age class, plaids grow more and more sassy. You may see them in a shirt under a velveteen or jersey jumper, in a kerchief, cummerbund, or little coin bag attached to a leather belt. Jockey caps are made of plaid with peaked brim of velvet. And there are even shoes of plaid—pumps and oxfords with nice, flat heels covered in leather.

Practically every item of dress is feeling the gay, young touch of the tartans. Pretty dance frocks in budget-priced rayon taffeta, etched in big, bold plaids, will make a splash of color at proms. Plaid pea jackets, navy style, will go to football games. Hooded raincoats, umbrellas, even rain boots—these are but a few of the novelty items that have taken to plaids for fall and winter.

PLAID turns up in all manner of garments for the school girl. Here it is made into a neatly tailored cotton blouse with long sleeves and narrow little collar. It is teamed with a scoop-neck, wool-jersey jumper in dark green, heather gray, rust or tan. Available at Best & Co.

Tobe Says . . .

Plaids for Fall

Never has there been such a gathering of the clan tartans as you'll find in the college shops this year. For the tartan fashion that was started by men is making a clean sweep of the young casual fashions designed for the college girls and their career sisters.

You can be sober or gay in color too—from the dark green and navy—Black Watch tartan, to the vivid Royal Stuart.

For the Campus Coiffure

Curls and Swirls Need to Be Neat

By Betty Clarke
Associated Press Newsfeatures

THERE was a little girl who had a little curl—and it hung right in front of her eye. Don't you think she could have been neater than that? Some little girls think it is cute to be different in the matter of coiffure, and while that is a fine idea, little curls and swirls are not always easy to care for at home.

Several hairstyles—because they are neat—will make a hit with the campus set. Take your choice of short straight hair, with or without bangs; a smooth short page-boy coiffure or a close-cropped hairdo (better for curlyheads.)

Of the three, the page boy is easiest to care for at home, and appeals to the majority of school girls. One hairdresser suggests it as a five-minute pincurling job that can be done while daughter brushes up on the American Revolution or Caesar.

Before you sit down to study, part your hair in the middle. Place a bottle of witch hazel or a glass of water, cotton, pins and a comb on your desk. Plan to pincurl in just one row around your head. You can do it by feeling your way around your head.

Section off the hair at one of your temples, dampen it with cotton soaked in water or witch hazel, twist a pincurl around your finger and fasten it with a hairpin or bobby pin. When you get to the locks just behind your ear, reverse the direction of the pincurl and continue to pin the curls in that direction until you finish at the other temple.

The hairdresser suggests that when you pincurl, you put your finger on your scalp and twist the hair around it from the scalp up. He claims it makes a better curl than if the pincurl is started from the ends of the hair and twisted into shape.

Many girls believe in the daily shampoo. This is a matter of personal preference. Some girls cannot wash their hair every day and risk colds. However, there is no question that the hair does look beautiful when brushed and laundered frequently. You should wash it at least once a week.

hoboth. Particularly successful was last week's Antique Show of All Saints' Episcopal Church. More than 300 persons attended the show on each of the three days it was open. Approximately $1000 was netted for the church. Antique dealers from many metropolitan areas have been assured this will be an annual summer event. Proceeds from door tickets and patronesses' subscriptions went to the church fund.

Younger Set Carts Off Prizes

WASHINGTON'S young citizenry carried off many of the prizes in the recent Children's Costume Party over in Henlopen Acres. Joseph Volpe, jr., of Arlington was a rope-twirling "cowhand," while petite Sandra Leach, daughter of the Sanford Leaches, gave a clever reading of a childhood classic. This was the second of two summer events for youngsters of the resort. The first, last June, was a hobby show. Both were Art League sponsored.

Alfred Jonniaux of Washington, portrait painter of many national and international notables, is opening his second annual exhibition here this week in the Corkran Studio. Next Saturday and Sunday there will be a special tea to receive visitors here for the Labor Day holidays. The show will remain hanging until October 1.

Concurrent with the Jonniaux exhibit will be a "three-woman" show in the Paynter House Studio. These two shows wind up the Art League's current exhibition season. The women artist exhibitors are all members of the Studio Group of Wilmington, Betty Boyd, Laura Reynolds and Madge Rickards Wright.

Mrs. Carlton Neilen of Ocean View, Del., will be hostess Sunday at the tea in the Paynter Studio, from 5 to 7 p. m.

guests at Minquas Lodge, corner of Baltimore ave. and First st. Here this week are Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Finney of Washington and Mr. and Mrs. George T. Matthews of Silver Springs. Others from the Capital were Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Seiler, while Mr. and Mrs. James S. Murray have just terminated a six-week stay at the Minquas Lodge Annex.

First Fashion Show Benefits Junior Club

YESTERDAY afternoon the first fashion show of the summer season was held at the Dewey Beach clubhouse of the Junior Tennis and Sailing Club, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Dee Holder. Sponsored by the Bill-Speakman Sun Shop on the boardwalk as a benefit for the junior club, the show featured 14 young girls and women of the resort colony as mannakins displaying early fall apparel. Among the models were Miss Alice Jane Davis of Fredericksburg, Md., daughter of the former Maryland State Senator Wilmer Fell Davis; Miss Martha Robinson of Winchester, Va., and Mrs. Harold Carver of Washington.

One of the most coveted exhibits in the summer art show of the Village Improvement Association on the boardwalk that closed last Sunday was bought by Washington's Mrs. W. Wallace Chiswell, who will hang it in her summer cottage at Rehoboth. It was an oil portrait study, life-sized, of an aged Negro farmer of this locality, seated beside a high-wheeled cart holding an open Bible in his lap. The painting was the work of the local portraitist, Clarence C. Flatt.

Much occurred this week in Art League circles. A surprise feature of the league's annual meeting was the unveiling and presentation of a handsome oil portrait of the founder and executive secretary, Mrs. Louise Chambers Corkran, which will be a permanent exhibit in the Corkran Studio. The artist was Ethel P. B. Leach, honorary president of the league, who painted her subject against a background of flower beds in the Homestead gardens in the Acres.

Elected as president was the Rev. Dr. William Drysdale Gibson, who was doubly honored by being selected as the organization's "outstanding member of the year," and invited to sign his name on the Door of Fame.

Gen. Allen's Daughter Is Bride

Bachrach

MRS. WILLIAM BOYD BROWNE
. . . Ensign's bride

WEDDINGS and engagements have taken the spotlight in the service set this week.

Miss Marion Townsley Allen, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Leven C. Allen, of Washington became the bride of Ensign William Boyd Brown, USN, yesterday in a ceremony performed in St. Thomas Episcopal Church.

Miss Selina Scoble Ball and Lieut. Noble Raymond Kean, USN, were married yesterday in the Naval Communications Chapel, with Capt. Paul G. Linaweaver performing the ceremony.

ST. THOMAS Episcopal Church was the scene of the wedding yesterday afternoon of Miss Marian Townsley Allen to Ensign William Boyd Browne, USN.

The bride is the daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Leven C. Allen of Washington and the bridegroom's parents are Dr. and Mrs. Edward T. Browne of Chapel Hill, N. C.

Canon Luther D. Miller, former Chief of Army Chaplains, performed the ceremony, and General Allen gave his daughter in marriage. The bride wore white satin with an heirloom lace veil and carried gardenias.

Miss Margaret L. Taylor of Chapel Hill was maid of honor and the bridesmaids included Miss Marianne Browne, the bridegroom's sister, of High Point, N. C.; Miss Janet Stewart of Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, N. Y., and Miss June Kuldell of Washington.

Edward T. Browne, jr., of Chapel Hill, served as best man, and the ushers were Ensign Paul W. Shea, USN, of Norfolk, Va.; and Ensign Donald A. Lehman, USN; Lieut. Peter R. Moureau, USN; Ensign Joseph J. Sanner, USN; Ensign James Fiscus, USN; Lieut. Hampton E. Mulligan, USN, all of Oceana, Va.; and Lieut. C. P. Townsley of New York City, the bride's cousin.

The newlyweds will make their home in Virginia Beach after September 5. The bride, a provisional member of the Junior League, attended Potomac School; St. Timothy's School, Catonsville, Md.; and Katharine Gibbs School in New York. Ensign Browne is an alumnus of the University of North Carolina.

Admiral's Aide Weds Selina Ball

THE chapel of the Naval Communications Center was the scene of the wedding at 12 noon yesterday of Miss Selina Scoble Ball to Lieut. Noble Raymond Kean, USN.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wesley Ball of Washington, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Noble Meacham Kean of Evanston, Ill.

Capt. Paul G. Linaweaver, Navy Chaplain, performed the ceremony and Mr. Ball gave his daughter in marriage. She wore white lace with orange blossom clusters holding her veil. Her corsage was of orchids and lilies of the valley. Miss Cornelia Ball was her sister's maid of honor and William M. Kean of Evanston served his brother as best man.

The ushers were Capt. William Reynolds, USAF; Capt. James Thrash, USAF; Lieut. Comdr. Benjamin H. Browning, jr., USN, and Lieut. Robert Morris, USN.

Rucy Messenger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore I. Messenger, was flower girl.

Following their reception at the Dorchester House, the newlyweds left for their wedding trip to Jamaica. They will reside in Washington on their return.

The bride was graduated from the University of Missouri School of Journalism. Lieutenant Kean, a graduate of the Citadel, Charleston, S. C., is aide to Vice Admiral Russell S. Berkey, USN.

Max Truitts and Their Guests Follow the Posies at Carlton Dinner

IT was boutonniere, boutonniere who's got the boutonniere at the Carlton Hotel Tuesday evening when the Max O'Rell Truitts gave a party to honor the newly appointed ambassadors to Greece and South Africa, and their wives.

As each male guest arrived, he received a boutonniere and the name of the lady he was to escort to dinner in the Carlton Room. Each couple found seats, by joining whichever table had as a centerpiece, the same color flower as that in the gentleman's buttonhole.

Mrs. Truitt, wearing a grey nylon net dress with rose-color beading, had more than 50 illustrious guests to greet. The party was given for two United States Ambassadors—Mr. and Mrs. John Peurifoy, who will soon go to Greece where Mr. Puerifoy is to be Ambassador, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Erhardt who will take up residence at the embassy in South Africa. Guests included the Chief Justice of the United States and Mrs. Fred Vinson, Justice Robert Jackson and Mrs. Jackson, Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black, and Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark.

Baron Silvercruys, the Belgian Ambassador, was there to help dispatch the two new ambassadors, and Mrs. Truitt's sister, Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 3d, was there with her husband.

Other guests were Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John Snyder, General and Mrs. Omar Bradley, Senator and Mrs. William Fulbright, Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; the Paul Porters, General and Mrs. Wade Haislip, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ross, Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally and Senator and Mrs. Brien McMahon.

Weskit..Blouse..Skirt

Vanity Pattern 6107

EVEN without a preschool survey, it's obvious that the back-to-books crowd are sticking to the classics of the classroom—the separates. Again, it's a mix or match season—with the weskit tops. The favorite skirt is a dirndl type—easy to make and with a back closing. The blouse is buttoned at the back neckline and has a turnover collar and, for front interest, four triangular tabs. The question for careful individual vote is whether to make the blouse and weskit in matching colors or to have the weskit of a contrasting color to go with the skirt. Whatever the decision, the result is sure to be rewarding to any Junior Miss who makes her own with Vanity Pattern 6107.

The classic feeling of school clothes should be carried out through a careful choice of fabrics. The plaid minded vote the rich colored blue, green, red striped black watch tartan as the clan that rates. In corduroy or velveteen, the favorites are rust, green, beige and gray. New checks, soft washable jerseys, and fine flannels and inspiration to sewing plans and have already opened the fall pins and needle season. Any of these fabrics are recommended for this design.

Vanity Pattern 6107 comes in junior miss sizes 11, 13, 15, 17. Size 13 requires 1⅞ yards of 39-inch for blouse, 2¼ yards of 54-inch for skirt and 1 yard of 54-inch fabric for the weskit.

Send 35 cents (in coins) for Vanity Pattern 6107 to The Washington Post, Pattern Dept., P. O. Box 88, Old Chelsea Station, New York 11, N. Y. Please print plainly your NAME, ADDRESS with ZONE, SIZE and STYLE NUMBER.

Delicious Sandwich Spreads

THE Earl of Sandwich really started something.

Legend has it that one night in days of old, the card-playing Earl became absorbed in a game of pasteboards. The stakes were high, the betting was heavy and the Earl was getting hungry. Unwilling to lose even a moment, he had a piece of meat brought to him between two slices of bread.

Thus was born one of mankind's greatest conveniences, the sandwich.

Today, in these busy United States, the sandwich has become a national institution. According to Glenna McGinnis of Woman's Day magazine, Americans consume somewhere near 40 million sandwiches daily. Here are a few recipes from Woman's Day that ought to tickle the palate at your picnics, parties, evening snacks or meals:

SPICY PORK SANDWICH

Brown two pounds of pork shoulder in a heavy kettle; add one cup water, simmer about 2 hours, adding more water as needed. Remove from heat; cool and shred meat with fork. To the liquid remaining in kettle, add half teaspoon each of nutmeg and allspice, quarter teaspoon cinnamon, and dash of ginger. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Add shredded meat, one tablespoon Worcestershire, and two tablespoons ketchup. Heat. Will make six sandwiches.

MUSHROOM-OLIVE SANDWICH

Drain and chop one 4-ounce can sliced mushrooms, and brown lightly in one tablespoon butter. Add half cup sliced ripe olives and one tablespoon mayonnaise. Make white-bread sandwiches of sliced processed cheese, generously spread with mushroom mixture. Toast on both sides under broiler. This makes enough to fill six sandwiches. (If desired, six ounces of fresh mushrooms may be substituted for canned variety.)

ROQUEFORT-CHEESE AND EGG

Chop three hard-cooked eggs; add one teaspoon chopped onion, quarter cup crumbled roquefort cheese, and quarter cup mayonnaise. Mix well, and season to taste with salt and pepper. This is enough for four large sandwiches.

Costa Rican Ambassador, Wife Are Enthusiastic Gardeners

(This is the forty-first in a series of stories on embassy homes, hosts, and hostesses.)

By Elizabeth Maguire

YOUNGEST Ambassador in Washington is Don Mario Echandi Jimenez of Costa Rica. And his wife, Senora Dona Olga de Echandi Jimenez, is one of the prettiest women in diplomatic society. He is just 35 and she is younger. They came to Washington last February and settled in the embassy on S st.

Now they are among the most popular of Latin American diplomats. They entertain frequently but never at very large gatherings. Small tables and chairs are set out in the well-shaded garden of the embassy for summer meals.

"There is too much shade," laughs Senora Jimenez, "although you see no flowers here, my favorite hobby is gardening." Costa Rica, which she loves to talk about, has all the flowers in the world, except dogwood. Some day, she says, she is going to plant an avenue of dogwood in the capital.

"We have a garden club in Costa Rica that was started by American ladies and now the Costa Rican ladies have entered the club with great enthusiasm, says Senora Jimenez.

"In Costa Rica we also have the Institute of Turrialba, where people from the United States and Latin American countries experiment on agricultural products. The institute was located there because the Costa Rican climate is so perfect."

Senora Jimenez is justly proud of the national theater in San Jose. Operas from other cities visit there, and they have their own symphony orchestra. Both she and the Ambassador are very fond of music and they have a large collection of records at the embassy.

Country Has Spanish Heritage

LOCATED high in the plateau region of Central America, Costa Rica was settled by the Spanish, and today most of the population of the country is pure Spanish. The Indians, called the Chorotegas, are found in small numbers near the southern border.

Senora de Jimenez is part Spanish and part Italian. Her father met her mother in Italy, when he was a young Costa Rican studying in Rome. The Ambassador's wife is just 5 feet 3. She has very fair skin, and her eyes, which are really dark hazel, seem to match her blue black hair. She studied at the Collegio de Senoritas in San Jose, and her husband attended the university there.

Filling First Diplomatic Post

A GOOD 6 feet, the Ambassador is filling his first diplomatic post. Before that he was a lawyer. His favorite hobby is dairy farming, which he does near San Jose. The Ambassador and his wife also have a house in San Jose, built California style with inside patio and windows covered with iron grill work.

It is believed in Costa Rica that the Ambassador will run for President of his country in 1953. He is due back in Washington tomorrow from San Jose, where he went to report on the Korean situation and other aspects of his mission here.

Costa Rica was the first country in the world to declare war on Japan after Pearl Harbor, and the Ambassador's father, as Minister of Foreign Affairs, prepared the message sent to the Costa Rican Congress.

No Matter How You Slice It, Wedding Cake Will Always Taste Just Fine

THERE seem to be as many ways of cutting the wedding cake as of popping the question!

We answered a question about it the other day and immediately heard from various readers with ideas on the subject. Scanning through the lot, we've gleaned the following as the most advocated procedures for the person who takes over the job after the bride cuts the first slice.

The bride's task is easy, of course. She just shares the first slice with the groom, then hands the knife to someone whose head hasn't been turned by all the excitement! This reliable soul may proceed in any of the following ways.

1. The top-tier-first method. Remove the superstructure—bride-and-groom dolls and such—and cut the cake tier by tier, starting with the top one. This clears the way nicely for each layer but doesn't preserve the festive form or decorations of the cake very long.

2. The middle-layer start. Cut slices from the outer ring of the middle layer, then go to the top tier, remove the superstructure and work from there down.

3. The swing-low approach. Cut into the bottom layer first, working around the edge. Cut short slices that extend only to the outer edge of the second tier. Then move up to the second deck and do the same thing. This will preserve the pyramidal shape of the cake until you get to the top and must remove the superstructure.

4. The kitchen way—prosaic but efficient. Take the cake to the kitchen after the bride starts the job. Separate each layer and slice with neatness and dispatch.

DEAR ANNE:
I noticed in a recent column that you have been unable to find the little Cocur de Creme baskets here in Washington. I know they are to be had, by mail, from: Bazaar Francais, Avenue of the Americas and 26th st., New York, N. Y.; or Hammacher-Schlemmer Co., East 57th st., New York, N. Y.

This is written quite on the spur of the moment, but as a New Yorker "passing through," thought it might help you. These baskets are scarce and quite tricky to find.

Joan W. Rock, New York, N. Y.

Thanks also to J. O. R. of Arlington, Mrs. M. B. Ware of Alexandria, Rebecca Moore of Alexandria and Betti C. Goldwasse of Falls Church, who all sent in similar information. Mrs. Moore adds that the baskets come in 3-inch size for 30c; 3½-inch for 35c; and 4-inch for 45c.

DEAR ANNE:
Please tell me if there is any possible way of removing an iron scorch from a tweed skirt.

Several cleaners refused the skirt, but finally one cleaner accepted it. He kept the skirt for one month, then told me he couldn't remove the burn. The skirt is part of an expensive tweed suit and if it is not possible to remove this scorch from the center of the skirt, I would greatly appreciate any suggestions you may have as to how I can make the suit wearable.

E. B., Washington.

If skilled cleaners were unable to remove the scorch, I think you might as well give up on this score. Sandpapering the surface lightly sometimes removes slight scorch from woolens, but I'm sure they tried this and even better tricks.

One thing you might do is to visit a reweaving place and see if they could cut out the scorch mark and reweave the place. This is expensive work and, if it's a very big mark, the price may give you pause.

If reweaving isn't practical, talk to a tailor. Maybe he can shift the mark to a less conspicuous place, put in a panel of similar material (if obtainable), or otherwise remedy the situation.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you tell me how to make claret lemonade, a colonial drink served at one of the old taverns down at Williamsburg, Va.?

L. B., Washington.

This is easy to make. If you want enough to serve six, use these measurements: 1 cup lemon juice, ½ cup sugar, 3 cups ice water, and 1 bottle (4/5 quart) claret wine. Dissolve sugar in lemon juice in pitcher. Add water and mix well. Wine can be mixed in at this point. Or the glass can be poured half full of lemonade, then carefully filled up with the claret to give an interesting half-and-half effect. Tilt the glass and pour the claret against the side slowly to keep it from going down into the lemonade half. The guest can stir it together later if desired.

DEAR ANNE:
Sometime ago, some one asked about making over blankets from used wool. I suggest they write the following mill for that information: Litchfield Wool Garment and Bedding Co., 10th st. and Marshall ave., n., Litchfield, Minn. There is also a woolen mill, I believe, that makes blankets from old wool at Winthrop, Maine.

Mrs. James Jarrett, 6120 Utah ave. nw.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specially requested otherwise.

PETUNIA!

I stand bemused and puzzled.
Which should be my goal—
A dish rag for my kitchen?
Or an orchid for my soul?

The orchid, Petunia . . . because you can get dishrags for free! Just boil the knitted sacks in which onions and fruit come, adding a little soap or detergent to the water . . . and they'll make fine soft absorbent dish cloths!

FURNITURE straight out of the Eighteenth Century will be used in the bedroom of the Georgian mansion in Spring Valley which will be one of the Homes of '50. The color scheme will feature coral and pale green. Mayer and Company will decorate the house, built by W. C. and A. N. Miller.

Homes of '50

Residences Unite Utility and Grace

By Lucia Brown

Ancient and modern paths will meet in several of the Homes of '50 this fall.

Lovely new colors and fine old furniture designs will combine to make interiors in the spirit of an earlier time but completely livable and beautiful by today's standards.

Take the Georgetown Colonial house built by John R. de Sibour and decorated by Woodward & Lothrop. The house, as well as the furniture, will be a reproduction. A brick row house in the well-loved Georgetown style, it will look just like those in which be-wigged, be-flounced early Americans lived.

English Regency Furnishings Favored

Inside, the furniture will be the same type they used when Washington was in its infancy. English Regency will be found throughout—designed in the early 1800's and inspired by exploration in the ruins of Pompeii and Herculaneum.

The colors, though, will be the latest from House and Garden—the magazine's color forecast for fall. Old gold is the shade chosen for walls and carpeting on the lower floor. Louis Wannan, home furnishings coordinator, selected it because it makes the small rooms look larger and will be in lovely harmony with the Grecian lines of the furniture.

Antique red, cream, and turquoise are other colors that will be seen in the drawing room and dining room. The flowered wallpaper above the dado and on the ceiling of the dining room will be repeated in the drapery and soft fabric in the living room.

Georgian Home in Spring Valley

Mayer & Co. will decorate a fine Georgian house built by W. C. and A. N. Miller in Spring Valley. Here, decorator S. Tebbs Chichester, jr., plans to use some of the deep, dark red seen in Williamsburg. The house is very like those in the old Colonial capital.

New and unusual shades will complement the dark red. There'll be a deep gray, an "eggplant," heliotrope, a soft tan, a turquois, and other beautiful colors in the various rooms.

Mr. Chichester plans to decorate each bedroom in a different period, a fact that will be particularly interesting if you're trying to decide which you like best.

The master bedroom will be Eighteenth century, with mahogany furniture and a bird patterened wallpaper in coral and pale green. Then there'll be a French bedroom, with white French furniture and a floral wallpaper with a deep purple ("eggplant") background. An Early American bedroom and a modern one will complete the quartet.

One of the most unusual rooms in this house will be the library. Walls will be finished in the dark red, the rug will be tan, and the draperies a fine linen with a tan background and flowers in red and turquois.

Model Houses to Be Shown

What's new this fall in home decoration?

You'll not only hear, but see, when you visit the annual exhibition of model houses sponsored by The Washington Post. The "Homes of '50" show starts September 10 and will continue through October 7.

Eight houses will be decorated, and they promise to be lovelier than ever this year. The stores which will furnish them are: Biggs Antique Co., P. J. Nee Co., Woodward and Lothrop, Mayer and Co., the Glass House, William E. Miller Co., Peerless Modern House, Milton H. Rossler, and Frank Michelback, Inc., of Alexandria.

Report From Paris

Jeanne Lanvin Features Long, Lean Look in Fall Fashions

By Florence Mills
From Associated Press Newsfeatures

PARIS—A long lean look with special emphasis on unusual and often very revealing necklines is being featured by Jeanne Lanvin this fall.

The leanness is seen mainly in day and cocktail dresses which are molded skintight to the figure in an unbroken line. She uses no belts and indents the waist by paneling or darting.

One number had such a sleek fit the zipper ran from under the arm right down to the thigh.

Some skirts, however, splash into fullness at the sides just above the knee.

The embroidery for which this old-established fashion house is famous is sprinkled over every type of dress and even on coats.

Accent on White With Embroidery

The accent is on white and gold with embroidery in tiny rhinestones, bugle beads, gold and silver thread and pieces of mirror mingled with silver sequins.

Her necklines vary greatly. Topcoats and day dresses have standup, shell-shaped collars, often supported by a bright-colored taffeta scarf tied into a huge, stiff bow in front of the neck.

Cocktail dresses in velvet and wool have a jagged "broken egg-shell" effect, high in front and dipping to a waistdeep vee at the back. She has an even more naked look for evening—quite backless and strapless.

One of the daintiest of her slim-skirted cocktail dresses was in a very fine grey worsted, embroidered to within a foot of the hem, with spider webs spun from very tiny rhinestones.

Debutante Dresses Looped With Ribbons

Lanvin shows one of the prettiest collections of debutante dresses. She makes them all in white tulle with enormous crinoline skirts looped with pink or blue satin ribbon on scattered white roses. The strapless necklines are softened with drapery or with fans of pleating which droop over the bust.

In contrast to the slim line of all her dresses, Lanvin shows tremendous coats with whole wads of pleats in the back of them. She has a new treatment for the sleeves. They are cut bell shaped, then slashed up the middle to just below the shoulder so as to show their luxurious nutria or squirrel lining.

One topcoat in violet broadcloth had an immense hood unbuttoned over the crown and folded down to become a huge cape collar, embroidered in scroll design with fine gold thread. Long, violet suede gloves were embroidered to match.

With all the dressier models, tremendous blue and white diamond earrings were worn. They were teardrop-shaped and covered practically the entire ear.

New Ideas Fill 'Homes of 1950'

This handsome rambler is being built at 3439 George Mason dr., Arlington, by Atlantic States Construction Corp. Another new Home of 1950, it will be presented by Berkey Properties, Inc.

Here's an unusual semidetached design—the Home of 1950 being constructed by Frederick Real Estate in Riggs Manor Estates, Prince Georges County, near Ager and Riggs rds.

Center hall plan distinguishes this Home of '50 being built by David Solomon, Inc., in Locust Hills Estates, Montgomery County. It will be presented by Northwest Realty Co.

Three New Houses Lift Total to 20

By Robert P. Jordan

OPENING DATE of the "Homes of 1950"—Greater Washington's annual opportunity to make a first-hand inspection of the finest in new homes and furnishings—is just two weeks away.

Three new homes were added to the list last week, bringing to 20 the number already approved for the big exhibition. When the September 10 opening date rolls around, an even two dozen homes will stand ready for your scrutiny.

The month-long extravaganza is the yearly presentation by builders, furniture stores and The Washington Post of new, high quality homes. Daily and Sunday, from September 10 forward, you'll be able to inspect as many of the homes as you wish—for free.

Like the 17 homes previously selected (eight of them to be furnished), the three approved last week are loaded with features. Like the others, too, the high quality of their construction has been assured by a committee set up for that purpose. Members are Edward R. Carr, builder; Frank J. Luchs, realtor; and John M. Walton, architect.

The newly selected homes, all in the unfurnished division, are:

A three-bedroom, white brick rambler being built at 3439 George Mason dr., Arlington, by Atlantic States Construction Corp. It will be presented by Berkey Properties, Inc.

A three-bedroom semidetached rambler nearing completion in Riggs Manor Estates, Prince Georges County, by Frederick Real Estate.

A three-bedroom, one-story brick home being constructed by David Solomon, Inc., at 9719 Bellevue dr., Locust Hill Estates, Montgomery County. It will be presented by Northwest Realty Co.

Features Outlined

WHAT is it that has qualified these houses to be "Homes of 1950"? First off, excellence of design and construction. For the rest of it, here's a sample:

The home being built by Atlantic States Construction Corp.—three bedrooms, 2½ baths, basement, garage — boasts an all-electric

Excavation for this 556-unit apartment house, one of the largest to be built in downtown Washington, is well underway at Massachusetts ave. and 15th and 16th sts. nw. To be completed in a year, its design will permit conversion into a hotel. Nearly 300 cars will be able to park in its basement and sub-basements. Most apartment units are efficiencies

Shovels Scoop Start of Huge Apartment House

THAT'S a whopper of a hole in the ground they're scooping out off Massachusetts ave. nw. between 15th and 16th sts. Having studied it closely, numerous citizens are asking themselves, "What's it for?"

Well, where the hole is now ultimately will be parking space for 294 cars. But that's just the beginning.

Planted smack atop the cars—with plenty of room to let them in and out, of course—will be one of the largest apartment buildings constructed in downtown Washington in recent years. It will be there about a year from now.

So reports Gustave Ring, head of Ring Engineering Co. His firm designed the eight-story structure and is getting underway on its construction. When work is finished it will have cost an estimated $4,718,000.

Other vital statistics: Name of the building is to be "1500 Massachusetts Avenue." Tack an "Inc." on the end and you have the nomenclature of its owner corporation. It will contain 556 apartments, 445 of them efficiencies and 111 with one bedroom.

Can Become Hotel

THE BUILDING will be air conditioned throughout. And its design will permit it to be "easily converted" into a hotel, according to Ring. It will be built on 51,964 square feet of land—considerably more than an acre.

What is it about the design that allows for conversion into a hotel? Two things: the fact that the large majority of its apartments are to be one-room units, and an unusual placing of service facilities.

The building's "center core," Ring says, will contain elevators, storage rooms for tenants, laundry space, carpentry and plumbing shops, and so on. This core is to be a rectangular area located on each floor, 109 feet by 25 feet. Within it, on the second floor, will be a game room.

Basement Parking

PLANS CALL for the apartment house to be 486 feet long in frontage and 110 feet in depth. Cars will drive down a ramp off 15th into the basement and sub-basement for parking. Main entrance will be on Massachusetts ave. nw.; a secondary entrance will be located on 16th st.

The heating plant and air conditioning units will be on the roof. Also planned is a roof garden. Individual apartments will be served by a secretarial service. All kitchens will be fully equipped.

Residential Building Declines

HOME BUILDING in Greater Washington—apartments and houses—apparently has passed its peak.

For the first time in a long period, the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics came up with a monthly report yesterday that didn't add up to a new home building record.

Construction of new houses and apartments for the first seven months of this year, the bureau disclosed, lagged 100 units behind the 16,240 starts made during the same period of 1949.

The 100-unit decrease stems from a severe drop in apartment construction this year. So severe a drop, in fact, that a huge increase in the number of single-family units started in the seven-month period was insufficient to overcome it.

Here are the figures:

A total of 12,840 new houses were put under construction from January through July this year—nearly triple the number started during the corresponding months of last year.

Apartment units built from January through July, however, according to Ring; and the efficiencies will sport a new type combination bath and dressing room.

Owner of the land on which the building is being constructed is the Electrical Workers Benefit Association. Owner of the stock of 1500 Massachusetts Avenue, Inc., is the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

The Ring Engineering Co. has constructed numerous large projects over Greater Washington and in various sections of the country. Ring presently is constructing a six-million-dollar apartment structure in Philadelphia, a two-million-dollar shopping center in Baltimore, a hotel in Pittsburgh.

He is the builder here of Arlington Village, Colonial Village, the Westchester Apartments, the Ring Building and others.

Ring said his company will manage the Massachusetts ave. apartment house. It is scheduled for completion by September 1, 1951. He declined to discuss rental scales.

Six Arlington Homes Slated

Permit has been issued for construction of six two-story houses in the 1000 block of N. Quantico st., Arlington. Owner-builder is Madison Manor, Inc., 2062 14th st., N. Arlington.

Suburban Growth Proves Painful to Cities

AMERICA'S biggest cities have a new set of woes as a result of the phenomenal boom in their suburbs.

While an upsurge in the building of new homes and factories on the outskirts of cities has been apparent for some years, it took a recent Census Bureau report to point out how pronounced the trend has been.

In the past 10 years, the bureau disclosed, the suburbs of every one of the Nation's 12 largest cities have outgrown the cities themselves—at rates of as much as 50 to 1!

Many factors are behind the suburban boom. Easy credit terms, with Government backing, have enabled millions to buy their own homes. Seeking fresh air, low taxes, some grounds of their own, they turned to the suburbs.

Industries have moved to the outskirts to escape city taxes. In line with population shifts, department stores have built big suburban branches, often cutting down on inside-the-city operations.

Now, an Associated Press survey finds, as officials of the big cities watch the taxpayers leave, they wonder what to do with their big fixed debts and expensive civil service systems. Most are working on long-range programs to try to halt, if not reverse, the tide.

St. Louis is typical. In 1940 its population was 816,048 and this year it is 852,523. In that period its suburbs jumped from 616,039 to 821,905.

Those who have left the city for suburban homes generally have higher, more taxable incomes and greater spending power. Left behind are more and more persons who cannot afford new homes. So the city finds itself with constantly worsening slums.

Mayor Joseph M. Darst says the city is battling the slum problem. It has a new zoning law and a new ordinance setting minimum housing standards. Several low-rent housing projects are under way, and St. Louis aims to get Federal aid on big projects under the Housing Act of 1949.

In one key or other, officials of most big cities also are singing the St. Louis blues.

For example, Philadelphia's suburbs have been outgrowing the city proper at a rate of 3 to 1. "We don't intend to sit back and watch people move away," says Mayor Bernard Samuel.

"We're spending over 300 million dollars on our redevelopment housing program to wipe out defective housing and attract new householders. Schools, recreation centers, highways, bridges are being constructed."

Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro of Baltimore strikes the same fighting note: "The assessable tax basis of Baltimore's downtown business area decreased from $175,361,000 in 1931 to $116,663,000 in 1946," he says.

"But we are not taking this deterioration of the city lying down. By our efforts to clean up slums, relieve traffic congestion, provide sufficient parking space and generally make city life more attractive, we definitely are on the road back."

One of the city's main weapons in its fight on slums is its nationally famous "Baltimore plan."

Block by block, city inspectors move in on slum dwellings, searching for violations of health, housing, sanitation, building, fire and zoning ordinances. In its housing court, which considers housing violations only, more than 4000 cases have been prosecuted in the last three years.

Pittsburgh barely held its own in the 1940-1950 decade, gaining only 2000 in population while its suburbs increased by 110,000.

"We have become well aware of our problems and have set out to correct them through an impressive improvement program, now under way," says Mayor David L. Lawrence.

"I am certain," he adds, "that the only sound way to prevent larger migrations to the suburbs is for American cities to recognize their faults and to make earnest attempts to remedy them."

D. C. Difficulties

WASHINGTON'S suburbs in 10 years have grown six times as fast as the city itself. Result: Heading traffic congestion in the city where thousands of suburbanites ride to and from work in autos and buses.

To try to meet this crisis, Washington has staggered work-hours of Government employes, thus spreading the morning and evening traffic loads.

Out of the city already are the National Health Institutes, the Census Bureau, Agricultural Research Center, the Pentagon and other military and defense agencies.

Some city officials frankly questioned whether their governments could do anything to stop the wholesale move to the outskirts.

In the Los Angeles area, the suburban population has almost doubled in 10 years.

"The time is coming when a new form of government will have to be developed," says the city's Mayor Fletcher Bowron.

"In my opinion we're coming to a government for metropolitan areas to pull together the whole thing so that it will be cohesive and integrated."

Something like that is being considered around Cleveland. In November, voters in 20 cities, 35 villages and five townships in Greater Cleveland will decide on a proposal to set up a county form of government which would coordinate water and sewers, welfare and transportation.

He Carves Out a Hobby

Los Angeles (AP).—By day, Peter Zeolla fashions fireplaces of marble for the homes of the wealthy. By night the 52-year-old stone cutter relaxes with a hobby—chipping stone.

His idea of resting is to fetch his tools and chisel delicate designs on a rough slab of marble or onyx. Handmade ashtrays, bookends and lamp stands are his specialty. His latest creation, a scale model of a C-47 twin-engined transport plane fashioned out of brittle onyx—even to the wings. It took him two months to complete.

Quick Meals for Czechs

Prague (AP).—This city has opened a store to make meal preparation a quick and simple matter for busy housewives. The store, called "the cold table," sells half-cooked meals that they can take home and finish cooking in 10 or 15 minutes.

The items include meat cutlets, calf's knuckle with bacon, stuffed peppers, potatoes, sauerkraut and various sauces. The customers are being offered a course in how to use these specially prepared foods.

kitchen. It is large enough to afford space for eating purposes.

It has a screened breezeway for relaxation or dining; French doors opening on grade from the basement to a stone patio; Venetian blinds throughout; all doors of flush steel; sliding closet doors; large storage attic; full length mirror.

The Frederick Real Estate home is one of the largest semidetached houses built in this area. One-story in height, it measures 38 feet across the front.

It has two large bedrooms, separate dining room, kitchen equipped with washer, garbage disposer, refrigerator and range. The bath has colored tile walls and colored plumbing fixtures. A giant mirror is fixed over the living room fireplace. Picture windows are found in the living and dining room.

The house being built by David Solmon, Inc., located in Locust Hill Estates off Wisconsin ave., a short distance beyond Bethesda Naval Medical Center, is a large rambler constructed on the center hall plan.

This feature permits all rooms to open off the hall, which extends from the front entrance through to the kitchen. Other highlights are a two-oven stove in the all-electric kitchen, and separate dining room. The house has three bedrooms, two baths, basement, garage. A Roman brick fireplace runs the length of one living room wall.

Thus the latest of the Homes of 1950.

This year's exhibition, the third annual display, will offer homes ranging in price from around $10,000 up to $55,000. No matter where you live—whether in the District or nearby Maryland or Virginia—you'll find that one or more of the homes is but a short drive away.

You'll find, too, that guides will be available at each home to answer questions. On opening day, maps pinpointing the location of all the exhibit homes will be carried in The Wahsington Post.

Home Building Passes Peak

dropped from 1949's seventh-month total of 11,550 to 3300 this year.

Statistics on last month's home building activity in Greater Washington indicate that the vast post-war construction program has reached its peak.

In July, close to 3000 new dwelling units were started—a decrease of 100 units below June's total. The 3000 units, however, are less than half the number begun in July, 1949. The 6180 units started in that month was an all-time monthly record, the bureau reported.

Decline of apartment construction began in late 1949, according to the bureau, when the District Insuring Office of the Federal Housing Administration limited mortgage applications under its "608" program to medium and low rental projects.

Last year, rental housing units accounted for 70 percent of all new dwelling units started in the first seven months. During January-July, 1950, apartments accounted for only 20 percent of all new dwelling units.

Construction cost of one-family houses, as reported by builders, averaged $10,900 for the seven-month period this year, the bureau said.

This is a 12 percent increase over the average cost of all houses started in the same months last year.

Average construction cost, it was pointed out, does not represent the cost of a typical unit. The average cost is affected not only by changes in the cost of materials and labor, but also by variations in the size and design of the houses and in the type of projects.

Although single-family houses predominated in all parts of the area, more than half were scheduled for construction in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties. Majority of apartment units were authorized for construction in the District.

16 Dwellings Proposed

Permit is being sought for construction of 16 one-story homes in "Massachusetts Avenue Forest," Bethesda. Owner is D. Lentini, 651 K st. ne. Builder is Omar G. Kremkau, 4118 Legation st. nw.

SPACE-SAVER—A new, gas-fired dual wall heater introduced by the Coleman Co., Wichita, Kans., takes no space from the living area of a home because it fits into the wall between two rooms. Outlets on each side of the heater permits warming of both rooms at the same time. Coleman dealer here is Mid-Atlantic Appliances, 2046 West Virginia ave. ne.

SPARE your hands and use a shovel to remove hot dishes from the oven. Made like an oversized spatula, the Oven-Shovel has a long sturdy handle that will reach into ovens, indoors or out, to lift pans, steaks or baked potatoes out of the heat.

VERSATILE hair net of nylon can be adjusted to any size for all hair styles. The secret is a little plastic tube in which excess net is secured.

WARPING, wrinkling and puckering of pasted items is eliminated with a new mixture called Flexi-flat. Unlike the ordinary pastes that cause shrinkage when the excess moisture dries, this compound has a plasticize formula that is said to have no pulling action. It can be diluted with water.

POLISH formula developed and used by the Knoll furniture manufacturers is now available for retail sale. The fluid is a cleaner as well as a wood preserver and polisher and it gives the surface a hard, stainproof finish.

JOKES and humorous comments to perk up public speeches may be bought in an indexed file arranged alphabetically according to subject matter. Cards containing 2000 quips come in a small filing case and also included is a speaker's wallet with transparent pockets for 12 cards.

COMPACT wall storage rack for garden tools consists of two bright green metal brackets to hold six long handled tools and five short ones. Handles slide through the bottom rack and are held securely in place by tension.

PARTS for making a box camera are sold in a craftsman's kit that includes everything except glue, hammer, screwdriver and a razor blade. When completed, the camera is the same as one of the manufacturer's standard models.

CONCENTRATED fluid for dry cleaning is mixed with water for use. A can the size of a container of scouring powder will make three gallons of cleaning solution. The cleaner is a handy and effective treatment for household use on all soiled fabrics that don't water spot.

Most of the above items are not yet on the market. For names and addresses of manufacturers—and stores when we have them—send this coupon and a 3-cent stamp to the Herald Tribune Home Institute, 230 West 41st st., New York 18, N. Y.

21 Dwellings Planned

Garrett Park Estates, Inc., proposes to construct 21 houses in the 4900 and 5000 blocks of Aurora dr., Kensington, Md. The dwellings will be of brick and cinderblock, one story in height. Permit is being sought. The builder is located at RFD No. 4, Route 240, Rockville, Md.

Controls Removed From Ten Cities

HOUSING EXPEDITER TIGHE E. WOODS last week lifted rent controls in 10 cities as a result of decontrol resolutions passed by their governing bodies. The cities are:

Joplin, Mo.; Colorado Springs, Colo.; Whittier, Culver City, Colton and Anaheim, Calif.; Bellingham and Olympia, Wash.; Austell, Ga., and Roseburg, Oreg.

Ten Dwellings Planned

Plans for construction of 10 one-story homes on Ipswich rd., Bethesda, are under way by Carl M. Freeman, Inc. Size of each is to be 40 by 25 feet.

200 Cities Fighting Smoke Nuisance

Chicago (AP)—Scores of cities are taking steps to sweep excess smoke out of their skies. "More than 200 municipalities in the United States have adopted smoke control ordinances," reports the American Municipal Association. Law Protects GIs in Korea Against Home Foreclosure

LIKE servicemen of World War II, men being called up these days because of the Korean war are protected by law against foreclosure of their home mortgages.

The Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act is still in effect and applies to men now going into service, it was pointed out yesterday by the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington.

In general, the act provides that mortgages on servicemens' homes may be foreclosed only with permission of the courts. Authority is given courts under the law to stay foreclosure unless the ability of a serviceman to meet mortgage obligations is not materially affected by his military service.

Actually, it enables servicemen to suspend payment temporarily on his home mortgage while in the armed forces, according to Clarke Daniel, president of the association.

The home builders executive termed it "almost a foregone conclusion" that the G. I. Bill of Rights will be extended to those serving in the Korean conflict.

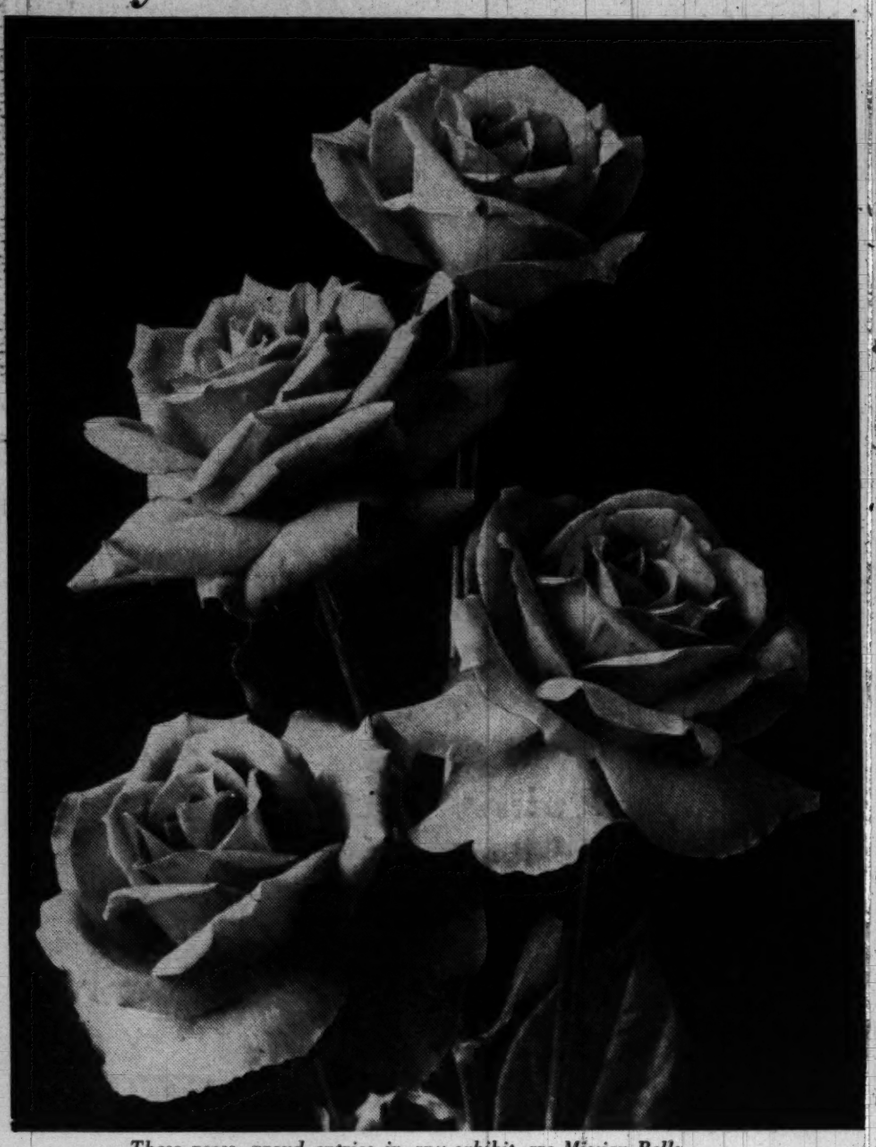
Hints for Exhibitors

Ready For Fall Flower Shows?



These roses, proud entries in any exhibit, are Mission Bells

By Katherine B. Pozer

SCHEDULES for fall flower shows are being completed and dates announced. With the large number of important shows being planned, committees are making special efforts to present schedules of unusual interest to both onlooker and exhibitor.

An early decision should be made as to which varieties are to be shown, and these plants given extra care. While old favorites often win awards, judges are always on the lookout for specimens of newer varieties and often let this sway their decision when competition is close. Showing newer varieties adds to the grower's pleasure as well as the general interest. This is particularly true of the smaller shows.

The large exhibits, such as those of the Potomac Rose Society and the National Capital Dahlia Society, have separate classes for most of the well-known named varieties. In the smaller shows they are usually classified under color or type.

A show schedule should be obtained as soon as possible and plans made for entries. Roses should be checked for black spot and other pests which affect the foliage as well as the bloom. Judges are quick to detect any signs of an unhealthy plant. They often show up in foliage or stem, a point which many amateurs fail to consider. Show dahlias and chrysanthemums should be carefully staked, as should such tall plants as cosmos and fall asters. A straight stem will often bring an award to a bloom less perfect than its neighbor. Points for stem and foliage often count 20 percent, and in some cases as high as 25 percent.

A local grower of dahlias, who has won many awards over a period of years, gives the following advice for obtaining good bloom and having it ready at exhibition time. This applies to the weeks preceding the show.

Main Requirements

"DISBUDDING, fertilizing and watering are the main requirements. Buds appear in clusters of three. As soon as they are large enough to handle without injury, the two side buds are removed and the center one left to bloom. All growth that develops at the base of the leaves of the flowering stem containing the bud also is removed. This will give a long stem when the bloom is cut and insure all strength in that stem going into the flower to increase size.

Growers use different fertilizers to obtain size of bloom and differ in their applications, but a good commercial fertilizer analyzing 4-8-12 is ideal for three reasons. It contains enough nitrogen to induce vigorous growth and a greater proportion of potash to strengthen the stems to hold the huge blooms erect. The potash also hardens the roots and aids in wintering them with practically no losses. Fertilizers high in nitrogen content are not recommended as they tend to soften the stems. They also have a tendency to make roots watery so they do not winter well. This is frequently the cause for losses over the winter.

A large handful of 4-8-12 is given to each plant once a week and just scratched in, not worked deeply, so as not to disturb the young roots near the surface of the ground. After applying the fertilizer, water thoroughly to make fertilizer immediately available. Keep all plants securely tied up to prevent whipping in winds."

To hold blooms back this exhibitor suggests a covering of a bushel basket held in place by tall stakes. The basket is made secure by bending the handles inward and slipping the stakes through them into the basket. To speed the blooming, more frequent watering is suggested, and also an insect control spray to insure perfect foliage.

Exhibiting is trouble, but well worth it. It is only on the show table that we can judge the real quality of our flowers. Pride in one's garden is universal. Those who shun publicity in other fields are always cooperative concerning publicity for their flowers.

The novice exhibitor usually becomes a better gardener, for the show room gives little chance for alibis. We may offer excuses for our gardens at times, but there is little we can say when we find our cherished bloom about half the size of its competitors. We can only decide to "show them" next when exhibition time comes around.

About the Garden

September a Good Month For Harvest or Planting

By James H. Beattie

SEPTEMBER is a unique month because of the generous harvest of some of the best garden crops, yet there is still time to plant either for fall or spring use. However, only a few vegetables may be planted now with time for them to mature before frost and drought set in. Late summer gardening necessitates weed control and this will simplify next season's work.

Flat land, also upland valleys and pockets between hills, may have killing frost a full month before it occurs on adjacent highland. In this locality, killing frosts usually occur during the first half of October.

Prompt planting, certainly during the first part of the month, gives an excellent chance for success with snap beans, radishes, parsley, spinach, lettuce and kale. The latter four will usually live over winter if given a little protection and provide a supply of early spring vegetables. Old dominion variety of spinach is well adapted to this winter culture.

Those having a light-textured soil, preferably a sandy one with a southern exposure, have an excellent chance to grow a crop of early spring cabbage by sowing the seed directly in the row on the south side of low ridges running east and west, later thinning the plants to about an 18-inch spacing. Jersey Queen, a fusarium wilt-resistant variety, is suggested for this purpose. The plants should be well-established and sturdy by the time of hard frosts and they require little if any protection unless the winter weather becomes very severe. In the latter case merely mulch with straw or leaves, removing the mulch whenever the weather moderates.

Fall Setting of Trees

IT IS none too soon to plan and prepare for the fall planting of asparagus, rhubarb, horseradish, multiplier onions, small fruits and fruit trees.

The actual planting must wait until the active growing season is over. Too often the planting of permanent garden plants such as fruit trees, grapes and raspberries consists in setting them in holes scarcely large enough for the root system. Plants and trees are costly and they deserve better treatment.

It is an excellent plan to prepare the site in advance, digging a generous sized trench or individual hole for each plant or tree and refilling the holes with a mixture of top soil and compost to which a liberal quantity of fertilizer has been added. The addition of extra superphosphate is especially important. This element moves very little in the soil and it must be placed just where the roots will find it.

Moisture Conservation

EXTENSIVE irrigation of the garden is not practical for many persons, but a lot can be done to stretch the available supply of water. Present conditions are unfavorable for the germination of seeds and the setting of plants. This situation may continue and it will require special care in establishing the September garden. A little water may be made to go a long way. Soaking the site of each seed-row or plant by using the garden hose or even with a sprinkling can is an excellent plan. Seeds may be soaked for a few hours and then planted in the previously watered rows, practices that practically insure good germination.

The question recently arose about the effect of cold well water on garden plants. Experience indicates that such water applied as a spray practically reaches the temperature of the air before it reaches the soil. If applied to the soil it is quickly warmed and there seems to be very little danger from the use of well water on garden plants.

In irrigating garden crops it is better to give rather infrequent soakings, such as would result from a heavy rain, not light sprinklings which wet only the surface of the soil. The soil should be lightly cultivated as soon as it is dry enough.

The mulching of seed rows and freshly set plants, also those in an advanced stage of development, has many advantages. The mulches retard evaporation and enable the plants to make more effective use of the available moisture. Any material such as green grass, weeds, pine needles or compost may be employed. Thoroughly decomposed compost is especially desirable as a dressing on seed-rows as it prevents the soil from hardening and makes it possible for the plants to emerge without difficulty or injury. Shading seed-rows with leafy branches is quite effective in keeping the surface moist and protecting newly-set plants until they have become established.

How Owners Feel About Freezers

HOME FREEZER owners were recently polled by one of the leading manufacturers, to learn exactly how useful their appliance had been. Here's what a cross-section of the Nation reported:

The questions and answers:

1—Since you started using your freezer, do you make more or fewer trips to the store or market?

(91.9 percent of freezer owners said they made fewer trips to the store. Only 8.1 percent reported no difference in trips or made no estimate.)

2—If you make fewer trips, how many trips do you save each week?

(An average of three trips saved a family each week was reported—more than 150 trips saved annually.)

3—Have you been able to save money with your freezer?

(89.8 percent of those replying reported definite savings from use of their freezers; 6.1 percent did not answer this question, and 4.1 percent reported no savings. Of the latter, some said they were not saving money because they were eating more and better food since they obtained their freezer.)

4—What principal foods are you saving on?

(Meat and poultry, 88.5 percent; fruits, 66.1 percent; vegetables, 65.8 percent; ice cream, 62.4 percent; fish and game, 54.2 percent; dairy products, 27.8 percent; baked goods, 19.0 percent. Many other specific food savings also reported, including one person of exotic tastes who reported enjoying savings on "fresh cococonut.")

5—How are you saving money?

(Buying foods in season, 59.0 percent; buying in large quantities, 53.2 percent; buying at bargain prices, 47.1 percent; raising some of own foods, 46.1 percent; buying foods directly from farmers, 42.7 percent; buying at wholesale prices, 41.0 percent; preparing foods in advance, 29.8 percent; saving leftovers, 29.5 percent. Additional sources were avoiding spoilage, securing own fish and game, shortening own lard, quantity soup preparation.)

6—Approximately how much do you feel you save each month?

(Average an owner a month, $14.50. This is for both urban and rural users. Urban averages were $2.21 lower a month; rural averages, $2.85 higher.)

7—Are you enjoying a better variety and quality of foods since you purchased your freezer?

(89.8 percent said yes. Only 3.1 percent answered no, while 7.1 percent made no answer.)

8—If you had to do without your freezer, what advantages would you miss the most?

(The first ten "mentions" in the order of their frequency were meat and poultry, convenience, preparation for emergencies, fruit and berries, ice cream, availability of food, fewer marketing trips, economy, fish and game, out-of-season foods. Other "mentions" were quantity buying, time-saving, variety, raising and freezing own food, easier preparation of food, saving of leftoyers, better flavor and quality, advance preparation of foods, seafoods, wholesale buying of food.)

Daffodil Society Meets Wednesday

The Washington Daffodil Society will meet at 8 p. m. Wednesday in Room 43, United States National Museum, Constitution ave. at 10th st. nw.

A brief talk will be made by Edwin C. Powell on "Extending the Daffodil Season." Also scheduled is an informational session on the latest Agriculture Department recommendations on preplanting dips, planting, and fertilizers; and a discussion of possibilities and preliminary plans for a show next spring.

Lawns Require Food in Fall

The long period of active grass growth between spring and late summer depletes the nourishment in the soil. Consequently, lawn food should be applied now to insure better root development, greener color through fall and early winter.

Preparing Roses for Harvest Show

WITH THE Bethesda-Chevy Chase Harvest Show set for September 17, a number of pointers on how to prepare roses for display have been advanced by Lieut. Col. R. K. Windham, former president of the Potomac Rose Society.

Colonel Windham makes these suggestions:

1. Keep plants well supplied with water. The soil should be thoroughly soaked each week if heavy rains have not taken care of the watering. Water plants at the rate the soil can absorb.

2. Keep the soil well cultivated to a depth of not more than 2 or 3 inches. Like watering, this should be done weekly.

3. When a terminal or central bud has formed on a stem, remove the side buds that form on that stem as soon as they appear. This will give the wound time to heal before the show. Do not wait until time for show to remove side buds.

4. In order that the plants may make the maximum growth all leaves must be protected from disease. Use a good fungicide spray or dust material and apply each week in dry weather and oftener in wet weather. It is essential that the leaves on exhibits be clean and free from belmishes.

5. Not later than the evening before the show the blooms should be labeled and cut with 12 to 18-inch stems. Immediately remove the lower thorns and plunge the stem, but not the flower, in water, and keep in a dark, cool room. Select for cutting buds that are just beginning to open, because the flower should be one half to three fourths open at the time of judging. Remember that roses cut in the evening will last longer than those cut in the morning.

6. The most important point of all is to bring all your roses to the show. Remember, more prize winning blooms fail to get to shows than are placed on exhibit.

Boil Greens Quickly to Keep Color

THE ATTRACTIVE green coloring of such vegetables as asparagus, peas, and spinach can be maintained by quick cooking in a minimum of water. Cooking breaks down the chlorophyll which forms the green color.

Carotenoids, or orange and yellow pigments, are insoluble in water and are not, therefore, affected by either freezing or cooking. They are also stable under heat.

The white pigments, flavones, are very volatile. White vegetables, such as cauliflower, are very apt to turn yellow in hard water. However, this should not detract from the vegetable's appeal to the palate.

The red coloring of such vegetables as beets may easily be lost, as the pigments are highly soluble in water. So if you've ever found yourself with a pot of gray-colored beets, next time try adding a little vinegar, lemon juice, or cream of tartar to the cooking water. Care must be exercised not to use enough to change the vegetable's flavor.

Leaves Smother Grass

Lawn grass, particularly seedlings from fall sowing, can be smothered and killed by accumulations of leaves on the lawn. To avoid damage, frequent rakings are advised during the season when trees are shedding.

The Yew's a Good Bet

Not Just Any Evergreen Will Do

By Alfred Putz

MOST home owners prefer evergreens for foundation planting and this choice is easy to understand because of the beautiful winter effects. Yet there cannot be any disagreement that a combination of evergreens and deciduous shrubs, if well planned and properly executed, provides greater interest and more beauty.

Unfortunately, many gardeners do not realize that not just any evergreen will do. They set out attractive little plants only to find out years later that they planted trees which cannot be pruned to a reasonable height without destroying their beauty. One does not have to travel far through suburban areas to find pines, arborvitae, spruces and other evergreen trees hiding the homes.

That does not mean that all tree forms are unsuited. Hemlock, if sheared regularly from the time it is still small, will give an attractive picture even though its natural beauty must be sacrificed.

Some of the yews also are trees, but like hemlock lend themselves well to pruning. In addition, they are slow growers, so that one shearing a year usually is enough to shape them satisfactorily.

Yews Among Best

AS A CLASS the yews are the best of the evergreens for foundation planting. They do well and are hardy in this climate, retain a rich, deep color during the winter, are not much bothered with insects or diseases and are easily and effectively pruned or sheared to fit into specific positions.

Hick's Yew (Taxus media Hicks) is one of the most popular ones. It has broad needles of blue-green color and will grow about 10 feet tall, adding about 6 inches yearly. It is of upright habit, inclined to make a flat top which is broader than the base.

The Hatfield yew (T. media hatfieldi) makes more of an oval growth. It will reach a height of 8 feet by adding only about 4 inches a year. The color of the leaves is the darkest of all yews—almost a black-green—and the plant looks its best if kept trimmed to within 6 feet.

There also is a spreading strain that grows about 8 feet tall and 12 feet across.

The English yew (T. baccata) has gradually tapering needles which are an inch or more in length. The spreading English yew (T. baccata repandens) spreads to 8 feet, then is only 4 feet tall. It grows slowly, adding 4 inches a year.

Japanese Popular

THE JAPANESE yew (T. cuspidata) is almost as popular as the Hick's yew. Its two rows of leaves form the letter V. There are male and female plants and those who want to enjoy the cup-like red fruit in the fall must be sure that both kinds stand within a reasonable distance of each other.

In its native Japan it grows to 40 feet tall, but here makes a low, dense bush if pruned yearly. The form known as T. capitata makes a pyramidal growth 3 to 10 feet tall in this climate, growing about 6 inches a year, although it reaches a height of 40 feet in Japan. There are a great many other forms since seedlings vary widely. Nana, for example, spreads to 8 feet while only 4 or 5 feet tall.

The Canadian yew (T. canadensis) is a low, straggling plant eventually 4 to 6 feet tall and 10 feet across, but a very slow grower. Two inches of new growth a year is the average. It must be planted in shade because sun burns the leaves severely.

The dwarf edging yew (T. canadensis stricta) grows equally slowly and develops into a rounded bush 3 feet tall. It can be kept trimmed indefinitely to a height of 1 foot.

None So Good

THERE ARE other dwarf evergreens suited to foundation planting, but none is so good as any of the yews. Pfitzer's Juniper (Juniperus chinensis Pfitzeriana) is widely used. It is a splendid dwarf spreading plant, but red spider mites and Juniper scale usually ruin it sooner or later despite frequent careful spraying. Sargent's Juniper (J. sargenti) is a prostrate shrub. The creeping or Savin Juniper (J. horizontalis) is too dwarf for foundations plantings and so is J. communis depressa, which turns purple during the winter.

Some gardeners are impressed by small specimens of the Mugho pine to find out too late that it needs 10 feet to spread out in.

In this region azaleas are gaining popularity for foundation planting at an amazing rate. The evergreen kinds especially are in demand, particularly after a spring like the last when they were unusually beautiful. They want semishade, an acid soil and a good supply of root moisture.

Construction Awards Are Still on the Increase

CONSTRUCTION contract awards in the Middle Atlantic States continued to rise in July.

This was announced yesterday

A total of $168,785,000 in awards by J. was recorded— 20 percent greater than the June figure of $141,095,000.

Little, regional vice president of the F. W. Dodge Corporation construction news and marketing specialists.

July's total in the area comprising eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and the District was 55 percent higher than July, 1949, according to Little.

The area's seven-month total of $1,014,306,000, he said, is 52 percent greater than the comparable figure for 1949.

Non-residential contracts totaled $52,819,00. This is 39 percent ahead of June and 35 percent of July 1949.

Residential awards in July were $78,507,000 — 14 percent ahead of June and 126 percent ahead of July, 1949.

For the seven-month period as compared with the same period of 1949 the totals were, with percentage of increase: non-residential, $282,238,000, percentage 15; residential $496,792,000, percentage 106; and public and private works and utilities $235,276,000, percentage 31.

Lumber Firm Uses 'Pick and Carry' Selection System

AN ARLINGTON lumber company has devised a "pick-and-carry" system which permits customers to select exactly what they want by choosing the lumber themselves.

The system is in operation at Rucker Lumber Co., 1320 Wilson blvd. It works like this:

A customer wants, for instance, a quantity of plywood, 2 inches by 2 inches in size. First, the office makes out a ticket for the amount and grade he wants. Next, the customer is shown on a chart just where the stack is located.

Then he simply walks to the stack, selects what he wants, and, usually carries it away in his car.

The yard layout is such that stock is easily recognized. Placed in front of the lumber stacks are white markers with the size and identification on them. The labeling method is used throughout the yard.

Steel Ball and Cable Snaps Off Trees Like Matchsticks

By Merrill Englund

HUNGRY HORSE, MONT., Aug. 26.—Two California contractors are rivaling the exploits of that legendary woodsman, Paul Bunyan, with their "highball" method of clearing timber land.

A pair of power Diesel tractors grind through the dense forests, each paying out 1½-inch steel cable. Attached to the center of the cable is a steel ball weighing 4½ tons.

When the tractor operators have reeled out up to 1800 feet of cable, they anchor their machines against trees and start their winches, which reel in the line.

The cable, held clear of stumps, and other obstacles by the huge ball, crashes through the timber as fast as a man can walk. Trees caught in the cable loops are uprooted and felled as if they had been hit by a hurricane.

The clearing method was developed by S. L. Wixson and John Trisdale of Redding, Calif. They startled Federal officials by offering to clear a major part of the Hungry Horse reservoir area for nearly two million dollars less than the original bids.

Wixson and Trisdale say that, working on fairly level ground and under ideal conditions, two tractors pulling one ball snagged down all the trees on a 200-acre, heavily-timbered area in four hours.

Average daily production for two tractors and one ball has been close to 100 acres in eight hours.

Last year, using the cable alone, the two were able to complete about 95 percent of a contract to clear 7210 acres, which will be covered by water backed up by Hungry Horse Dam in the Flathead River's south fork, here in northwestern Montana.

Work on that $1,733,880 clearing contract will be completed ahead of the expiration date, December 20, the contractors promise.

This spring the two got contracts to clear 14,725 more acres, largely an area freshly logged over to salvage marketable timber.

The contractors figured the cable would hang up on stumps and rocks. Hence the steel balls, which are 8 feet in diameter.

They say the method has been very successful. The ball keeps the cable from being hung up, and the cable, riding 4 or 5 feet above the ground, has more leverage when it hits a big tree. A tree 4 feet in diameter is uprooted easily.

In the "highball" method, crew members can always stay clear of falling trees.

"TIMBER!"—A two-foot-thick tree snaps like a matchstick in a new "highball" method used at Hungry Horse, Mont. to clear woodland. Contractors found the huge steel ball and heavy cable, pulled along by tractors, "very successful" in leveling timber. Trees caught in the cable loop between the tractors are uprooted

Rush for Higher Education is Continuing

IN THE nearby Washington area nearly 30,000 students will enter local colleges and universities this fall, with 5000 more scheduled to attend local independent technical and professional schools. Across the whole Nation, approximately 2,700,000 students are now expected to enter institutions of higher learning.

The rush of students in great numbers back to the colleges comes as something of a surprise to many educators who had believed that dwindling GI attendance, the crisis in Asia, and an upswing in employment would lessen the number of applicants for higher education.

Many GIs, it now appears, are staying in college beyond the customary four years in order to take graduate and professional courses—and doing it at their own expense. Current employment opportunities, in many cases, demand a professional training or a trade not possessed by a majority of those who will attend school this year.

The continued rush to the colleges has not displeased the educators. Through higher, and an increased number of, tuition fees, they have been able partially to offset shrinking endowment. Many schools have taken advantage of the opportunity to begin extensive building programs, anticipating the phenomenal growth in enrollments in the last six years as a trend and not a short-lived outgrowth of war.

Locally, Maryland University, American University and George Washington University are in the midst of ambitious plans. Maryland, benefitted by State and Federal funds as a Land Grant college, is, of course, far ahead of any local school in actual building facilities and equipment due to multi million-dollar support.

Both American University and George Washington University contemplate extensive changes and additions to their plant facilities within the next five years, the present war emergency and its effect on building supplies permitting. Current and contemplated building projects of the three schools are listed in detail elsewhere in this section.

1150-Acre Campus Ready

10,000 Due At Maryland

ONE of the largest classes in its 143-year-old history is scheduled to invade the sprawling 1150-acre campus of the University of Maryland September 25. An enrollment of over 10,000 is anticipated in the 15 schools and colleges that make up the gigantic educational institution.

The university, which had a humble start as the College of Medicine of Maryland in Baltimore in 1807, now conducts 10 schools on its rolls—grounds at College Park, 5 schools and a hospital in Baltimore and also operates Maryland State College—the land grant college for Negroes—at Princess Anne.

On the College Park campus are the colleges of agriculture, arts and sciences, education, home economics, business and public administration, physical education and health, special and continuation studies, military science, the graduate school and the Glenn L. Martin Institute of Technology.

In Baltimore are located the schools of medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, law, nursing and the university hospital.

Always expanding, the university is now in the midst of a multi-million dollar building program. A new stadium designed to seat 35,000 is near completion at College Park. Plans call for its first use in the Maryland University-Navy football game September 30.

Also under construction at College Park is a women's gymnasium. Work will begin soon on a new physics building and an industrial arts building. Also planned are buildings to house an auditorium and swimming pool, library, and various departments of the agriculture department. In Baltimore a $2,500,000 addition to the university hospital will soon be started.

A land grant college receiving both State and Federal aid, Maryland is able to offer its educational facilities at a lower cost than universities dependent on fees and endowments. Basic yearly tuition fee for Maryland residents is $213.00. Nonresidents pay a basic yearly fee of $338.00.

In addition to its domestic educational offerings, the university maintains classes of a graduate level abroad in the Universities of Basel, Paris and Zurich. It also provides undergraduate programs in 23 centers in Germany and England.

Over 30 new instructors will join the faculty at the University this fall, one of the more notable being Dr. Kampe de Feriet of the Sorbonne, Paris, France. Dr. Kampe de Feriet, one of the world's leading mathematicians, will work in the Institute of Fluid Dynamics, and offer some lectures and seminars that will be open to the public.

Student Health Service Among GU Innovations

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY has announced the establishment of a health service for all students to be put in operation next month. For a $10 annual fee each student will receive free constitation, diagnostic X-rays and tests, surgery and, within certain limits, hospitalization, medicine and reimbursement for emergency care required when away from the university.

The service will be inaugurated in time to accommodate what is expected to be an unusually heavy enrollment. The university's college of arts and sciences anticipates a freshmen registration of more than 360, while the school of dentistry expects the largest enrollment in its history with 105 freshmen scheduled to begin classes September 18.

Both schools have listed extensive faculty additions and changes. At the college, new additions to the philosophy faculty include the Rev. E. Paul Betowsky, S. J., the Rev. Charles L. Coolahan, S. J., and the Rev. James B. Horigan, S. J. Prof. Karl H. Cerny and Prof. Harold C. Hinton will join the history and government department staff. Added to the modern languages group, to teach Spanish, will be Dr. Mario Pavia and Prof. Dante S. Sena. Dr. Roland N. Harman is the newly-appointed acting chairman of the English department.

Nine new courses, in five departments of instruction, have been added to the college curriculum. New economic courses are in intermediate economic theory, American economic institutions, and geography of North America. New courses in government are: American foreign policy, American political theory, and international law. A course in the political and cultural history of the Far East since 1500 has been added to the history department schedule.

At the school of dentistry, the new dean, Rear Admiral C. V. Rault, has announced several changes in the faculty. Dr. Edward Brezon has been appointed full-time instructor in crown and bridge, and Maj. Norbert Kephart, USAF, is the new assistant professor of military science and tactics with the university's dental ROTC unit. Dr. Charles B. Murto has been promoted to the position of director of clinics, succeeding the late Dr. Joseph J. Kelly.

Dean Hugh J. Fegan of the university's law school announces that there are no changes in the faculty for the coming year and enrollment is not yet known. Last year's 1009 students entered with degrees from 215 colleges and universities.

Insurance Classes to Continue

GWU Offers Course for Ministers

A NEW course specially designed for ministers and church workers is one of several that George Washington University will offer during the fall term. A three-hour course labeled, "Christian Education in the Church," the subject will be taught by the Rev. Thomas Archie Stone, assistant minister at the National Presbyterian Church.

Classes at the G st. school begin October 2, with both evening and day classes to be offered by the Junior College, the Columbian College, the Graduate Council, the Law School, the School of Engineering, the School of Pharmacy, the School of Education, the School of Government and the Division of University Students.

For the second consecutive year the University will offer a course in property and casualty insurance in cooperation with the local property and casualty firms. Alfred Ernest Lampe, assistant manager of the Washington office of the American International Underwriters Corp., will serve as instructor.

The Department of Speech will continue its classes in theater, public speaking and speech correction. The Speech Clinic will be under the direction of Norma Patterson Crawford, assistant professor of speech, who is serving during the absence of Calvin Weir Pettit, regular clinic director now on leave.

Several major changes have been made in the School of Government, including the establishment of a separate department of accounting and the reorganizing and expanding of the department of business administration. According to university president, Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, the curricula have been revamped and augmented in order to provide students with better integrated and comprehensive programs designed to meet the needs of modern industry and government.

Dr. Ralph Dale Kennedy has been named executive officer of the department of accounting. Joe Lee Jessup, associate professor of business administration, succeeds Dr. Kennedy as executive officer of the department of business administration.

New courses offered by the department of business administration include office management, business reports and analysis, sales management, and at the graduate level, a seminar in marketing and a seminar in controllership. The department of accounting is offering an undergraduate course in advanced cost accounting, and two graduate courses in advanced auditing and advanced accounting theory.

An important asset to the University this year will be the 70,000-volume law library purchased this summer from the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. The library, valued at $250,000, is considered one of the best in the country for reference on international law and relations. It also contains League of Nations and United Nations documents, plus an extensive card index.

Eventually, the library will be placed in the University's four-story Social Science Hall which adjoins the present library at the school. The building will be converted into stacks and reading rooms.

Scheduled for action this year is further development of the University's three-million dollar expansion program which includes such previously announced projects as a $400,000 classroom building and a $500,000 engineering and technological building.

A recent zoning ruling gave the university permission to establish a 300-car parking lot at 23d and H sts. nw. This, for a time, eliminates a proposed $530,000 outlay for a parking building in the area.

Also contemplated is a $600,000 chemistry building, a million-dollar medical school, a $750,000 gymnasium, several dormitories and a school of dentistry building.

Gallaudet Expects Banner Year

By Dr. Irving S. Fusfeld
Gallaudet College Dean

AT Gallaudet College plans are being made for its eighty-seventh session. The college was inaugurated during the Civil War by an Act of Congress signed by President Lincoln.

DR. ELSTAD

This promises to be a banner year, with an enrollment of over 225 students from more than 40 States and six foreign countries.

Dr. Elizabeth Peet, dean of women and professor of languages, retired at the close of the last session after 50 years of service. Prof. W. J. McClure, who was principal of Kendall School and held the title of professor of education, resigned to become assistant superintendent in the Tennessee School for the Deaf. Miss Genevieve T. Hanley resigned as instructor of Romance languages. Mrs. Shirley Panara, instructor of physical education for women, also left.

These positions are being filled by a number of highly satisfactory replacements. Prof. Elizabeth Benson, a member of the staff since 1926, will now serve as Dean of Women. Prof. Hugo F. Schunhoff, director of curriculum in the Texas School for the Deaf and a member of the staff in education in the University of Texas, will be principal of Kendall School, and will head the area in education in the college itself. Dr. Rosalyn H. Gardner, of the University of North Carolina, with years of teaching experience in other colleges, will be assistant professor of Romance languages. Mrs. Martha Bird of the Florida School for the Deaf and the Blind will assume charge of the speech-teaching program of the college.

Dr. Leonard M. Elstad, president of the college, recently returned from an extended visit to European centers in education of the deaf. The occasion for his trip was to attend, as official representative of the State Department, an International Meeting of Educators of the Deaf in Groningen, Holland, in June, and later a similar meeting in Norway.

A number of physical changes being made will add considerable effectiveness to the curricular program. The Home Economics Department has been enlarged and a number of complete modern cookery units installed. The stage in Chapel Hill is undergoing special repair so as to provide more satisfactory presentation of dramatic performances. A new set of curtains is being put up.

A special experiment in international good will is being tried this year. A deaf student from each of six nations plans to enter the college this fall. The nations are Sweden, China, Jordan, India, Israel and Japan.

Through use of mirror, student June Cass gets practical instruction in lip reading and elements of speech from Mrs. Bowden Findley, language and speech development teacher, at Gallaudet College.

Tuition: $4 Per Term, (That Was Back in 1850)

By Fred M. Hechinger

TO FIND a good private academy for the fair tuition cost of less than $4 per term you will have to go back exactly one century. A hundred years ago secondary education, while not easily available for the average American, appears to have come at bargain prices for those who were lucky enough to get it.

This conclusion is prompted by the unearthing of a hundred-year-old poster — evidently the precursor of today's school catalogue. It proclaims in no uncertain terms the educational offerings of "Starkey Seminary," an independent academy about a mile from Seneca Lake, N. Y.

The notice quotes the "expenses rated by the quarter of 11 weeks" as follows: "Tuition $2.50 to $4.00. Incidentals, 25 cents. Room-rent in the Seminary, (including stove, chairs, table and bedstead,) $1.25. Lectures on Chemistry, etc., FREE."

Whether education today is worth more or the dollar less, statistics tell their own story of the rising cost of living and learning. Thirteen years ago Starkey Academy moved about half a mile to Lakemont, N. Y., turned itself from a coeducational school ("students of both sexes admitted at all times") into a college preparatory school for boys and changed its name to Lakemont Academy. Within a hundred years its annual tuition and residence has moved up to $1,200, and the anticipated incidentals have jumped from the nostalgic quarter to $50.

Back in those times the poster had instructed parents of pre-Diesel and family car days: "Students coming on the Lake from Geneva and Jefferson can land at Starkey and be conveyed by Stage directly to the Seminary."

But while chemistry lectures are still free in today's more expensive curriculum, there have been other significant developments. The faculty of a century ago consisted only of four teachers, including the principal, a preceptress, a professor of sacred music and an "Instructress upon the Piano Forte—a splendid Instrument."

Today a core curriculum of English, languages, social and natural sciences is augmented by elective courses, remedial reading for those who need it, specialized testing and guidance.

Public speaking, apparently unrecognized in the preradio era of 1850, is now compulsory, while the Bible—then "daily read by all"—has been made an elective.

The head master of a hundred years ago would hardly have pointed to the presence of students from foreign countries as does his successor of today. Nor would many foreign students then have looked to America for their high school education. "The academy has its own United Nations Assembly in which the boys debate some of the issues facing our world today," said Mr. Colvin last week.

Color Television Looks Like Boon to School and Student

By Sonia Stein

THE SHORTAGE of top flight university teachers may soon be disposed of with the click of a switch. In fact, if everybody wants to be cooperative, the students at Squedunk College (registration 100) may be privileged to study occasionally with Yale's best professors. And students may watch unusual experiments or rare surgical operations, when they are simultaneously performed several thousand miles and only several inches away from the professor's hands.

With the announcement this month that Remington Rand, Inc., will have color television equipment ready for private use this fall, the sporadic beginnings of this educational wonder are almost with us.

Remington Rand, which has been selling black-and-white equipment under the name Vericon for educational purposes as well as for industrial and military uses, is all enthused over its new Vericolor units. The kind of color to be used in Vericolor has already been proved in more than 10 medical demonstrations before 100,000 doctors at medical conventions throughout the country. It's the Columbia Broadcasting System's method of producing color TV—one of the three systems being considered by the Fed-

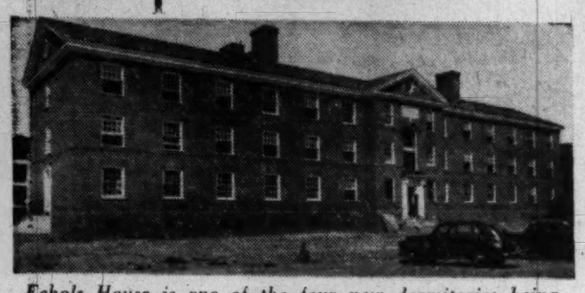
Problem of Adjustment Pondered

Virginia U. Maps Plan To Help New Students



Echols House is one of the four new dormitories being readied at Charlottesville

Charlottesville, Aug. 26—The University of Virginia will give special attention to helping entering students make early adjustments to college life during the session of 1950-51 which begins September 11.

For the University of Virginia this will be the 126th year since doors were first opened to students in March of 1825, and the start of a sixth-quarter-century of service to State and Nation.

Advance registration is slightly below last year's figures in the College of Arts and Sciences, slightly higher in engineering, much higher in education, and about the same in medicine, law and the department of graduate studies. About thirty new members have been added to the faculty, some to replace men who have retired or resigned.

President Colgate W. Darden is giving his attention to designing a program for first-year men which will be a double-barreled attack upon the problems of living costs, and the problems of bridging the gap between high schools, preparatory schools and the university.

A Lower Division has been formed within the College of Arts and Sciences to help the new student lay the foundation for a successful university career and gain the most benefit from his academic work and social life.

The university's multi-million dollar building program is moving rapidly. One of the major items is the construction of 10 new residence halls at a cost of three million dollars to provide living and recreation space for 1244 students.

Four of the new residence halls are being pushed to completion so that they can be used as living quarters by new students who arrive September 11 to begin a get-acquainted week. These halls, each of which will have rooms for 110 to 125 men, will provide the setting for the Lower Division.

Students will pay $135 a session for quarters in the new halls, and by eating in the temporary cafeteria being opened nearby they may be able to reduce living costs by as much as $150 for the academic year.

The Lower Division within the college is being planned by a committee under the chairmanship of Lewis M. Hammond, professor of philosophy and assistant dean of the summer session. It will be administered by another member of the philosophy faculty, Marcus B. Mallett, who has been named associate dean of the Lower Division.

Five Nations Represented

Sweet Briar to Acquire An International Aspect

SWEET BRIAR, Va., Aug. 26.—Sweet Briar College will take on an international aspect September 18 when the fall term officially opens. Five foreign nations will be represented on the opening day roster, including Japan, the Dutch East Indies, Scotland, China and Germany.

Most of the girls are exchange students, and as a result Sweet Briar will send several of its students abroad this fall for study in such famed institutions as the University of Paris and Saint Andrews University in Scotland. One of the new students is a former German displaced person, while China's representative will complete her degree at the college this year.

One major faculty change installs Dr. Anne Gary Pannell as Sweet Friar's fifth president. Dr. Pannell, former dean at Baltimore's Goucher College, succeeds President Martha B. Lucas.

Though academic standards are high, the college does not neglect the recreational needs of its students. Riding is stressed throughout the year, and when weather makes the valley trails inaccesible, the school offers an indoor riding ring.

Other extra-curricular activities include membership in the school drama club. Paint and Patches', the Glee Club, and various student publications, including a weekly newspaper. The college sponsors a series of lectures and musical events. An annual attraction at the school is the appearance of the National Symphony Orchestra of Washington.

Two freshmen arrive at Sweet Briar information office for beginning of orientation week

Social activities are varied due to the location of the college. It is situated halfway between the University of Virginia and Washington and Lee University.

Moving to New Campus

Boston University's School of Education, with the largest enrollment of the fifteen schools and colleges comprising the university, will move to the new central campus on the Charles River shortly after September 1.

$17,000,000 Program Underway

Building Booming at Howard U

FIRST buildings in Howard University's new 17-million-dollar building program will be ready for occupancy before the end of the 1950-51 school year, Julian A. Cook, architectural coordinator of the building program, has announced. The buildings are Wheatley and Baldwin Halls, two new women's dormitories, which are being constructed and furnished at a cost of $1,790,000.

"Although the buildings are scheduled to be finished by the end of this year, it will probably be several months later before they are furnished and ready for occupancy," he said.

Construction has begun on the new $2,120,000 engineering and architecture building, an L-shaped four-story structure which will occupy 26,500 square feet on part of an area bordered by Georgia ave., Howard pl. and 6th st. nw. Twelve brick houses have been torn down on 6th st. to make way for the new building, which will have a 173-foot frontage.

Architects for both building projects are Hilyard R. Robinson, of Washington, and Paul R. Williams, of Los Angeles, Calif.

The two new dormitories will complete a quadrangle with Frazier, Crandall and Truth Halls, the principal existing dormitories. The quadrangle will be called Harriet Tubman Court. The dormitories will accommodate 237 students, mostly in double rooms. In addition to sleeping quarters, each floor will have a sitting room, kitchenette alcove and domestic room.

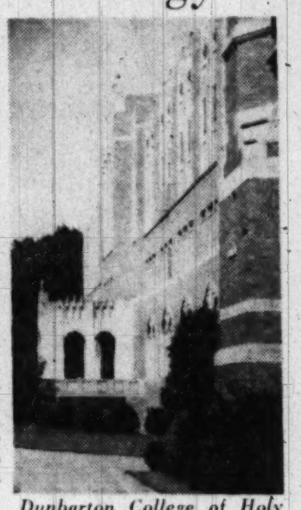
The steps and platform of the main entrance of the new Engineering and Architecture building will be equipped with underground radiator pipes to make snow removal unnecessary. It is designed as a special safeguard against accidents during the winter months.

Thirteen percent of the space of the building will be used by the architecture department, 15 percent will be devoted to civil engineering, 19 percent to electrical engineering, and 23 percent to mechanical engineering. The remaining space will be shared equally by all departments.

Meantime, university officials are preparing for an enrollment of some 5000 students for the fall term. During the last school year, the university's 10 schools and colleges served 6699 students, 1862 of whom attended summer classes; 911 students received degrees.

In addition to the standard liberal arts course, and the law, medicine and dental schools, Howard also offers a School of Social Work, School of Engineering and Architecture, College of Pharmacy, School of Music and a Graduate School.

Dunbarton Adds Courses In Biology



Dunbarton College of Holy Cross

An expanded curricula and an augmented faculty will be offered by Dunbarton College of Holy Cross when it opens its fall season September 21. The school, located at 2935 Upton st. nw., also plans for an inauguration of evening classes in adult education early in October.

New courses at the school include an extensive program in biology to prepare students for pre-medical training, or a career as a medical secretary or medical technologist. New courses have also been added in the fields of secondary education, psychology, elementary education and religion.

The adult education program will include courses in public speaking, parliamentary law, public relations, contemporary relations and religion. Students may apply either on a credit or non-credit basis.

New faculty members include Sister M. Ernestine, C. S. C., who will act at Head Librarian; Mrs. Joan Gilroy Garraty, director of student teaching and the program of practical methods in elementary education; Miss Jacqueline Gleason, M. A., director of the department of psychology, and Miss Helen McDonough, instructor in the department of art.

The fall session will open with a mass celebrated by the Very Rev. Clement Kearney, O. P. Music will be furnished by the Dunbarton College Glee Club under the direction of Sister Cecilia Mary, C. S. C.

Birthday for Academy

Livingstone Academy celebrates its fiftieth anniversary this year. Founded in 1900 by James W. Livingstone, the academy is now operated by his daughter, Jessica Livingstone Dickerson. Located at 1138 Connecticut ave. nw., the academy offers instruction in pattern drafting, millinery, garment construction and ladies' tailoring.

Faculty Expanding

Catholic University Adding Music Division

EXPANSION of the teaching staff, additional undergraduate courses, and the establishment of a new music division in the College of Arts and Sciences will mark the beginning of the sixty-second year of the Catholic University of America, where classes will be in full swing by October 2.

Registration of new students will take place on September 22 and 23. Enrollment of other undergraduates will be held on three days, beginning September 25. All undergraduate classes will begin on September 28 and conclude October 3, with all classes beginning for advanced students on October 4.

Mass of the Holy Ghost and solemn opening of the 1950-51 academic year will be on Sunday, October 1, at 11 a. m. in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

New members of the teaching staff and promotions will be announced by the rector, the Most Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, who will be consecrated auxiliary bishop of Washington September 21. Later in the term 30 members of the faculty who have served 25 or more years at the university will receive the Benemerenti Medal, an honor conferred by Pope Pius XII.

Forty-five graduate fellowships and scholarships have been awarded for advanced work beginning this term, together with 30 tuition scholarships for high school graduates throughout the country. A number of assistantships for students doing graduate work also will be available.

The new division of music will be directed by John Paul of Norfolk, who for five years has been in charge of the graduate work in music at the summer session. His degrees in music were obtained at the University of Southern California and at Catholic University. He will be assisted by a staff of specialists in the instruction of liturgical music, musical education, composition and applied music, and B.A. degrees will be offered in these studies in the College of Arts and Sciences, and masters' degrees in the Graduate School.

B.A. degrees also will be offered for the first time in education.

A marriage counseling center will open in the Department of Sociology. This service will be free to students, and open to the general public on a fee basis.

Dr. Alphonse H. Clemens, associate professor of sociology, who has pioneered in the Cana movement for the discussion of adult problems, will direct the center. He will have the assistance of Rev. Dr. Paul H. Furfey, head of the Department of Sociology, and Rev. Dr. Hohn W. Stafford, head of the Department of Psychology and Psychiatry, and an advisory board of other faculty members will be named so that students and outsiders may have the benefit of skilled counseling in marital matters, as well as advice in adjusting marriage relationships and child welfare. Later it is planned to organize a program for the training of priests and laymen in marriage counseling, with degrees for those completing the course.

The marriage counseling center will be in addition to the services now offered by the university's two other counseling centers: the general university center headed by Dr. Harry Fagin, and the Veterans' Administration center, for former servicemen and women students, headed by Charles L. Kreitl.

Dr. Clemens joined the Catholic University faculty in 1946 after serving as an instructor in sociology and economics at St. Louis University, where he received his doctorate in 1941.

Athletic Center Started

American U. Expands Curriculum, Faculty

EXPANSION is the theme at American University this year, with the fields of study, the faculty and the building program all on the increase. President Paul F. Douglas has emphasized the scholastic angle with the announcement that 21 new courses will be added to the evening schedule at the University's School of Social Sciences and Public Affairs, 1901 F st. nw., beginning September 25. A new day-time course is also being offered in addition to the 95 regular subjects in the catalogue.

On the spacious 75-acre campus of the University's College of Art and Science at Ward Circle, 30 courses are available in both day and evening classes.

The new $225,000 War Memorial Athletic Center is underway on the campus, first step in a five-year building program which also includes dormitories to be erected at a cost of approximately $750,000.

Initial building to be constructed for the Athletic Center will be a stadium, seating 5000, but capable of being expanded to accommodate 25,000. Twelve acres of ground have been cleared and graded at the site of the center, and work on the stadium is expected to begin soon.

Included in the new subjects at the university is a course in "Specialized Reporting and News Correspondence" to be conducted by Ben Gilbert, city editor of The Washington Post. Students will augment the instrution by covering assignments in specialized reporting and Washington and foreign news correspondence.

The three District of Columbia public school teachers who will instruct at the university this year include Miss Virginia E. Hawks who will serve as chairman of the department of physical education and health; Miss Audrey Wiggins, physical education instructor, and Miss Jeanette L. Wells, assistant teacher of vocal music.

Other additions to the faculty are: Dr. Mary B. Bradshaw, dean of the Washington Semester Program and assistant to Graduate Dean Pitman B. Potter; Dr. Ralph C. Bedell, chairman of the department of psychology and education; Dr. Melville J. Ulmer, associate professor of economics; Dr. Samuel L. Sharp, lecturer in international law and international relations; Prof. Donald S. Fields, assistant professor of economics and business administration; Dr. Walter P. Bowman, professor of English and communications, and Dr. Philip Bradley, professor of economics.

Virginia Tech Expects Enrollment of 4000

A new dormitory at Virginia Tech, first occupied last winter

BLACKSBURG, Va., Aug. 26.—Approximately 4000 students are expected to begin classes at Virginia Tech September 25. Of this number, about 1000 will be freshmen and transfer students. They are to report here September 18 for an orientation program. Former students will register September 22.

About 58 percent of the students will be enrolled in the 14 engineering curricula; 24 percent in the School of Business Administration and Applied Science; and the remaining 18 percent in the 11 agricultural curricula. Additional graduate courses in applied mechanics, geology, and statistics have been added.

Among the more important staff changes is the appointment of a new dean, a new commandant of cadets, and a new head of the civil engineering department.

Dr. G. Burke Johnston becomes dean of the School of Business Administration and Applied Science to replace Dean C. P. Miles, who retires. Dr. Johnston has been assitant dean at the University of Alabama. From 1930 to 1933 he served as instructor in English here.

Col. W. B. Merritt, Coast Artillery Corps, was assigned to Virginia Tech late in June as commandant of cadets and professor of military science and tactics. He succeeded Col. T. W. Munford, who has been assigned to military duties in the South Pacific.

After 37 years as head of the civil engineering department, Col. R. B. H. Begg retires September 1. He is replaced by P. H. McGauhey, for the past two years on leave of absence from Virginia Tech at the University of Southern California. Russell C. Brinker will be professor of civil engineering.

Dr. H. N. Young, director of the Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station here, contines as acting dean of agriculture while a successor to the late Dr. T. B. Hutcheson is sought. Dr. Byron N. Cooper, head of the geology department, has been designated by President Walter S. Newman as acting director of graduate studies. Webster Richardson, who for the past two years has been studying for his Ph.D. degree at Oak Ridge, Tenn., returns as professor of physics.

The statistics department is adding two associate professors: Dr. David B. Duncan, who is coming from Australia; and Dr. Ralph A. Bradley, who came here in July from Canada. Both will conduct research as well as teach. Dr. John I. Shafer, jr., becomes associate professor of plant pathology and physiology.

G. U. Names Acting Dean For Nurses

SISTER Mary Vincent Kaltenbrun, S. C. N., has been named acting dean of Georgetown's School of Nursing during the year of absence of Dean Sister Agnes Miriam Payne, S. C. N., who is serving at the Nazareth College School of Nursing, Nazareth, Ky.

Both Sister Mary Vincent and Sister Agnes Miriam are registered nurses and bachelors of science from Nazareth College, and hold masters of science in education degrees from Catholic University and from St. Louis University.

Miss Mary Catherine Wisler, an R. N. from St. Alexis Hospital in Cleveland and a bachelor and master of science from Western Reserve University, has been appointed assistant dean in charge of nursing education.

Also appointed as assistant dean and student counselor was Miss Gertrude Justison, an R. N. from Memorial Hospital in Wilmington, Del.; a bachelor of science from the University of Pittsburgh and a master of arts from Seton Hall University.

Abbott to Award Fine Arts Degree

Courses leading to a bachelor of fine arts degree will be offered this fall at the Abbott Art School, 2013 I st. nw. The degree will be awarded upon completion of four years in any course in the fine arts department. Previously the school awarded no degree.

Two-year certificates will be offered in fashion illustration, three-year certificates will be granted in advertising fashion and pictorial illustration. In addition, the school offers a complete drafting department with classes in architectural, mechanical, topographic and patent drafting.

Registration is now being accepted for classes which begin September 13. Special student classes begin October 1.

Orthopedic Training

Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons, in affiliation with the Hospital for Joint Diseases, will offer a special post-graduate course for physicians seeking training in orthopedic surgery. The curriculum, consisting of 11 morning and 11 eleven afternoon sessions beginning this September, will include lectures, case demonstrations, clinical examination of patients and conferences.

Plan Movie Study

Bowling Green State University students and faculty members have formed a joint, nonacademic club to study the history of the motion picture. Limited to 50 members, the club will present two 10-week series of special film showings.

In 77th Year

Ratio of Men Will Drop At Wilson

ALMOST 500 full-time students will answer, "present," when Wilson Teachers College begins its seventy-seventh year September 11. According to college Officials, about 40 percent of these will be men, with the draft likely to play a major role in male attendance. Last year half of the enrollees were men.

Founded in 1873 and chartered by Congress in 1929, Wilson, 11th and Harvard sts. nw., is primarily designed to provide teachers for the District of Columbia. It offers a four-year curriculum leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science, and preparing teachers for elementary and junior high school instruction.

No tuition fee is charged resident D. C. students. Nonresident students pay a $337 annual fee. The college is fully accredited by the American Asspciation of Colleges for Teacher Education and the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

In addition to a broad number of academic courses, Wilson also offers an extensive student activity program. Included are such organizations as the Student Council, Men's and Women's Clubs, Actor's Guild, Bible Study Group, Glee Club, Band, International Relations Club and various fraternities and sororities. The college also boasts a large intercollegiate athletic schedule involving competition with area schools in football, baseball, basketball and tennis.

One of the more popular courses at the college to be continued this year is the nursing education program. As in the past, the course will be offered in cooperation with local hospitals. Garfield Memorial Hospital and Sibley Hospital are scheduled to participate this season.

One major faculty change for the new term is the appointment of Charles P. Hoffmann as assistant professor of speech. A graduate of William Jewell College and Columbia University, Mr. Hoffmann will have charge of all speech and drama classes at the college. He formerly was instructor at the University of Cincinnati and Teachers College, Columbia University.

Planned Decrease at W. & M.

WILLIAMSBURG, VA., Aug. 26.—A planned decrease in enrollment will bring the student body of the College of William and Mary down to normal size, or about 1800, this fall, college officials have announced. The historic institution, second oldest in the Nation, reduced admissions to eliminate overcrowding, officials said. Prior to the last war, enrollment was held to less than 1500.

REHLAENDER

(James E. Rehlaender, son of Mr. and Mrs. W N. Rehlaender, 4811 Middlesex lane, Bethesda, will act as William and Mary's student body president this year.)

However, construction of new dormitories and other facilities enabled the college to accept more students during the postwar period when a flood of GIs poured into the schools for education at Government expense.

Meantime, the College is continuing its building program. It is now completing a $200,000 heat distribution system, and plans to begin construction of a new men's dormitory this year. Already completed is the enlargement of the school cafeteria, construction of new intramural and athletic fields and renovation of the Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Building.

As the college prepares to open for its 258th season, officials announce that there will be no major courses added to the curricula, though the department of psychology is being expanded to permit more extensive research and experimental work. Also, this season the department of sociology will carry a staff of three full-time professors.

William and Mary has added 10 new members to its faculty this year. They are: Henry Rovosky, Cairn A. Moore, Burton R. Wolin, Miss Edriel Lott, John F. Kantner, Newell S. Irwin, Daniel J. Sorrells, Kenneth A. Connelly, Elizabeth Waidliech and Paul Lathimer.

Nursery School Has Vacancies

The Meridian Hill Cooperative Nursery School, located in the All Soul's Unitarian Church Building, 15th and Harvard sts. nw., has a few vacancies in the 3-year-old and 4-year-old group. The school is well equipped for indoor and outdoor play activities, has two excellent teachers and specializes in handcrafts, music, and dramatic play. For information, call Mrs. K. C. Watkins, Adams 0314.

Stenotype Institute To Open New Classes

Due to a heavy fell enrollment, the Stenotype Institute of Washington, Walker Building, 734 15th st. nw., will open three new night classes in September to teach operation of the stenograph. The day school also offers a complete secretarial course with typewriting instruction.

Night school classes meet twice a week with instructions in typewriting optional. Dictation in machine shorthand is worked up to speeds of 250 and 300 words a minute. Fully approved for GI students, the institute offers a free placement service.

'Modern Society' Survey

Northwestern University through its economics, geography and social science departments, will offer a revised survey course, entitled "Modern Society," during the academic year of 1950-51.

Washington and Lee Adds Year for Undergraduates

WASHINGTON AND LEE University will continue cosmopolitan when an anticipated 1200 men from 40 States, the District of Columbia and a dozen foreign countries gather in Lexington next month for the 202d term of the Nation's oldest college off the Atlantic Seaboard.

From the Washington area will come 53 students in the academic, commerce, science and law divisions including 20 freshmen.

Returning for his final year in the school of law is Fred M. Vinson, jr., son of Chief Justice and Mrs. Vinson. The Chief Justice's son represents a dwindling element of former servicemen whose studies were interrupted by World War II. He enrolled in 1942, served in the Army Air Forces from 1943 until 1946 and returned to Washington and Lee to complete work for his bachelor of arts degree in 1948, entering the law school that autumn.

The 1950-51 curriculum will offer several new opportunities, one of them believed to be unique.

A one-year program of advanced scholarship, designed as a fifth year of undergraduate study for men interested in supplementary education on the undergraduate level, will be innovated this fall.

Leading to an additional diploma, the fifth year work is explained by Dean James G. Leyburn as follows:

"Many students discover the pleasures of the intellectual life only in their senior year. A program is needed to enable them to continue to broaden their horizons. Most graduate work requires specialization rather than expansion, and the graduate degree is primarily for prospective teachers and research scholars, not for men who wish a broad education."

Students who register for the fifth year will be encouraged to explore fields of study for which they did not have time during their first four years and to continue research which appealed to them as undergraduates.

In fact for the first time this year will be a cooperative arrangement between Washington and Lee, Carnegie Tech, and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute to enable students to obtain a broad general education before specializing in a field of engineering.

Under the cooperative plan, students will attend Washington and Lee for three years followed by a two-year attendance at either Carnegie Tech or RPI. At Washington and Lee they will be engaged in a liberal arts curriculum with emphasis on physics and mathematics.

After completing certain requirements at Carnegie Tech or RPI, students will receive the bachelor's degree from Washington and Lee, and on completion of the two-year program at Carnegie Tech or RPI, the student will receive the bachelor's degree in engineering.

New faculty members joining the staff for the 1950-51 session include Dr. Walter Elder, who comes from Oxford as assistant professor of English. Once an honor graduate of Kenyon College in Ohio, Dr. Elder did graduate study at Harvard before receiving a Rhodes scholarship. He becomes the third Rhodes graduate in the W&L English department.

From a teaching position at the University of Pennsylvania will come William C. Hunt as assistant professor of chemistry.

The W&L Glee Club will have a new director this year, Gordon Page, choral director of the Virginia Musical Festival for the last three years. He is associate professor of music at Mary Baldwin College in nearby Staunton.

Montgomery Junior College Coming of Age

MONTGOMERY Junior College, organized four years ago to provide Montgomery County residents with a chance for a higher education, comes of age October 2. That's the date when nearly 500 students will flock to the new campus in Takoma Park.

Previously, the school had been forced to share facilities with students at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School on East-West hwy., and could offer only evening classes. However with the recent purchase of the Bliss Electrical School building, grounds and equipment in Takoma Park, the junior college now has a campus of its own, and will offer both day and evening sessions.

The purchase of the former technical school has resulted in the addition of electrical curriculums to the list of courses at the college. The new program will include the use of more modern electrical equipment acquired from Bliss.

Outside of the addition of the electrical curriculums, relatively few changes are to be found in the offerings of the college. Most changes that come about are refinement in the program rather than major changes. The big change for students will be a new laboratory in chemistry, a new laboratory in biology, and a new laboratory in physics.

There will also be an enlarged library for the college this year with more reading space and additional shelf space, plus many new volumes for the shelves. The new campus also includes a cafeteria which will seat 450 students; 17 new classrooms, and new offices for members of the faculty.

A group of consultants, brought to the college through the courtesy of the Maryland State Department of Education this month, has recommended sweeping modifications in the program of the college to meet community needs. These will gradually be put into effect.

Included among the consultants were Dr. Dwayne Orton, director of education for International Business Machines; Dr. Lawrence L. Bethel, director of the New Haven Y. M. C. A. Junior College, and Dr. Henry W. Littlefield, vice president of the Junior College of Connecticut.

Hood Curricula Revamped, Campus Is 'Redecorated'

Breakfast trips and weekend jaunts in the nearby Catoctin Mountains are popular with the Hood College Riding Club

FREDERICK, Md., Aug. 26.—Some 500 students arriving at Hood College for registration September 23 will find not only a redecorated campus, but also a revamped course of instruction and several faculty changes.

Completely rejuvenated is Coblentz Hall. The dining room and lounge boasts new paint and furnishings—gift of an alumna, Mrs. Margaret Pontious Coblentz, of Catonsville, Md. The basement of the hall has been altered to provide additional facilities for work in arts and crafts.

Among new courses to be offered by Hood this term are "Women and Family Life" and "American Parties and Politics." The course on "Women and Family Life" will be a prerequisite for the A. B. or bachelor of science degree in either home economics or nursing.

New instructors include Frederick D. Eddy, professor and head of the department of classical languages; Thomas B. Brumbaugh, acting art department head; Miss Catherine H. Foland, assistant physical education professor; Miss June Patterson, instructor in preschool education and in charge of the nursery school and Miss Marjorie Jean Wornick, assistant professor of home economics.

In addition to the usual extra-curricular activities, Hood is again making plans for a third successive annual performance of Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah" by the joint choirs of the college and the United States Naval Academy.

Trinity College in 50 Years Has Grown From 19 Students to 485

A HALF-CENTURY AGO, Trinity College opened its doors for the first time. Its student body was small, 19 students from 11 States and the District of Columbia. One building housed the pioneer institution.

However, when Trinity begins its fall term September 20, the situation will be a bit different. Four modern buildings now grace the landscaped campus which fronts on Michigan ave. nw., and the enrollment this year will number 485 students from 33 States, the District and 8 foreign countries.

Conducted by the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur, Trinity owes much of its development to a loyal group of alumnae whose latest gift to the college is $65,000 to be applied toward construction of a new auditorium. And, probably remembering their own undergraduate days, the alumnae have donated numerous recreation facilities, including tennis, basketball and hockey courts, and a swimming pool.

Of the 485 students entering this year, four will be drawn from Washington's Diplomatic Corps. Scheduled to attend is Miss Benedicta Chang, daughter of the Ambassador from Korea, Dr. John Myun Chang; Miss Maria Teresa Zuleta, daughter of the Ambassador from Colombia, Dr. Don Eduardo Zuleta-Angel; Miss Faiza El-Khouri, daughter of the Minister from Syria, Mr. Faiz El-Khouri, and Miss Iran Ispahani, daughter of the Ambassador from Pakistan, Mr. M. A. H. Ispahani.

MISS CHANG

In addition, the countries of Italy, France, China and the Philippines will also be represented at the college.

New curricula at Trinity this coming term includes developments in the education, child psychology and health departments. Additional courses in education on the elementary level will be offered and correlated with courses in child psychology. Health services will be extended for resident students.

For music lovers, the college offers the Glee Club, Choir and Music Clue; art devotees may join the Art Club, while aspirant actors can find a niche in the Dramatic Society. Social work is encouraged through the Mission Society (sometimes called the "Wekanduits"), the Christ Child Society and the Interracial Club.

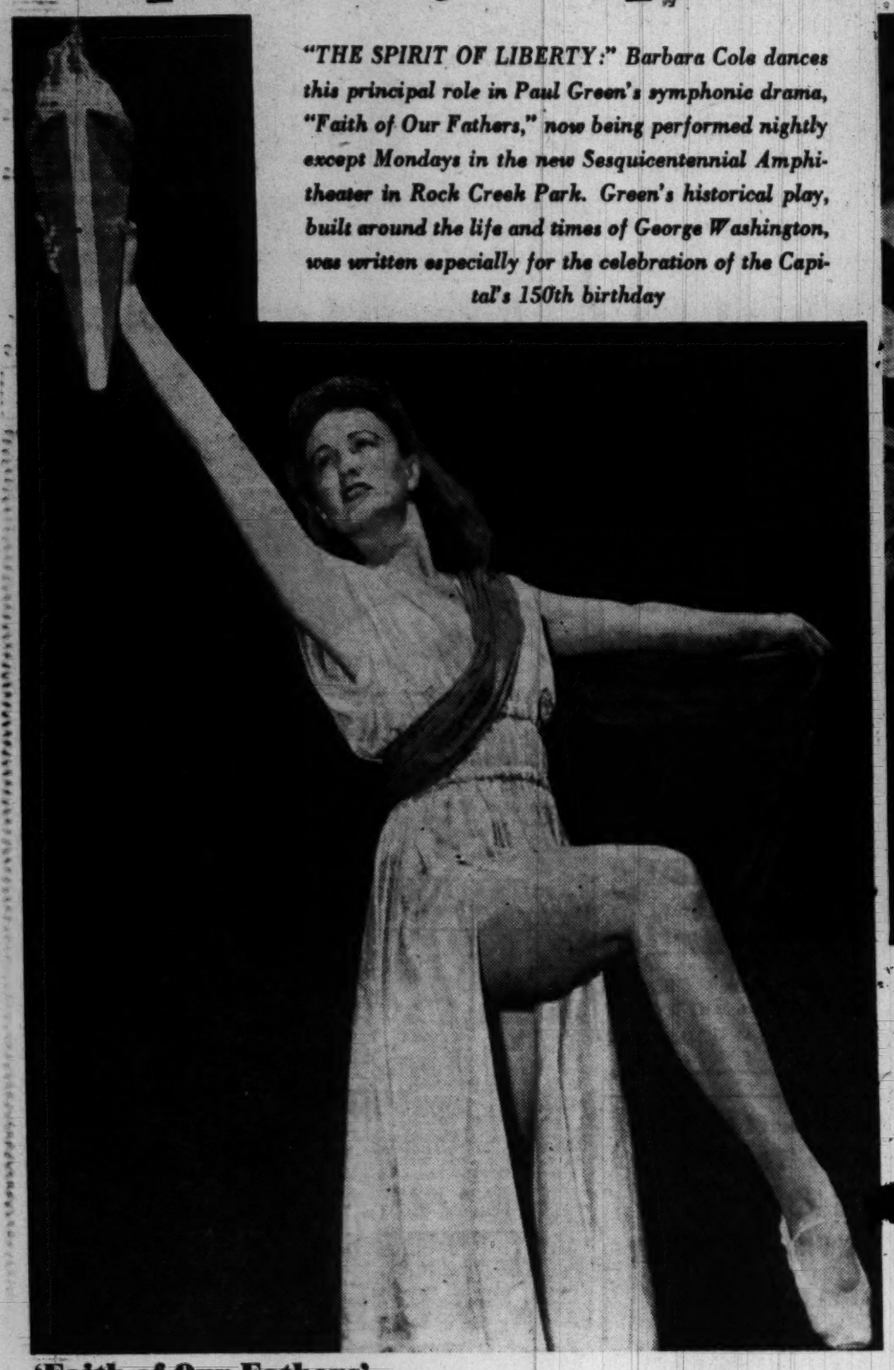
Sesqui Play Impressive; Youngsters Plot Annual Revue



"THE SPIRIT OF LIBERTY:" Barbara Cole dances this principal role in Paul Green's symphonic drama, "Faith of Our Fathers," now being performed nightly except Mondays in the new Sesquicentennial Amphitheater in Rock Creek Park. Green's historical play, built around the life and times of George Washington, was written especially for the celebration of the Capital's 150th birthday

'Faith of Our Fathers'

Washington's Hard to Capture

By Richard L. Coe

NO WASHINGTONIAN should miss the beauties of "Faith of our Fathers" in the handsome new Rock Creek Park Amphitheater.

This is not to say that Paul Green's ambitious symphonic drama about George Washington comes off the way we all wish it might have. Frankly it is disappointing, but the production is still impressive and to discover just why one leaves dissatisfied we must consider the problem Green has sought to solve.

For ever since Parson Weems, writers have tried vainly to make the Father of His Country an interesting and dramatic figure. That first biographer, with such embroidery as the cherry tree yarn, tackled the hardest type of man to write about, or so, at least, it seems. In "George Washington, the Myth and the Man," W. E. Woodward sought to tear away some of the fabled outlines, but at best, the first president is too solid a figure to incite much more than awe; from what his contemporaries wrote, the 555-foot monument seems uniquely fitting memorial.

Green's Drama's 'Evolve'

THIS is the figure that Green is attempting to humanize in "Faith of Our Fathers." And, while trying to make a human of him, he's also trying to give us what he refuses to call a pageant, but which surely falls under the meaning of that broad term. To fill his huge stage, his scenes must be broad afid heavy, the very qualities he at the same time is trying to tone down in his central figure.

The script's failures have two aspects. For one thing, the federal period is both remote and diffused and in picking and choosing among the simultaneous events of a lively period, Green has wandered too freely in his musings to make himself clear. The second flaw, more fundamental for a dramatist, is that his lines are a wearing collection of cliches which, by their very weight, become meaningless and tiring to listen to.

Much is made of the fact that Green is in the habit of letting his "symphonic dramas" mature with playing. It is now, they say, a better evening than it was opening night and if, again they say, it can catch on a bit more than it has, it may become an annual feature of Washington summer life. Another factor mitigating against the author was the off again-on again Sesqui squabbling during the months preceding the opening. It would be difficult for any writer to do his best under the circumstances which plagued Green.

These factors, however pertinent do not disguise the fact that Green's script is painfully sloppy.

Obvious Writing

THE second act situation, the young republic's relations with France and England, is decidedly murky. While the first act is reasonably clear about the jealousies of the individual states and the settling of Alexander Hamilton's financial system, it will take more than Green gives you to understand just how America of the 1790's felt about France and England, why Jay's long treaty-wrangling proved so unpopular and why the influential men of the day decided as they did.

But it is in the lines he gives his players that Green is most at fault. During a single scene I jotted down such obvious expressions as "the best year of my life," "we must never give in," "the country needs you," "everywhere is turmoil," "where is the light?" "they will fight for their rights" "a victory over ourselves," "a dream that will not die," and "seekers of a new freedom."

However lofty in sentiment, such phrases as those are not now persuasive writing. Stating as he has that his script has more to offer than the Hollywood movies, Mr. Green ignores the fact that several script writers have given the masses, in recent years, much the same ideas couched in more eloquent language.

The script also indulges in that lazy Monday morning quarter-backing by which it's pointed out several times that "dictatorship in Europe is rising" and "Napoleon is to the forefront in France." Actually, in the mid-1790's, Napoleon had just gotten started on his rise and a Napoleonic dictator-

Loy Was Williams, But Myrna's Jake

By Tex McCrary and Jinx Falkenburg

WHAT'S in a name? A lot, in the case of Myrna Loy: "Back in the early '30s, a movie star had to have an exotic name, and preferably a short one, and that's why I picked the name of 'Loy.'" Loy can be either Chinese or Welsh; when her name was in the Los Angeles phone book, her next-door neighbor in the listings was Sing Looie Loy—occupation, cook.

"And as for my first name, I was born with that one. I come from a whole family of cattle people out in Montana. And out that way, for some reason, they picked a lot of classical names for their towns—names like Helena and Carthage. My father took a trip on a cattle train to Chicago just before I was born, and on the way he saw the name of 'Myrna' on a station sign where the train stopped to take on water.

"He liked the name a lot, and when he got home, because he was the only man in the family, he had to put up quite an argument to get Myrna tagged to me when I turned out to be a girl baby. Father often told me that was the only argument he ever won with all the women in the family!"

SINCE birth, her life has been crammed with strange switches: Called the "perfect wife" on screen, she has been divorced three times. Discovered by Rudolph Valentino, she hit her peak with Fredric March in "Best Years." Always an evil Oriental type in her early movies, she makes only a movie a year now, spending most of her time working with UNESCO, trying to teach the world that no "types" are automatically evil.

And it happened so long ago, most people have forgotten it, but Myrna Loy is one of the few stars who ever escaped the prison of "type casting"—starting as an oriental vixen type she switched to a comedienne's role in the "Thin Man" movies with William Powell, and that was 16 years ago!

"Yes, a producer said to the skeptical studio: 'I know Myrna Loy and Bill Powell—in this picture, they will play themselves, and it will be a comedy. People will laugh. And besides, we can't lose much money on a B-picture like The Thin Man.

"That was a sleeper, all right . . . and what a sleeper it was!"

THE movies have opened many a door to Myrna Loy—in the White House, in Europe, and at the United Nations conference in San Francisco, where first she took an interest in UNESCO. This summer, in Europe, she found out that thousands of people had just seen "Best Years of Our Lives."

"In conference with people who do not speak your language, little things like that—seeing you in a movie—help a lot. I was . . . known. And because 'Best Years' was so true and unvarnished, offscreen, too, I was accepted even before I had a chance to speak . . . they expected me to tell the truth.

"And that word, 'truth,' is so important these days."

As we were picking up pencils and papers to leave, she asked us a question: "I'm just curious—do you know what UNESCO stands for, just the initials in the name?"

Two reporters scratched and fumbled and confessed defeat; but here's the answer now—we had to look it up:

"UNESCO — United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization . . . Russia is not a member."

Miss Blightmore Brings the Mail

New Advice on Summer Music

By Paul Hume

CITRONELLA BLIGHTMORE has brought in some mail you should see.

Her discussion of the problems and possibilities of summer music in Washington has produced letters, four of which give definite information and suggestions.

We quote from them without arguing pros and cons of any. There is rising agreement that the Watergate is no longer satisfactory for summer concerts. Deficits totaling $100,000 in the past five summers prove that it would be sensible to spend any reasonable sum for weather-protected coverage for our music. Here are the letters, all dated within a few days of Miss Blightmore's double appearance.

FROM EMERSON MEYERS, director of music of the Sesquicentennial:

"As you know I am vitally interested in such a project for I believe that the city needs such a structure above all else for its musical enterprises. I pushed mightily that the Sesqui Commission would build such a plant but unfortunately was too late since they had already decided upon the Rock Creek project . . . A makeshift site can only produce makeshift performances. And who would come any distance to a music festival in Washington knowing in advance that a rainy spell could negate their travel?

"I have done much thinking about a music shed for Washington and have come to the following conclusion:

"(a) It should be built by private enterprise on private land. (b) It should accommodate 7000 to 9000 people. (c) There should be stage facilities to accommodate everything from performances like the Berlioz Requiem to grand opera. (This is in excess of the Berkshire Shed.) (d) The shed should be a little more elaborate than the Berkshire shed because of the nature of the city. The Berkshire shed is in keeping with the summer music camp idea. (e) There should be ample parking and transportation facilities. (f) A good name would be 'The Presidential Music Pavilion.' (g) Because of the investment involved—about $250,000—the shed should be designed to accommodate sports events in April and May and similar events or auto shows during September. Sports events might include tennis, hockey, etc.

"Please note that the shed should be primarily for music with other events of secondary consideration. Imagine an audience space such as Constitution Hall with orchestra seats removed for tennis matches and you will get what I mean."

FROM J. C. Hubbard of the physics department of Catholic University comes this suggestion:

"On relatively high ground near the Catholic University, where it quite often does not rain when there are showers at Watergate, and where the humidity is demonstrably less, where also airplane noise is relatively infrequent, there are several sites for an outdoor arena or shed which are almost ideal.

"For example, on the grounds of the Soldiers' Home there are several curved sloping areas, any one of which could be made into an outdoor theater. Some of them are on higher ground and command a superb view of the Capitol. A shed could be built into one of the sites, having a protected capacity of at least 5000 people, with adjacent areas which would allow open air listening to as many more.

"An additional factor which I think ought to be considered is that plentiful facilities for traffic and parking could be developed."

FROM Howell W. Murray, chairman of the Ravinia Festival Association, Chicago, America's most successful summer musical venture financially, comes this encouraging letter. It reached us via Cody Pfanstiehl, who read parts of it on his own program over Station WCFM not long ago. Cody let us have it, as one University of Chicago man to another.

"I can well understand Washington's desire for a summer home for the National Symphony Orchestra.

"Outside of Tanglewood and Ravinia, all these concert series are held in the open and, therefore, subject to inclement weather.

"Ravinia is the oldest of them all, having started about 1905 with the quaint rustic roof with which you were familiar.

"Our fire a year ago at Ravinia, which completely destroyed our pavilion, was a blessing in disguise, for we now have a beautiful pavilion which is light, airy, and of modern design, with 3000 comfortable seats under the roof and no

Riggs' Latest Is No 'Oklahoma!'

By Mark Barron

NEW YORK, Aug. 26 (AP)—It shouldn't even be whispered to your best friend or else the word will get around, but Broadway is overflowing with a couple of shows about Texas.

There are only two shows, but the amount of verbiage on the part of the Texas characters is enough to make a dozen shows.

And one of the shows, "Borned in Texas," doesn't even dare place the setting in Texas. Instead, Playwright Lynn Riggs makes his principal character a Texan, but he brings him over into Oklahoma to make his tall speeches.

The other Texas show which is now intriguing Broadway is the musical, "Texas, Li'l Darlin'" which has just reopened at the Mark Hellinger Theater after a summer vacation of five weeks. With Kenny Delmar, Mary Jane Watson and Danny Scholl still singing the leading roles, this musical remains the hilarious burlesque it has been for many months.

"BORNED IN TEXAS" is a straight play similar in mood in that it has a principal character who has the ability to talk himself into and talk himself out of more trouble in a few minutes than few men encounter in an entire lifetime.

He is known simply as "Texas" because a Federal judge and a pair of sheriffs are just about to catch up with him and bring him to justice.

"Texas" is a tough boy and undoubtedly one who should get locked up in prison, shot by a sheriff or else strung up with the most available rope and tree. But, fleeing through the Oklahoma territory he encounters Hannie, a young housewife who is traveling westward in a covered wagon and who discovers that her marriage is a failure after she has started traveling.

"Texas" falls in love with Hannie, decides to repent his ways and even offers to surrender to the officers of the law who are pursuing him. But, by this time they are so entranced by his Texan ways of big speech that they are willing to forget his past indiscretions of the law; they are willing to forget everything if he will only continue westward and stop his fanciful tales.

Hannie, a pretty lass, proves to be his equal match and she makes him retreat with her own equal gift for florescent and vitriolic vocabulary as she tells him that if they are going to team up she is going to be boss. And, for once and probably eventually, he is silenced completely.

WHEN this play was done originally on Broadway under the title of "Roadside"—that was back in 1930—it had only a short run. Riggs has done considerable rewriting on the story, but it is still a folk tale and in a burlesque category. And it is far from the quality of his very good play, "Green Grow the Lilacs," which later became the successful musical "Oklahoma."

Anthony Quinn, as Texas, and Marsha Hunt as Hannie, head a very excellent cast in what is an attempt of the festival theater to make something out of material that is not quite up to their ambitions for a top-flight repertory theater.

Patsy Neal Gets Upstairs Fast

HOLLYWOOD.—Patricia Neal, who does an excellent job as a newspaper reporter in "Three Secrets," gets a promotion in "No Woman Knows Best." In the latter she'll play the publisher of a metropolitan daily who, believing she's lost the feel of the public pulse, hires out incognito as a reporter on a small town weekly in an effort to rediscover the facts of American life. . . . On each of Yvonne de Carlo's visits to Italy, Salvatore Giliano, the late movie-struck "Robin Hood Bandit" of Sicily, tried to arrange a meeting with her through mutual acquaintances. They never got together. But now that Giuliano's story is to be filmed in Italy, Yvonne is being paged for the part of his girl friend. The main drawback in the proposition is that, though her family name is Italian, she doesn't speak the language.

WRONG RIVER: Robert Stack joins the cast of "Rio Grande" in the role of a heavy. He'll play Mickey Rooney's racketeering brother. Incidentally, John Ford will have to get a name change for his new picture, currently called "Rio Grande" also. Benedict Bogeaus, who's producing the Rooney film, registered the title first. . . . Ford, incidentally, says he will not make another picture until next spring, when he goes to Ireland to do "The Quiet Man." John Wayne, Victor McLaglen, and Maureen O'Hara are expected to head the cast. . . . Monica Lewis, the singer, makes her film debut in "Excuse My Dust" at Metro. She'll play a Southern girl who tries to swipe Red Skelton from Sally Forrest.

BOONE BOOM: Richard Boone, former television and Broadway actor, gets the second male lead in "Kangaroo" and a term contract at Twentieth. A freakish piece of luck landed him in pictures. Elia Kazan asked for Boone's help in testing a girl for "Panic in the Street." She didn't get the job, but Robert Bassler saw the test and snagged Boone for "From the Halls of Montezuma." Lloyd Bacon caught the daily rushes on that film and moved Boone into "Call Me Mister." On the strength of his work in the two films, Darryl Zanuck signed him . . . OLNEY'S TRIO: Ferdi Hoffman, left, Judith Evelyn and Ernest Cossart in Patrick Hamilton's "Angel Street" opening its run Tuesday night at the country theater

Olney Presents Judith Evelyn In 'Angel Street' Tuesday

ONE of the theatrical triumphs of our era will be repeated this week on the Olney Theater stage, where Judith Evelyn resumes her old role of Mrs. Massingham in "Angel Street." The Patrick Hamilton melodrama opens Tuesday night.

Mrs. Massingham, which has since become a summer and winter stock staple, propelled Miss Evelyn into star billing for her third Broadway part. Her earlier roles had been unexpected flops, one by Rachel Crothers, the second produced by Gilbert Miller. Originally produced on the coast, "Angel Street" was brought to Broadway two days before Pearl Harbor and it stayed three years.

The balance of Miss Evelyn's company is equally at home in the play, Ferdi Hoffman having succeeded Vincent Price as the murderous husband and Ernest Cossart having played the shrewd Inspector Rough for two years in the Chicago company. Elfrida Derwent also will be repeating a part which kept her busy for two Chicago years, that of the housekeeper. Miss Derwent, sister of Equity's president, Clarence Derwent, has had a long career on American and British stages.

The story, which Ingrid Bergman played in the movies as "Gaslight," concerns a young wife whose husband is systematically driving her out of her mind.

Olney's future schedule includes ZaSu Pitts in "Post Road," Brian Aherne in "Dear Brutus" and Franchot Tone in "The Second Man."

Miss Holm to Open Gayety Season

Celeste Holm returns to the "live" theater this season in Louis Verneuil's new comedy, "Affairs of State," which will open the Gayety Theater's fall season September 18.

The comedy is Broadway-bound with the star whose film roles have made her an international favorite. Her work in "Gentlemen's Agreement" won her an Academy Award and her latest, "All About Eve" will be released shortly.

"Affairs of State" will have its premiere in New Haven this week, with two Philadelphia weeks before its Washington opening.

Theater Guild In New Office

The Washington office of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society is now settled in its new headquarters, room 120, Hotel Raleigh.

A series of six plays will be presented at the Gayety Theater here this year after a two-season lapse because of the closing of the National. Certain on the lists are the Lunts in "I Know My Love," Shirley Booth in "Come Back, Little Sheba," Katharine Hepburn in "As You Like It" and Maurice Evans in "The Devil's Disciple."

Cherokee Drama Draws Good Crowds

Cherokee, N. C., Aug. 26.—Success of "Unto These Hills," the new drama about the Cherokee Indians, has anticipated heavy Labor Day crowds.

The musical play is being presented in the new Mountainside Theater in the heart of the Great Smokies National Park. Cars from virtually all the States have been parked in the adjoining lot and next weekend the management anticipates top attendance for the closing performances.

Leonard Has Faith in Ideas Of Jefferson

THOMAS JEFFERSON gave his personal library to the Federal Government to establish what is now the Library of Congress. Today—124 years after his death—the man who portrays him in "Faith of Our Fathers" uses that same library to earn his master of arts degree at George Washington University.

LEONARD

Orel Leonard decided to enter the teaching profession after more than a decade spent in the theater and—quite appropriately—his master's thesis will deal with the theater of the Nation's Capital in the early 1800s. He says the third President's papers have been invaluable to him and—he adds—"reading them has given me a new insight into the dignity and wisdom of the man I have the honor to portray."

That "dignity and wisdom" is faithfully transmitted to the audiences at the new Sesquicentennial Amphitheater in Rock Creek Park and his performance is one of the highlights of the new Paul Green symphonic drama.

Leonard began his theatrical career in Minneapolis, Minn., in 1931 with a local stock company and subsequently toured with them throughout the Middle West. Like so many other actors, he entered the Federal Theater in 1934 and during the next four years appeared with that project in such vehicles as "It Can't Happen Here," "Babes in Toyland," "Hell Bent for Heaven," "The Family Upstairs," and "Criminal at Large." He also spent a season with Billy Bryant's Showboat on the Ohio River and toured with the national company of "On Borrowed Time."

He spent the war years with the Signal Corps, being discharged in 1945 as a first lieutenant, and then enrolled at George Washington. While at the G Street institution he appeared with the University Players in "Winterset," "King Lear," "The Fan" and "Dark of the Moon."

...was in the womb of history. This sort of pro... finger-pointing is always a sleazy trick on the part of any dramatist.

These Funny Foreigners

NOR IS his notion of humor ingenious. We are asked to laugh at two Frenchmen, the sculptor Ho...on and the city-planner L'Enfant. Their gestures and voices, being foreign, are presumed to be funny, a trick the better type of film has long outgrown, by the way.

...ed it is singularly inept that since this is supposed to be celebrating the 150th aniversary of the fo...ling of L'Enfant's city, the Frenchman should be ...alled on to be a comic. Inevitably, Washington's Negro manservant also is quaintly humorous, but since Mr. Green surely knows more about that than I do, I'll not nudge further into the matter.

...also must confess that for a drama observing the 150th year of a city to allude to that city in only one scene seems to me to be missing the point of the Sesqui. But to quarrel now with so basic a decision, made long ago, is pointless, so that, too, I will drop except to point out that the real highlight is the 1793 laying of the Capitol cornerstone in impressive masonic rites.

The production, after three weeks playing, is eye-filling and two factors are so outstanding as to make a visit a must. These are James Waring's superb lighting and Richard Dirksen's expertly-trained chorus.

In the vast spaces, against lovely trees, massive stone walls and impressive settings, Waring's lights play vividly from scene to scene. The cueing is smooth and Waring's work is surely a technical triumph.

Striking to Watch

AS MR. HUME pointed out last Sunday, Dirksen's music has been imaginatively drawn from Anglican hymns, plain songs and folk songs of the period. Fortunately he has drilled his chorus effectively, in tone and diction; the result is a constant joy to the ear.

Of the individual performers, it seems to me that Davie Rogers does a most impressive job as one of the commentators. Miss Rogers uses her voice well and speaks with conviction. There are many bits and few of the performers are required to hold the huge stage for long. Considering both their inexperience and their highly specialized assignments—quick, broad strokes—they are about what one would expect. Charles McClelland's Washington is as beyond him as it is beyond Mr. Green and I suspect only an exceptionally dynamic actor could touch the fundamental requirements.

Certainly all Washingtonians should see for themselves our handsome new amphitheater. The Rock Creek setting and portions of the spectacle will surely give you both pleasure and pride.

Roosevelt Center Offering Rands Play

One more evening remains on the Thursday night Court Programs presented each summer week by the district recreation department in the open air court of Roosevelt Center.

Scheduled for this Thursday evening is "The Slamatan," by Minnie Frost Rands, with Pauline Elton Oak as director. Each short play is preceded by a program of music.

Still More About Summer Music

posts to obstruct the view. The building is unique in America, and its acoustics have been pronounced perfect by all of our conductors this summer.

"In cooperation with the Western Electric and the Boom Electric & Amplifier Co. of Chicago, we have an amplifier system which is the last word in this art and which takes the music from the pavilion to the surrounding area with complete fidelity and no distortion. This amplifier system results in our outside audience very often being as great, if not greater, than the inside audience.

"The financing of such a project in Washington would seem to me to be relatively simple if properly organized. Our pavilion and its surroundings have cost $350,000, all of which have been paid for by fire insurance and $195,000 from the public without person to person solicitation. This, in itself, is a unique achievement in America so far as music is concerned.

"Our seasons operate at a deficit, which is made up by our guarantors who underwrite the deficits in amounts of $100 and up. We, therefore, know our deficit will be covered in advance of the season. At the conclusion of the season, after setting up adequate reserves, we return a percentage of the guarantees, which have varied from 25 percent to 75 percent.

"My opinion is that if you had an adequate roof, you would reduce your risk of inclement weather . . . I am sure that conductors and soloists would be more available to you because of the better working conditions.

"Such a project, soundly conceived with all the community civic pride which could be engendered, could be financed with a few good men to direct its planning and financing."

AND finally, from an excellent letter from J. G. Frain of Washington, writing on vacation in Charleston, S. C.:

"Financing should be easy as falling off a log. There isn't a banker in town that wouldn't advance the funds. After all, 14,801 donors of $190,000 is pretty convincing evidence of community support.

"But there is a point of diminishing returns and careful thought must be given to it. The National Symphony spokesmen will not be able indefinitely to ask the community for sustaining funds when the very existence of the orchestra is jeopardized by the deficits incurred by the summer series. The $35,000 deficit this summer may be the last straw in this respect.

"The cost of the shed should not be expected to be met in one year, but in not less than 10 years.

"The cost could thus be covered by (1) contributions (2) lack of summer deficits (3) greatly increased patronage due to not being rained out (4) rentals to opera and operetta and theater productions such as "Kiss Me Kate."

The Record Player

Landowska Performance Of Bach a Rare Thing

BACH: The Well-Tempered Clavier, Book One. Wanda Landowska, harpsichordist. Victor LM 1017. $4.95. (Also available on 45 r.p.m.).

In the history of recorded music, a certain few achievements stand out, and will never diminish in luster or importance. A rare addition has been made to that precious treasury: Wanda Landowska has recorded the entire Well-Tempered Clavier by Bach. This is the music often described as the "Bible of music." This is the instrument for which it was intended. And Landowska is, in the opinion of many authorities, one of the world's few greatest artists.

She is the equivalent of a Pablo Casals, a Toscanini, a Schnabel. In the realm of the keyboard works of Bach, except those written for organ, her voice can speak with an insight and knowledge of years of study plus an artistic integrity matched by few artists today.

To Landowska, Victor has given its greatest engineering skill. The tone of the harpsichord is perfect for recording. You can play these records on your machine and hear pure tone, not one trace of surface sound, and absolute fidelity to the music and playing. They are miraculous.

As for the music, it will suit your mood, whatever mood you are in. The first prelude is familiar to everyone who loves music at all. The range of emotional appeal and technical brilliance is immense. The first book, all that is released so far, contains the first eight preludes and fugues. In these, Landowska shows that unique phrasing, rich sense of color, and dazzling fleetness in ornaments and melodic lines that place her alone in her eminence.

Regardless of your musical preference, this is a record that we think you will want, and ought to have. It may very probably be voted the greatest record of the year.

OPERATIC AIRS, and German Lieder by Schubert and Strauss. Ellabelle Davis, soprano, with New Symphony Orchestra under Braithwaite, and Hubert Greenslade, pianist. London Decca LPS 181, $4.85.

Ellabelle Davis' recent Decca release of spirituals is followed by two seldom heard arias, and five familiar songs by Schubert and Strauss. Schubert's Wohin?, Wanderer's Nachtlied, and Lachen und Weinen, are backed by arias from Don Carlos by Verdi, and La Wally, by Catalani. The two Strauss songs are Befreit, and Allerseelen.

Miss Davis has a sensitive voice for Lieder, and a rich imagination in phrasing. Also she is musician enough to sing without undue emotionalizing, and with honest attention to text and mood.

This is the best domestic recording of the great Befreit, having more steadiness of tone than Marian Anderson's fairly recent version, and more sense of line from start to finish. Allerseelen is good but not up to the old Flagstad account.

The opera arias sound well except for the highest notes, but they do not move with inner conviction as much as with careful preparation. The recording is superb.

Mozart Opera At Watergate

MOZART'S "Cosi fan tutte" will be sung at the Watergate next Saturday night.

This ambitious job is being taken on by the Grass Roots Opera Company of North Carolina. They will sing the great score in English, with piano accompaniment.

The project is being sponsored jointly by the North Carolina State Society, and the Sesquicentennial Commission.

Hans Kindler's Programs with the National Symphony Orchestra during his 19 years as conductor of that organization are now available in book form. Copies may be secured by writing John Russell Mason, Librarian, George Washington University, Washington 6.

The only scheduled performance by the Faith of Our Fathers chorus, outside of their nightly duties up at the big green pageant grounds, will be their singing this afternoon at Washington Cathedral.

Winner in the Sesqui contest for a commemorative march is Alfred P. Zamborano of Cranston, R. I. His march will be given its first performance by the Marine Band at a concert to be announced shortly.

Mitropoulos Invading Realm Of Comics, Singers, Chorines

NEW YORK.—No one had ever thought seriously of asking one of the country's finest symphony orchestras to perform on the stage of a Broadway movie theater between showings of the feature film until the Roxy Theater did, and certainly no great symphony orchestra considered accepting until Dimitri Mitropoulos took hold of the New York Philharmonic Symphony.

At the beginning there was some feeling that Mitropoulos, who supported the idea from the first, was leading the great orchestra astray.

IN HIS enthusiasm for the idea, Mitropoulos carried all arguments before him. The orchestra, under Mitropoulos' direction, will perform on the Roxy stage for 45 minutes four times a day for two weeks, starting Friday. But since, on his own responsibility, Mitropoulos has accepted the risk of this extraordinary engagement just at the start of his career as conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, and since his decision has shocked a section of his music public, he deserves a hearing.

He summarized the root of his idea as follows:

"The ivory tower goes now to the public. And the tower door is open."

Behind this brief statement, however, lies much of Mitropoulos' present thinking on social, political and foreign problems, which he relates to his work as a musician with eloquence and sincerity. To interpret Mitropoulos' main thesis: However wrongly it is pursued by the Soviet Union, the world struggle between East and West has its basis in the legitimate desire of the worker for expression. The argument has developed over what means to use to bring about the fulfillment of this desire. When the Philharmonic Symphony voluntarily appears on the stage of the Roxy, it has made a "gesture" to recognize this desire and to satisfy it, and no one has compelled it to do so.

"REGARDLESS of how much the Russians are our enemies," he said, "the fact remains that they have a task of serving the people. But their system, of course, has worked out badly because, for one thing, they have forbidden the composer freedom of expression in his art.

"We should learn from our enemies. It is only a stupid man who refuses to learn from his enemies. Russia brought about a revolution, but it has become a tragic revolution. . . . Today we cannot ignore the existence of the common man, who makes it possible for us to have the comforts of life. He is entitled to his rights, not only in financial wealth but also in spiritual wealth. This is the democratic ideal."

Eddie (WTOP) Gallaher ON RECORDS

THERE was a time when names like Bing Crosby, Perry Como and Frankie Laine were no better known than that of the fellow next door; then suddenly each of them was touched with the magic wand of fame and success. It's interesting to speculate on who will be the next new singing star to join the ranks of the established public favorites. Those on the inside of show business have tagged three young guys as future stars, and I thought that, if I were to mention their names for you today, you might enjoy following their careers.

One of them has an advantage over his confreres in that he has a hit record currently on the market. I refer to Don Cherry, the soloist with Victor Young on his Decca record of "Mona Lisa." Don, I found on a recent trip to New York, has a ready smile and a Southern drawl which should endear him to the ladies, and an ability to shoot golf in the championship class, which should make him more popular than most crooners with the men.

Another contender for future stardom is Peter Hanley. Pete is slated for important things with RCA Victor, the company which brought Perry Como to the fore. He is currently being featured with Hugo Winterhalter in his record of "My Destiny," and is also the production singer at New York's Copacabana. Like his two namesakes, Peter Lind Hayes and Peter Donald, Pete sports a brush cut, and he has a singing voice which wins my personal nomination as the best among the three potential headliners.

NUMBER three in the inner circle for future stardom is Eddie Fisher. Fisher, an Eddie Cantor discovery from Philadelphia, was completely unknown a few months ago when he made his debut for Bluebird records, and has come a remarkably long way since then.

A Cinderella story usually helps in establishing a newcomer with the public, and Eddie Fisher has his. It seems that Fran Warren was advertised to open recently at Buddy Miller's Riviera, one of suburban New York's finest show cases for talent. At the last minute Fran developed kidney trouble and was rushed to the hospital, and Eddie Fisher, although virtually unknown, was signed to substitute for her.

Eddie, with his boyish personality, jet black hair and piercing eyes, was an immediate hit with the Riviera customers, and suddenly found that he was being enthusiastically touted by the columnists. Today he has an RCA Victor contract and is appearing at the New York Paramount Theater. By coincidence both he and Don Cherry have chosen the same song, the beautiful revival ballad, "Thinking of You," as their latest release.

IT MAY seem curious to some that, with fine artists like Phil Brito and Jerry Cooper waiting for years to receive a break, the major record companies will favor relatively inexperienced talent over the many veterans in the singing field in attempting to establish new public favorites.

The reason for this is that the public is constantly eager for fresh personalities; and it is often easier for a newcomer to get a chance at the brass ring than it is for an old-timer, who may be a better performer but who somehow missed his opportunity with the passing of the years. This may appear unfair to many talented entertainers; but it is a ray of hope to youngsters who wish to enter show business.

Someone as yet unknown, perhaps reading these words, may be touched with the magic wand and become the next Don Cherry, Peter Hanley or Eddie Fisher, and very possibly a future Vaughn Monroe, Vic Damone or Dick Haymes.

Eddie Gallaher is heard on WTOP every day except Sunday on the Sundial, 7:45 to 9:00 a.m.; Moondial, 11:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

Awards Made By Kiln Club

THE Kiln Club of Washington made its own award of merit by vote of the membership in the ceramic show at the National Collection of Fine Arts of the Smithsonian. The following is a report by one of the members:

"First went to Charles Arrott for a large wheel-thrown platter with a triple glaze in blues and browns, a piece which shows an experimental spirit in the use of glazes. Second went to Florence Bessom Higgs for the ecclesiastical scripture. "Food for the Multitude" (reproduced in this section last Sunday). Third, to Helen O'Brien for a wheel-thrown bowl with a wood ash, reduction glaze, in black and dull yellow green. Her skill in handling materials was much commented. In only one case, the second place, did a rating go to a piece previously selected for an award by the judges. Perhaps the Kiln Club members, being all craftsmen themselves, selected the difficult and experimental rather than the colorful or the decorative.

"In the first week of the exhibit visitors from 34 States and eight foreign countries signed our guest book at the museum. The demonstrations on the potters wheel are jammed every day. Strange that people are still fascinated by a machine that has been used for over 4000 years."

Many residents of Washington are included in the membership of the Rehoboth Art League at Rehoboth Beach, Del., which now has a roster of 400. This summer 125 pupils enrolled for the art courses. Current show is an exhibition of portraits by Alfred Jonniaux, academic painter whose work has been shown in the Capital.

Corcoran Planning Sloan Show

Eastman Johnson's "A Ride for Liberty," in the American Processional show at the Corcoran gallery. The oil was done about 1862-63

By Jane Watson Crane

THE Corcoran has announced the dates for its major exhibitions to be held following the close of its Sesquicentennial show, "American Processional" on December 17, 1950.

The first will be an exhibition of modern British painting from December 29 to January 19 of the New Year. The Fifth Annual Area show, limited to artists of Washington and vicinity, is scheduled from January 13 to February 19. The Biennial, a national event in the art world, will be held from March 13 to April 30. The exhibition, twenty-second in the series, is open to all artists living in the United States and its possessions, with prize awards totalling $5200. Works in oil, oil-tempera or encaustic, not previously shown in Washington, are eligible.

The 1951 area exhibition will have as jurors Mrs. Adelyn Breeskin, director of the Baltimore Museum of Art, for painting, David Smith, New York sculptor, for work in his medium. Juries for the Biennial have not as yet been announced.

ALSO scheduled for 1951 at the Corcoran is a retrospective one-man show by John Sloan, sole surviving member of the famous "Eight," now entering his eightieth year. The Corcoran and the Phillips in Washington own some of the best of his paintings and graphic works and the former has a sensitive portrait of him as a young man by his colleague, Robert Henri.

Sloan lived in Philadelphia during the early part of his life; at the age of 16 he was responsible for the support of his family. Working as a bookseller, he studied art at night. He was one of the first of the "artist-reporters," turning out sketches for the Philadelphia Inquirer and later for the New York Herald.

Sticking close to realism until he turned in later years to figure studies, the volume of Sloan's work is an extraordinary human document, one of the most revealing records extant of life in an American city. Sloan was organizer of the big Independents show, an annual event in New York, and its president for many years; he helped to bring the first exhibition of modern art from Europe to New York in 1913. He is still active in the Art Students League.

IT IS regrettable that the catalogue for the American Processional exhibition has been so long delayed, for there are many items which rouse curiosity that the captions do not satisfy. The casual visitor has no idea of the amount of research that went into this project, or the lengths to which the staff went to obtain the material.

With the coming of fall and a catalogue to guide to visitor, "American Processional," should have a second debut. The show is a gold mine and worth the application it requires for real enjoyment.

ON VIEW at the Plaza Theater is a short subject produced by the French Government, which tells the history of France in the year 1848 entirely through the device of moving a motion picture camera over the graphic work of such artists as Daumier, Gavarni, and Decamps. This led us to thinking of the possibilities for American material to be used in a similar way. The Revolution, for example, through the eyes of Peale, Trumbull and others who were artist-reporters of a kind in their time; the Civil War, through Homer, Eastman Johnson, and the rest; life in Manhattan as seen by John Sloan, or the Missouri region by Bingham and Benton. As American Processional reveals, the artists have been both recorders and interpreters of American life and the possibilities inherent in their contribution have still not been as fully and skillfully exploited as they might be.

eral Communications Commission for public use.

Doctors have said that the color fidelity of this system is so real as to be "downright spooky," and are in a rosy glow because they've discovered that color lends texture and third dimension to television. As a teaching technique for medical students—and full-fledged doctors getting a brushup—it has been called the greatest advance in medical teaching in history by Harold Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania, which embraces America's oldest medical school. This is where CBS' color TV was first tried out for surgical demonstrations.

Better Than Amphitheater

WHEN DOCTORS found that they could see more by watching the color television screen as it picked up pictures directly over the operating area than they'd been able to see even standing at a fellow surgeon's elbow in the operating room, they decided the old amphitheater would have to go. The University of Pennsylvania's new hospital will have at least two operating rooms equipped for color television pickups, and several viewing rooms for student doctors and nurses to watch the masters cope with emergencies as well as routine procedures.

Col. William Norvell, head of television sales for Remington Rand, predicts that medical schools will be chief users of Vericolor for a long time. The older black and white equipment will probably suffice for such installations as the one to be made soon at the University of Minnesota to permit students of teaching methods to watch classroom procedure without disturbing the pupils.

Since color TV will cost more—up to three times more than the cheapest black and white installations and about a third more than the more elaborate black and white installations—schools may have to be budget conscious in the matter. But Dr. Peter Goldmark, who developed this color system for CBS, feels universities will see the advantages of buying color equipment and using it for a variety of subjects. Since it is light and portable, there's no reason not to use it for several departments. Dr. Goldmark sees it for use in teaching biochemistry, pharmacology, dentistry, zoology and other fields related to medicine, also chemistry, physics, art, botany, chrystallography, geology and cartography where color is essential, and for any scientific field in which it's nicer to be able to distinguish two objects from one another by their colors than by guessing about a muddy mess of grays as is the case with black and white television.

Some Resistance

IN THE practical arts, there's cooking, interior decorating, commercial art, costume designing, practical nursing and cosmetology to start with. When the units go down in price, there may even be classes in soda jerking with the cherry on top.

Remington Rand, selling black and white equipment, met with resistance everywhere color television had been seen. The University of Chicago, anxious for TV, postponed purchase of it until color was ready. The University of Kansas Medical School, equipped with black and white by Remington Rand, will be re-equipped with color as soon as color equipment is ready.

(The story of how Remington Rand and CBS got together comes in several versions, but roughly it goes this way. Dr. Goldmark asked Colonel Norvell if he wasn't tired of having color thrown in his face every time he tried to sell black and white TV. The colonel admitted he was, "Why not get together?" suggested each to the other. Since CBS has no manufacturing facilities, although it supervised manufacture of equipment for Smith, Kline & French Laboratories for the medical convention demonstrations, it was as pleased to get the arrangement as was Remington Rand. This marks the first real financial return CBS will get on what has already been an estimated five-million-dollar investment in developing the system and arguing its merits before the FCC.)

Matter of Teachers

EVENTUALLY, for a school which has a unit installed, it's going to be cheaper to have one teacher talking to several hundred students (a number of receivers can be attached to accommodate many students) than it will be to have a number of teachers, each with his 30 or 40 students.

The initial use will probably be within one school, but ultimately, using the intercity coaxial cables, there may be series of guest lectures. Maybe the Big Five in New England will set up a series on geography of a Friday afternoon, with the top prof at each school offering an every-five-weeks' talk.

Teaching is only one of the exciting uses for color television. The Army Ordnance Department is already using black and white TV to guide its robot hands in defusing live bombs, while the men stand safely at a distance. With color, they could see better, and also see a few other things. At Los Alamos, and other plants doing dangerous work in radioactive substances, or where dangerous chemicals must be used, color television may reduce accidents to a minimum.

Commercially, it's bound to be used to flash fashion shows and luscious cakes to every floor of a department store.

Business Uses

AT LONG range, it's sure to be used to let the manager of the Toledo plant see the fabrics available in the main plant in New York, and to let the managers o the six branch offices "get together" once a week to study charts and graphs, materials and advertising layouts. Since color television has the illusion of every dimension and sense except touch, it will even give the executives a sense of being with one another even when they actually have no concrete material to show each other. (For after the conference drinks together, some other arrangement will have to be made.)

In the end, these intercity conference calls will not be too expensive. The savings in plane and train fare, the fact that some of these plants will already have color TV installations for intraplant use cuts the cost. The equipment might just be rented for an hour from some enterprising concern which might buy a unit and hire a hall and just rent conference facilities to various groups.

Some day you may visit with Aunt Minnie in Omaha on the automatic color television installation into which you drop quarters. Buyers in Chicago may shop the New York garment district by color television.

Some day the head man of an organization may interview job applicants for his hinterland plants over the direct TV wire. And some day the head man may hold Monday morning inspection of his top executives throughout the country to be sure they are all present and accounted for at 9 a. m.

But right now—before the snow falls, in all probability, color television will be installed in some university.

Ezra Stone . . . will be "Henry" again when the "Aldrich Family" returns from vacation Thursday at 8 p. m. on WRC-NBC

Some Collectors Corner Paper Shades and Varieties

By William M. Stuart

THE Postoffice Department does not consider printings of regular or commemorative postage stamps new issues. It is well known that on an order of 115 million stamps a huge number is not printed at one time. At each printing there are different shades, even the quality of paper being considered. New stamps are simply replacement of stock. The current issue now in use was first ordered in 1938, but stamps of practically every denomination since then have been printed.

STUART

Shades, various qualities of paper and like varieties are not new stamps and not one of these additional values are considered "another variety." The supply of stamps ordered depends upon the volume of business, but the Bureau of Engraving and Printing usually supplies additional stamps on request.

There are philatelists who collect shades and varieties of paper, as well as dots and dashes quite frequently seen on stamps, yet no single stamp coming within that category is considered a new issue. When stamps are needed new orders of ink and paper are necessary to fill such orders, but stamps so produced are not considered additional stamps or even reprints.

FINAL details for the annual convention of the American Philatelic Society to be held at the Shoreham Hotel, from September 5 through September 9, have been completed and it promises to be one of the largest gatherings of the society. Outstanding will be the exhibition of more than 350 frames arranged by Svend Yort. A feature of the affair will be the visit on Thursday, September 7, at 1 p. m. to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, when the group will be guests of Director Hall.

The 3-cent commemorative stamp honoring the 100th anniversary of the admission of California to statehood will be released on September 9 at Sacramento. The stamp is yellow in color and the initial printing order is for 115 million stamps.

Air mail service will be inaugurated on August 30 at Utica-Rome, N. Y., on Route A. M. 94 under a temporary exemption of the Civil Aeronautics Board. There will be no official cachet, as both cities have previously had air mail service.

At the first day sale of the 3-cent Judicial National Capital Sesquicentennial stamp here on August 2, 324,007 covers were canceled and 511,518 stamps sold, and at the Philatelic Agency on the same day 657,324 stamps were sold.

Air mail service will be inaugurated on August 31 over segment No. 6 of Route A. M. 82, from Mission-McAllen-Edinburg, Tex., via the intermediate points Alice, Corpus Christi, Beeville, Tex., to the terminal points San Antonio and Victoria, Tex. Special cachets will be provided.

AN AUCTION was held at the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., on Tuesday evening. Ellen Denison acted as auctioneer and 75 lots were disposed of. Dr. M. G. Skinner reported on the S. P. A., convention held last week in Philadelphia. Another session will be held on Tuesday at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw.

First Redskins' Game Wednesday

The season's first broadcast of the Washington Redskins will be heard at 10 p. m. Wednesday over WMAL. The game will be played in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas between the Redskins and the Detroit Lions.

Harry Wismer will call the plays with Jim Gibbons, sports director of WMAL, doing the color.

This season's Redskins games will be broadcast by WMAL to a special network of East Coast stations.

The schedule follows:

October 1, Redskins vs. Pittsburgh Steelers, from Washington; October 8, Redskins vs. New York Giants, from Washington; October 15, Chicago Cardinals vs. Cleveland Browns, from Cleveland; October 22, Redskins vs. Chicago Cardinals, from Washington; October 29, Redskins vs. Philadelphia Eagles, from Philadelphia; November 5, Redskins vs. New York Giants, from New York; November 12, Redskins vs. Philadelphia Eagles, from Washington; November 19, Redskins vs. Cleveland Browns, from Cleveland; November 26, Redskins vs. Baltimore Colts, from Washington; December 3, Redskins vs. Pittsburgh Steelers, from Pittsburgh, and December 10, Redskins vs. Cleveland Browns, from Washington.

WMAL-TV to Show 'Red' Film Tonight

By special arrangement with the Department of Defense, a documentary film, "Communism," produced by the Armed Forces Information and Education Program, will be shown at 8 p. m. tonight over ABC and WAML-TV.

This film was used for the instruction of all military personnel in the aims and methods of communism and the threat it offers to democracy.

Big Shows Ready To Return to Work

By Syd Kronish

NEW YORK (AP).—Interested in keeping a tab on your favorite radio programs? Most of the top notch shows and stars are getting ready to return after a summer vacation. CBS and NBC have announced their pending fall lineups. These two networks also are getting ready to continue their "all out war" to win new listeners as well as keep the old ones.

Just grab a scissors and cut this out so you can keep it for future reference.

First the CBS list and returning dates: Meet Corliss Archer returns tonight. August 28—Bob Hawk Show, Houseparty with Art Linkletter, Radio Theater, Godfrey's Talent Scouts, My Friend Irma, Club 15, Jack Smith Show and the Beulah Show. My Favorite Husband—September 2; Our Miss Brooks—September 3; Mr. and Mrs. North—September 5; Jack Benny—September 10; Bob Crosby—September 21; Amos and Andy, Red Skelton—October 1; Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy—October 8.

Here's the NBC list: American Album of Familiar Music—tonight; Cavalcade of America—August 29; Aldrich Family—August 31; Father Knows Best—September 7; Quiz Kids—Theater Guild of Air—$64 Question—September 10; Halls of Ivy—September 13; Groucho Marx—September 20; People Are Funny—September 19; Fibber McGee and Molly—September 19; High Adventure—September 24; Bob Hope Show—October 3; Life of Riley—October 6; Dennis Day—Judy Canova—October 7.

AFTER ten years as "Take It Or Leave It," the NBC radio show which made the "$64 question" a household term will assume that name. This becomes effective with the broadcast of Sunday evening, September 3 at 10.

Jack Paar will continue as master of ceremonies. Paar is the talented young fellow who was a favorite entertainer with servicemen in the South Pacific area during World War II.

FAY EMERSON places her "old" dresses in a "lending library." It's not an ordinary lending library where a person can borrow a book for a few days. Faye's library is a special one.

Says Faye, "since the life of one of my dresses or ensembles is one TV performance I figure that maybe some young TV actresses trying to make a hit before the cameras could use the clothes to good advantage—for free."

FAYE

"So," smiles Faye, "I called some of my female colleagues doing television shows and asked them if they would like to contribute to this lending library. They all were as enthusiastic about the idea as I—and there you have it."

The winsome blonde with the magnetic charm will soon switch from NBC to CBS. Her new show will be seen thrice weekly, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, from 7:45 to 8 p. m. starting September 26.

Although Faye is naturally a big favorite with the menfolk, her mail reveals that women comprise the greatest number of her fans and televiewers.

"I never speak down to my audience. Neither do I speak up to them. I just speak right at them—as a true friend of long standing would do."

Ft. Wash'gton Trip Heads Parks Slate

NATIONAL Capital Parks today is sponsoring a historical tour at Fort Washington, Md., a rock walk at the National Zoological Gardens, and horse-drawn canal barge trips.

Historian Donald J. Caulfield will conduct the tour at Fort Washington. The present fort was built between 1814 and 1824 near the site of an earlier fort destroyed in 1814 during the British attack on Washington. Chartered buses will leave 1416 F st. at 1:45 p. m. and return about 5:30. Persons arriving by private car may join the tour at 2:30 p. m. at the sally port entrance to the fort, which can be reached via Nichols ave. and South Capitol st. to Indian Head rd. (Md. State hwy. 224), thence right 5½ miles below the District line to signs leading to the fort.

Geological history to be read from the rocks will be discussed by Dr. Ray S. Bassler of the National Museum staff during the walk to begin at the Harvard st. entrance to the Zoo at 3 p. m.

The "Canal Clipper," horse-drawn barge, will leave Lock 3, on 30th st. one block south of M st., at 2 p. m. The return trip from Lock 5 at Brookmont will be made at 4 p. m. Lock 5 is near Stop 24 on the Cabin John carline. Round-trip and one-way tickets can be purchased at the barge.

Trailside exhibits at Great Falls, Md., will be on display from 1 to 6 p. m. Naturalists on duty will explain the specimens of plant and animal life and geological formations and will conduct nature walks for groups upon request.

Tours to Great Smokies Reported in Demand

Vacation tours by glass-roofed motor coach, through the cool uplands of the Great Smoky Mountain area of Tennessee and North Carolina, are in great demand again for the summer and fall months, according to Norman Eldredge, director of motor coach cruises for Thos. Cook & Son.

Cook's are offering a series of nine-day inclusive tours, starting any day during the summer months and through to October 22, to help meet this demand, Eldredge added.

Whistle Stopping

Flying With Beasts, You Gotta Take Care

By Orval Hopkins

ANOTHER of the National Geographic Society's impeccable news releases has come my way. Headed "Beasts, Fish Join Birds, Invade Air Travel Lanes," it reports that "The air travel market is booming with lizards and boa constrictors, cows and bears, race horses and frogs . . . an impressive fleet of airborne Noah's Arks is carrying everything from chickens to tropical fish, mice and monkeys."

This is not only interesting but the truth, as I can affirm, having ridden an airplane with a whole covey of assorted beasts and fowls one time in Hawaii. We had on board, as I recall it now, one lynx, several wolves, some hyenas and a number of chicken known as "island quail." The trip was entirely uneventful with the exception of one minor casualty which, of course, happened to me.

This lynx was a curious creature. She purred and pushed her shoulder into me and even attempted to climb into my lap. Then when I moved to take her in my arms, she scratched me. Mobile, that's what. The wolves meanwhile, were slavering with varying success over the quail, and the hyenas giggled foolishly at the whole performance.

We landed without further mishap and had a fine time on Maui. Air travel, as the National Geographic Society says, is certainly making strides.

NEW FALL rates, effective September 10, are announced by the Cavalier at Virginia Beach: $12 per day per person, American plan. Sally Sloane, publicity person down there, writes that Bernie Cummins and his orchestra are presently working there and that Shep Fields and his bunch are coming in for a four-day stand over Labor Day.

SUNSET LIMITED, the Southern Pacific's new streamliner, now has been in service one week between Los Angeles and New Orleans. It's the first streamliner to operate between the two cities and makes the 2070-mile run in 42 hours either way. "With its Daylights and Larks on the West Coast linked to the new Sunset Limited, Southern Pacific will have streamliner service all the way between Portland, Oreg., and New Orleans, a distance of more than 3000 miles," SP says proudly.

MYRTLE BEACH, S. C., has a man named H. T. Willcox, who writes and says, "In your resort and travel section so many of the leading resorts are listed to direct the traveler or tourist in enabling them to find some good place to visit. However, friends of mine in Washington inform me that nothing is ever seen about Myrtle Beach, S. C., which, undoubtedly, is the fastest growing coastal resort city-in-the-making in the Southeast. Half way between New York and Miami, we are having increasing numbers of tourists, because we have so much to offer in the way of hotel and motorcourt accommodations, as well as recreational and entertainment facilities." So. Is forgiven, Willcox?

How to Keep Out of Worst Road Snarls

THERE'S a reward waiting for the man who solves the weekend bumper-to-bumper traffic problem, but until he comes along here are a few tips to keep you out of the worst snarls:

1. The shortest road may not be quickest, especially if it's a well traveled highway. Check your map for back roads which may be less crowded.

2. Traffic is usually heaviest on Saturdays from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m., and on Sundays from 5 to 9 p. m. Avoid those hours with as much extra margin of time as possible.

3. Have your car serviced with gasoline and oil before you start so you won't have to stop during heavy traffic hours.

4. Many veteran weekend travelers eat a heavy breakfast and carry a light lunch in the car to avoid wasting the noon hour in a restaurant.

5. In strange country, a simple inquiry about local traffic habits often will give you valuable information on the best hours and routes, to avoid jams.

There's no sure-fire cure for avoiding all weekend traffic—but a little head work on your part will help a lot.—CAROL LANE.

Pennsylvania Boasts 11 Spectacular Caves

Pennsylvania, widely known for its summer vacation attractions, offers adventure in 11 of the Nation's most spectacular caves.

These underground caverns are: Wonderland Cavern, in Bedford County; Crystal Cave in Berks County; Penn's Cave, Centre County; Woodward Cave, Centre County; Indian Echo Cave, Dauphin County; Baker Caverns, Franklin County; Historic Indian Cave, Huntingdon County; Lincoln Caverns, Huntingdon County; Alexandria Caverns, Miffin County; Onyx Cave, Berks County, and Lost River Caverns, Northampton County.

Steep Route Has Perfect Safety Record

THE WORLD'S steepest railway begins at the top of the Royal Gorge, one of the many scenic wonders for which the State of Colorado is famed, and ends 1350 feet below, where the winding Arkansas River rushes along beside the tracks of the Rio Grande Railroad.

Equipment of this perpendicular railway consists of two streamline cars carrying 21 passengers each. The weight of each car is 48000 pounds. Not only is the little cliff-climbing railway a feat of man's imagination but it is also one of safe operation. Not one accident of any kind has occurred since its beginning June 14, 1931. The grade is 45 degrees and power machines and latest safety devices were especially designed for its use.

Down at the little station in the bottom of the gorge, passengers step out into a weird world of magnificent beauty, of sheer canyon walls 1100 feet straight up which hem them in and picture the untamed wildness the Indians knew.

A gliding Rio Grande train comes into view and stops. Here more tourists join the visitors who have roller-coasted down the incline—visitors who reluctantly leave these cathedral halls, their spires soaring up to form the jagged rim above, when their conductor yells, "All aboard," and the baby streamliner heads back up the canyon wall.

Barracks on Display

Clinton, N. J.—Restored and furnished Revolutionary War barracks, which housed British, Hessian and American troops at various times during the War for Independence are open to the public here on weekdays.

Trout Season Extended

West Virginia's current trout fishing season has been extended by the State Conservation Commission to continue through Labor Day. The commission also announced that plans are underway to double the present trout production for stocking purposes.

Pennsylvania Offers Lures To Travelers

HARRISBURG, Pa.—In Pennsylvania you can deviate from heavily traveled highways and motor leisurely along the byways to historic sites, scenic views, picturesque lakes, streams and waterfalls, says the State Department of Commerce vacation and recreation bureau.

Thousands of vactionists, recreational travelers, nature lovers and camera fans, now enjoying summer outings in the Keystone State, are finding increased pleasure in out-of-the-way places.

There are nearly 50,000 miles of improved secondary highways in the State that are uncrowded so that motorists may drive pleasantly along through unforgettable scenery to interesting places. This system of secondary roadways complements the Keystone State's 41,000 miles of modern highways and main thoroughfares.

Pennsylvania has hundreds of charming resort hotels and inns so that no matter where you travel in Pennsylvania, you are sure to find pleasant accommodations at convenient rates. For the outdoorsmen who like to "rough it" on a vacation there are cabins available in many forested sections of the State.

Following autumn along the many interesting roadways of Pennsylvania the motoring vacationist will be rewarded with views of resplendent beauty symbolic of the changing season when the green landscape is dotted with the reds and oranges and yellows, a picture no artists' brushes have been able to capture in all their beauty. Then, too, when you travel the highways and byways of Penn's Woods you're generally moving over the trails of frontier yesteryears.

Englishman Writes Good Guide to Paris

PARIS TODAY. By Eric Whelpton (Macmillan; $2.75). This author is an Englishman, who only has to cross the Channel . . . and he much prefers boat and train to plane . . . in order to reach Paris. But except for a couple of pages about customs and travel, he has written a very practical guide which will be of as much value to Americans as to Englishmen.

It contains useful information about restaurants, hotels, buses and so on, and also about public monuments, museums, churches, historical sites; and it suggests excursions to nearby places like Versailles, Fontainebleau and Chantilly. I like it largely, however, because it is so sympathetic and understanding. The author lived in the French capital as a child and has gone back there regularly; by showing us why he enjoys Paris, he persuades us we'd enjoy it, too. It's a tribute as much as it is a guidebook. —W. G. R.

Modern Yacht Basin

Forked River, N. J.—The modern yacht basin, operated by the State Department of Commerce and Navigation, provides facilities here for one of the best-patronized fishing fleets along the Jersey shore.

Air-Conditioned Trains in India

The railways of India and Pakistan now operate air-conditioned cars on a number of their main line trains, according to Thos. Cook & Son. These cars are available daily on trains between Karachi and Lahore, and also between Bombay and Delhi. Air-conditioned cars operate on odd dates of the month from Bombay to Madras. On the Bombay-Calcutta run air-conditioned service is available on Mondays and Fridays from Bombay and from Calcutta on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Other twice-weekly services operate on the Calcutta-Delhi route.

THE ATLANTIS: She set new all-time record on her voyage from Indonesia to Holland.

British ship sets a new kind of maritime record . . .

WHEN THE BRITISH SHIP Atlantis put into Amsterdam, Holland, last month, her log book was fat, her laundry bins crammed, her five medical officers exhausted and her skipper was convinced that he'd been living in a nightmare.

It had been no ordinary voyage for the Atlantis. It had been a race with 62 storks. And all 62 storks won! On the 28-day voyage from Indonesia, the big birds had left exactly 62 bundles on the Atlantis' decks. There was even a set of twins.

For the Atlantis, it was a maritime record. Whenever salty tongues wagged she would be remembered as the "Seagoing Cradle."

BASKETS for ship-born babies are readied by Netherlands' soldiers as the vessel docks in Amsterdam.

PAUL PARNES AND MODEL: He wanted to be a doctor . . .

Man with an Idea!

CAN CLOTHES BE MEDICINE?

ALMOST EVERY YOUNGSTER decides at an early age what he's going to be. One week, it's a fireman; a little later, it's a cowboy.

Not so with dress designer Paul Parnes. From the time he was able to tote around a little black bag, he was dead set on becoming a doctor. All through school he never wavered. It wasn't until he was half way through Bellevue Medical School that he changed his mind.

One day he heard a doctor turn away a woman patient. She was drably dressed and dispirited.

"There's nothing wrong with her physically," the M.D. told Parnes later. "What she needs is something to perk up her morale. A new hat, maybe. If you look drab, you feel drab!"

A Good Designer Is a Doctor

Right then and there Parnes saw opportunities for preventive medicine of a very special kind! He'd start helping people look well on the outside, so they'd feel better within. His professors in medical school were disappointed; Seventh Avenue scoffed but he made a success of a career he didn't expect.

Parnes' idea of "fashion therapy" also proved to be smart business. Today he is one of the nation's leading fashion stylists and manufacturers of $7,000,000 worth of dresses and suits each year.

"When a woman tells me she feels wonderful in a dress," says Parnes, "I maintain that the man or woman who designed it was a doctor!"

ANY CAVITIES LAST YEAR?
CHANGE YOUR TOOTH PASTE

Millions have changed to Ammoniated tooth paste for fewer cavities—less tooth decay!

"NO CAVITIES AT LAST CHECK"

Mrs. Rose Kovel, 8310-12 35th Avenue, Jackson Heights, N. Y., who has three children says, "My whole family has been using Amm-i-dent regularly with wonderful results. Our rates of new cavity formation have steadily decreased, until at our last check-up, none of us had a single new cavity! You can't do better than that!"

Mr. Benjamin Lucatorto, 1423 Ficley Avenue, Bronx, N. Y., says, "My son and I have been watching the results of our faithful use of Amm-i-dent. At every six months' check we found we had fewer cavities, but last time we were delighted to hear our dentist report, 'No new cavities for either of you!' I call that real results."

These people used Amm-i-dent during clinical research.

Save your children unnecessary tooth decay

Surely you want to do everything in your power to help your children have stronger, healthier teeth—and avoid the pain of cavities. Think of the pain and expense you might have been saved if Amm-i-dent had been discovered when you were a child!

Children love the clean, pleasant flavor of Amm-i-dent—both toothpaste and the powder. And, remember, you can depend on Amm-i-dent, for Amm-i-dent has been tested and commended by Parents' Magazine's Consumer Service Bureau.

Amm-i-dent Formula Proven to Reduce Decay with 4 out of 5 Users!

If you are using a non-ammoniated toothpaste, and yet hope to reduce tooth decay, bear this in mind: you are missing the single greatest advance in home dental care to come along in years—the ammoniated dentifrice—Amm-i-dent.

Dental scientists have proven that Amm-i-dent's ammoniated formula reduced decay by almost half, in the case of four out of five people who used it in tooth powder form. This wonderful formula is now available in a delightful toothpaste—containing the same anti-decay ingredients.

Leading dental journals reported these results. Magazines like Reader's Digest, Time, Newsweek investigated—wrote exciting articles. And the dentists of America made Amm-i-dent their No. 1 choice.

So if you are using today the same toothpaste you have used for years, your toothpaste is not ammoniated. It can do no more to prevent cavities than it could last year. So don't delay. Change your toothpaste! Change to Amm-i-dent Toothpaste! Remember, in 1949—more people changed to Amm-i-dent than to all other brands of toothpaste combined.

Amm-i-dent and your dentist!

Although Amm-i-dent's ammoniated formula is the most effective known for fighting tooth decay, no dentifrice can guarantee absolute freedom from cavities, nor can it repair damage already done.

The professional help and guidance of your dentist is necessary for the complete guardianship of your dental health. Make it a rule to visit your dentist regularly for a check-up.

Famous Model Praises Amm-i-dent

"My mouth never felt so clean—my smile never looked so bright," writes Wendy Wells, a New York Model, after using Amm-i-dent to safeguard her pretty smile.

Yes, Amm-i-dent is a wonderful toothpaste. It tastes delightful, cleans superbly and checks oral bad breath—in addition to the great extra benefit of ammoniated protection against tooth decay. Your family will love Amm-i-dent Toothpaste!

Here is Amm-i-dent Proof:

1. *Sworn dental records of decay reduction!

In rigid, scientific 3-year test with hundreds of men, women and children, sworn dental records prove better than 40% decay reduction with Amm-i-dent.

2. Dental journals publish proof!

The Amm-i-dent formula can show proof, published in leading dental journals, that it actually reduced tooth decay.

3. Reader's Digest, Time, Parents'!

Leading magazines and newspapers investigated Amm-i-dent claims, spread the news of the proven record of decay reduction.

4. More dentists recommend Amm-i-dent!

Completely impartial, certified records prove: More dentists today recommend Amm-i-dent than any other dentifrice made.

5. 1949 users report amazing results!

Letters on file from 1949 Amm-i-dent users, after last dental check-up, add further proof of Amm-i-dent's power to reduce decay.

EVELYN A. ROMAN NOTARY PUBLIC KINGS COUNTY, N.Y.

A rainmaker's plane: where will the rain fall . . . and how much?

Scientists now warn us... there's Danger

After four years, the cloud-seeders may be

IT BEGAN FOUR YEARS AGO this autumn. On Nov. 13, 1946, a man named Vincent J. Schaefer climbed in an airplane, dumped dry ice pellets into a woolly cloud, and knocked down snow and rain.

Today, from coast to coast, a small host of rainmakers is doing what Dr. Schaefer started—and what the effect is going to be on YOU is something that has scientists pondering.

Many meteorologists are convinced rain-making has little or no widespread effect, but some are frankly concerned. Too much "wildcat" fooling around with the weather, they say, could cause serious trouble.

Warning against uncontrolled rainmaking experiments, Dr. Irving Langmuir, a top U.S. scientist, now says that "rain seeds" (silver iodide) cast into the air by western ranchers may have been causing rain on Eastern farms and cities more than 2,500 miles away.

And Franklin Institute's Dr. David Ludlum, in Philadelphia, has warned that trifling with the weather may never cause any catastrophies, and won't change the climate, but it can be dangerous in spots. He, too, feels some careful coordination and control is needed.

One thing that's bothering some scientists is a series of freak floods (see photographs on opposite page). Nobody knows for sure, but Dr. Langmuir thinks the great Winnipeg flood, which damaged 10,500 homes last May, and other floods in the Mississippi Valley and Colorado may have had some connection with man's attempt at rainmaking.

In California, another authority, Dr. Irving Krick, says he can point to no specific cases in which too much rain has been produced, but adds: "I can see danger that if you keep up rainmaking too long you may produce too much rain—and you may steal somebody else's rain."

But scientists aren't the only ones who are worried.

In one U.S. area where rainmakers work, the machine with which they bombard clouds with "rain seeds" is kept carefully camouflaged.

Why?

"Some farmers around here blame us because they have been washed out, and they're carrying loaded shotguns," one scientist said.

"Are the farmers right?" he was asked.

He frowned.

"We honestly don't know," he said. "This is still a baby science. It's been a wet summer around here. It may take years of careful study before we know whether we were responsible!"

The confusion was summed up in a recent cartoon in The New Yorker magazine that made thousands of rain-conscious Easterners chuckle. Cartoonist Alain drew two clergymen who were peering, with puzzled frowns, through a parish house window at a pouring rain. Said one:

HERE'S WHAT CAREFUL RAINMAKERS MAY DO FOR YOU:

- Spread a cool blanket of clouds across the sun in heat waves.
- Help farmers grow more food for your table.
- Knock thunderstorms apart before they reach you.
- Keep your community plentifully supplied with water.

BUT... 'WILDCAT' RAINMAKING MAY ALSO DO THIS...!

- Cause rain where none is wanted, damaging crops.
- Create droughts in adjacent regions.
- Cause floods or heavy snows.
- Upset the weather forecasts which are so important to you.

BY EDWARD FALES

in Rainmaking!

having a greater effect on your life than you think . . .

Dr. Howell: careful study is needed.

"I wonder if it's theirs or ours?"

San Diego, Phoenix, Ariz., and Pueblo, Colo., have tried rainmaking, and New York City has been at it for months.

But resort owners near New York, when the first few rainy days came along, raised a howl of protest. One amusement park even hired a "sunshine maker" to scatter any rainclouds the city's rainmaker, Dr. Wallace Howell, of Harvard, might manage to produce.

The city announced it was paying Dr. Howell, a careful consulting scientist, $100 a day to bring rain. Not to be outdone, the amusement park announced it would pay its "sunmaker" $500 a day for every sunny day—but would make him give back $1,000 for every day it rained!

The fact that rainmaking has edged even into the realm of amusement park publicity does not dull the fact that it's serious business.

In some areas legal suits have arisen over rainmaking.

If Dr. Langmuir is right—he is recognized everywhere as a man who knows his business—and rainmaking had the slightest connection with the Winnipeg flood, cloud-seeding can be deadly business, indeed.

Where They Make Their Mistake

THE TROUBLE, Langmuir says, is that amateur rainmakers and some professionals hired by farmers, overdo it. They pump out as much as 1,000 times more silver iodide than is needed—and under wrong conditions. Too much seeding can even prevent rain, causing drought.

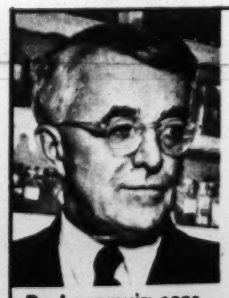
When silver iodide rises into a sky which lacks sufficient moisture, no rain falls. But the "seeds" drift east until finally they meet moist air and things start to happen!

"It is quite possible that heavy rains in the eastern half of the country during the past spring and the drought in the southwest may have been caused in this way," Dr. Langmuir says.

Not that rainmaking itself, is wrong! Ask the Colorado ranchers who have seen parched brown pastures turn bright green in midsummer. Ask the Rogue River Valley farmers in Oregon who hired rainmakers to knock the tops off stormclouds and spare their crops from hail and wind. Ask New Yorkers whose dust-dry reservoirs are brimming again.

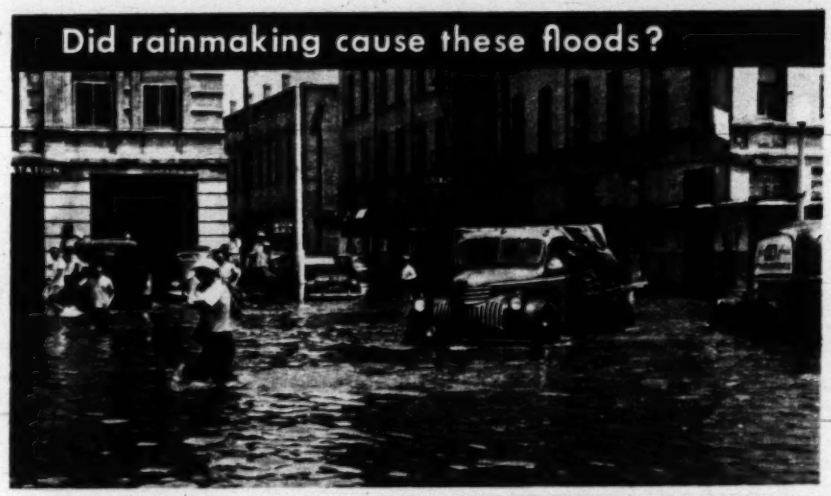
Ask the people in Florida, the Carolinas, and other Gulf States who hope rainmakers may soon blunt even the mighty hurricane!

For all these people, and for all America, carefully planned rainmaking—whether by dry ice cast from planes or silver iodide crystals spewed from highway trucks—may be the blessing of the century!



Dr. Langmuir: sees need for restraint.

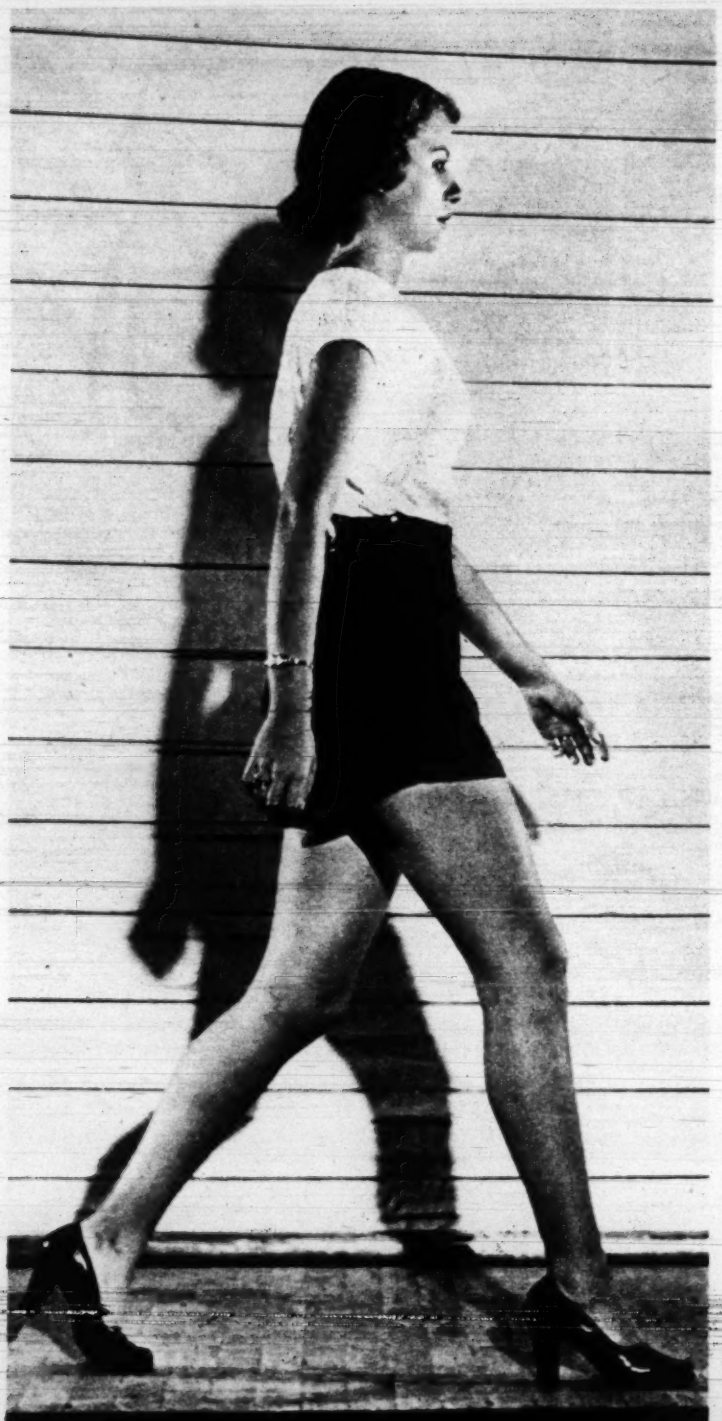
Did cloud-seeding in the west help the east?



17-INCH CLOUDBURST flooded Galveston in June. Nobody knows if this was man-made storm, but scientists think New Mexican "seeds" may cause Texas storms.

IN WINNIPEG one of 125,000 evacuees is removed from home. Dr. Langmuir thinks there may have been connection between rainmaking attempts and this flood.

CARS BATTLE flood in Beatrice, Neb., after Nebraska rainfall last year. Beatrice again was flooded this year. Was it the result of natural or man-made rain?



Researchers have discovered that high heels disturb balance, hence hasten foot fatigue.

More Mileage From Your Feet

You can get it if you follow these new rules

By Emile C. Schurmacher

DO YOUR FEET take you through the day without tiring you out?

Of every ten Americans, six of us suffer "foot trouble" in one form or another. But the number is growing, and science wants to know why!

Are city pavements to blame? High heels? Too much dependence on the auto?

At the John B. Pierce Laboratory of Hygiene in New Haven, Conn., scientists have been searching for the answers.

In a vast room, volunteer subjects plod around a 90-foot circular track while their stride is photographed. In one corner, a vibrating platform with the pounding roar of a riveting machine, can give a man the equivalent of a ten-mile hike in five minutes. With these and other tests, researchers are coming up with interesting discoveries. They have found, for example:

- That walking can cause you to shrink in height.
- That cold feet can cause accidents.
- That the KIND of surface you walk on has a lot to do with how tired your feet really get.

One of the interesting findings is: the incessant pounding to which you subject your feet during the day actually causes you to lose height! A six-foot policeman or postman may measure only five-feet-eleven when he goes home at night.

Why? The Pierce Lab scientists have found that the 26 cushioning disks at the end of his spinal column tighten up and shorten his height. In doing so they also contribute to his fatigue. Fortunately, he's back to six feet again after a night of horizontal rest.

- How can "cold feet" cause accidents?

"At normal foot temperature, which is around 80 degrees," says Dr. Herrington (who is director of the Pierce Lab and associate professor of Public Health at Yale), "you can detect a variation of floor surface or obstruction of as little as one-hundredth of an inch in height —even when you are blindfolded."

But when your feet are cold they are sluggish in passing this information on to the brain, and you are more apt to trip or fall.

- The third and perhaps most significant discovery is this: you can get more foot "mileage" with less fatigue if you pay more attention to the kind of surface upon which you walk and stand.

"The average housewife," says Dr. Herrington, walks six miles a day. Her

THE CAMERA STUDIES WALKING

Profile movies show girl in flat-heeled shoes "bobs" up and down less, saves energy.

You can have healthy feet.

TO CUT FOOT FATIGUE:

- Avoid hot pavements.
- Change shoes frequently
- Don't "hike" in high heels.
- Flex foot muscles regularly.
- When you rest, lie down.
- Bathe feet once a day.
- Make sure your shoes fit!

Model: Nancy Dahlgren, Grace Downs Agency.

DR. HERRINGTON operates "vibrating platform" which subjects "walker" to stresses of 10-mile hike in 5 minutes.

feet make 10,000 or more separate contacts with the floor. Each of these steps places a downward thrust of between 100 and 200 pounds on a foot surface of only a few square inches. This thrust must be taken up between the skin of her sole and the top of her spinal column!"

And this is where the importance of the floor surface comes in. The surface must be yielding but not soft. A long walk on a beach with soft, loose sand can be extremely tiring.

Several miles on a hard concrete surface can be just as tiring. But it's a different kind of tiredness. The walking is easy. The joints become "numb" and the sense of foot position poor. The soles of the feet sting. When the pavement is hot, the sensations are exaggerated.

The ideal walking surface lies somewhere in between. Tennis players say it's a slightly springy clay surface. Dancers like wood—not over concrete—but sprung between floor supports 30 inches apart.

"We have investigated a number of different floor types," says Dr. Herrington. Results show that softer concrete (concrete with asphalt) and wood floors are preferred."

Linoleum and rugs can cushion a hard floor to a certain degree, but in the final analysis it's the understructure that determines a floor's resiliency.

Lie Down and "Grow"

You can make good use of these findings.

For one thing, says Dr. Herrington, you can give your feet a break by lying down at regular intervals. The reason is that you are at your tallest when you get out of bed in the morning. In the first 20 minutes on your feet you lose approximately one-third of the total height you will lose during the day. (Walking makes you shrink, remember?) After three or four miles of walking—or an equivalent amount of time spent just standing—you approach a constant, shortened height level. Fatigue results.

Resting horizontally gives the cushioning disks at the end of the spine a chance to regain their elasticity and retards fatigue.

For another thing, you can avoid standing or sitting with your feet on a cold (or hot) floor. If you can't do anything about the floor temperature, get an insulating mat—or just wear heavier socks. Remember, cold feet can cause accidents.

But finally, don't forget: a "comfortable" floor can go a long way in cutting foot fatigue!

Bringing Up Baby

Hints collected by

Mrs Dan Gerber

(Mother of 5)

TIPS FOR TEETHERS. Lots of babies sail through teething sessions with hardly a whimper. But if tender gums cause discomfort, try these tips:

Offer hard toast or zwieback as a "pacifier." Skip the old-fashioned teething ring. It can't be kept clean.

Ask your doctor about enlarging the holes in Baby's nursing bottle nipples. Speed up bottle sessions if they bother a teether.

MORE SMILES PER MEAL if you use the menu helps offered by Gerber's. Babies like the True-Flavor and Perfected-Texture of Gerber's Fruits, Vegetables, Meats and Desserts. All are precooked and ready-to-serve. You can whip up treats for you and Daddy, too, with Gerber's. For instance:

PLUM ICE CREAM
2 Gerber's Strained Plums with Tapioca
2 tablespoons lemon juice
6 tablespoons sugar
½ pint whipping cream, whipped

Blend Plums with Tapioca, lemon juice and sugar. Fold in whipped cream, pour into a freezer tray and freeze until firm. Serves 4 to 6.

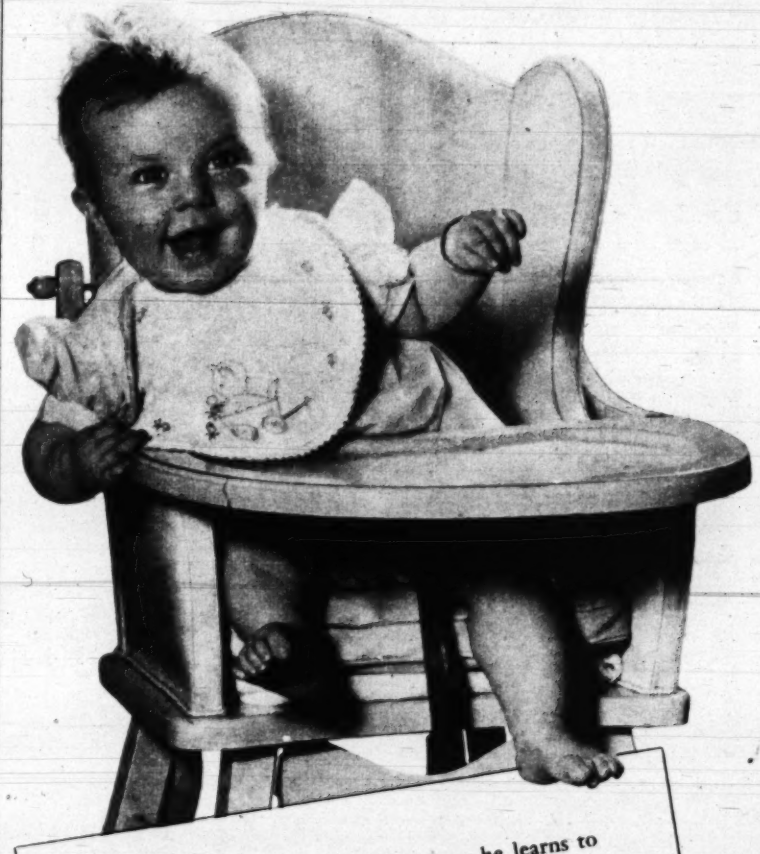
AFTER-SUNNING SUGGESTION from one of our fellow-mothers on the Eastern Seaboard. She writes: "After each sunbathing session, even in the late summer and early fall, I rub Junior and myself with lots of Baby oil. Keeps our skins from getting so dry."

FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE and Baby's—use plain white turkish wash cloth as a bib, or sew tapes on small, white turkish towels.

GOOD START—FREE! Before Baby's ready for Gerber's Strained and Junior Foods, you can start him on Gerber's Cereals. Write for samples of the 3 Cereals. Dept. 648-0, Fremont, Mich. In Canada, it's Gerber-Ogilvie, Ltd., Niagara Falls, Canada.

SEAT of LEARNING

for the many joys of eating!



Baby's high chair is the "school" where he learns to enjoy a wide variety of foods. For doctors believe that a well-varied diet is important to Baby's present nutrition and future good-eating habits. That's why Gerber's offer so many tempting Strained Foods from Beets to Beef and back again.

But, long before high-chair days Baby can enjoy Gerber's variety via the three cereals—Cereal Food, Strained Oatmeal and Barley Cereal. Your doctor will tell you which is the best "starter" for your infant. Later Baby will like the Perfected-Texture and flavor of all three.

You'll discover that only Gerber's prepare so many of the foods Baby needs and likes—from Starting Cereals through Junior Foods. Among the newest: True-Flavor Plums with Tapioca, golden Sweet Potatoes, also pure-meat Beef, Veal and Liver. The variety keeps getting bigger and better as we continue to make Baby Foods and nothing else!

Buttons...

Can work magic!

Buttons are not just the functional things they were in the days of King Frederick the Great, who ordered sentries to tack them on sleeves to preserve lace ruffles. Alert ladies are using them to make old suits look new; new suits look distinctive. The trick: strip any suit of ordinary buttons, replace with sparkling novelty types, or emphasize design by marching rows of buttons down sleeves, skirts, pleats. It's cheap (La Mode, leading button makers, say their most popular numbers cost 5¢ to 79¢ each) and easy: many types can be pinned in place instead of sewed.

TWELVE buttons are better than four on this gray flannel suit; hat can be made in an hour, of felt circles buttoned on pearls.

ODDS and ends of buttons and felt scraps wired together make perky "buttoniere;" bracelet is simply-wired button cluster.

"Best lure I know to get a man out early is a man-size bowl of Wheaties and milk . . . and maybe some nice juicy berries. I'll bite on 'em any time."

"The way my kids have been ripping around all summer long, they certainly need all the vitamins and minerals and energy they can get. Thank goodness, they love Wheaties."

Allie Reynolds says this about Wheaties: "It's a training dish I've enjoyed for years, and I'd certainly recommend it to any sports-minded boy or girl . . . or anyone." Wheaties sure work for Allie. Last season he pitched 17 wins for the New York Yankees.

Macaroni and Cheese Cutlets

PUT cooked macaroni through chopper, using medium knife. This chopper doesn't require clamping to table.

COMBINE chopped macaroni, parsley, cheese, onion, sauce. Shape like cutlets; flour; fry in shallow fat.

By Beth Merriman

PARADE'S FOOD EDITOR

PRACTICALLY EVERYBODY likes macaroni and cheese, served from a casserole. So we are sure that this combination, in new guise, will become a favorite with your family. We have added the tang of onion, the crispness and flavor that result from frying, the appeal of good looks. Begin with small, crisp tomato salads. With the cutlets: green beans and summer squash. For dessert: peach pie.

Macaroni and Cheese Cutlets

1 8-oz. pkg. elbow macaroni
1 tbsp. chopped parsley
1½ cups grated sharp cheddar cheese
1 tbsp. grated onion
1 cup thick, well seasoned white sauce

Cook macaroni as directed on package; drain; cool slightly; put through food chopper, using medium knife. Add parsley. Combine remaining ingredients; add to macaroni. Shape to resemble cutlets; dust with flour. Fry in shallow fat (1½ inches deep) heated to 375°F., about 4 minutes. Drain on absorbent paper. Yield: 4 large or 6 small cutlets.

MEDICAL DISCOVERY

A Real Cure for Hay Fever?

A doctor's discovery may lead to better treatment

BY LAWRENCE GALTON

EVERY YEAR at this time, some five million people become watery-eyed, wheezy and miserable with hay fever. Many have tried every available treatment, have taken long series of injections year after year. Yet, comes pollen-time, they suffer again!

But today, at Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York, where investigations into hay fever have been going on for years, a new discovery by Dr. Ely Perlman, a research associate, promises to revolutionize treatment and results. Moreover, it has implications for other allergy sufferers as well.

What Dr. Perlman has developed is a new method of determining the composition of pollen. It may soon be possible for your doctor to find out what part of the pollen causes your hay fever symptoms—and to develop injections accordingly to combat these specific pollen parts (called "fractions.")

Some people seem to have an inherited sensitivity. When exposed to pollens, their bodies develop the wrong kind of defensive substances. It is these antibodies (called "reagins") which produce the symptoms of hay fever.

These symptoms are not always limited to certain seasons. Some summer invalids enjoy good health once the torture season is over, but others develop secondary sinus trouble, still others chronic eye trouble. And, worst of all, 30 per cent of all victims develop asthma, the most serious after-effect.

For some, but not all, antihistaminic drugs offer relief. Yet, even when they relieve symptoms, they don't prevent asthma. Best treatment to date, according to many authorities, is use of injections—usually beginning six to 12 weeks before the season. The aim is to desensitize the patient and help him develop protective antibodies.

The New Clue!

BUT, as many hay fever sufferers know, shots don't always work too well.

Now, Dr. Perlman's work gives a clue to what's wrong with injections and what may be done to improve treatment. Surprisingly, Dr. Perlman got his clue by using an old technique.

Back in 1906, in Warsaw, Michael Tswett, no doctor but a botanist, was investigating plant pigments. One day, he tried an experiment. Into the narrow portion of a glass tube, he shoved a plug of cotton and, above it, he tamped small bits of finely-divided chalk. When Tswett drew an extract of dried leaf material through this column he was amazed at what he saw.

Two bands of green pigment formed up near the top of the chalk. Below this were several bands of yellow pigment. And then another yellow pigment passed rapidly through the column. The reason, Tswett decided, was that some pigments moved through chalk faster than others. He went on to separate the different green and yellow pigments, getting pure solutions of each.

Even alert scientists don't always see

This is How Doctors Test for Allergy

• "Scratch" test reveals that this patient is allergic to some fractions of ragweed pollen, not all. Traces of different components of ragweed pollen were scratched into skin. Five of scratches (plus marks) resulted in reactions—indicating sensitivity. Five were negative.

IN HIS LABORATORY, Dr. Perlman examines paper strips on which pollen "fractions" appear.

the significance of important developments. And Tswett's discovery was largely muffed–until 1931. But since then its uses have been snowballing.

For what Tswett had found was a simple way to separate chemicals in a mixture and to purify them. (Scientists call it "chromatographic adsorption.")

Now, to help hay fever sufferers, Dr. Perlman has used the same idea. He has found that there are different things in pollen that have different effects on different people. Putting ragweed pollen in the column, he has now been able to separate out several previously unknown "fractions." At least three of these "fractions" have been found to produce hay fever reactions.

How You May Benefit

WHAT DOES THIS MEAN?

First of all, hay fever sufferers may differ in their sensitivity to different fractions. That would explain why for some people, injections fizzle. When you get an injection for hay fever you actually are given a dose of pollen extract. The object is to develop your resistance. But now it is known that some of the extracts used for injections don't contain enough of the right kind of "fractions." That is why they sometimes fizzle. Now, this may be changed.

▶ There's a second exciting possibility. All three ragweed fractions produce reactions, but one or more of them may do so without giving you immunity–which is the purpose of injections. It would help if we could remove these useless fractions from shots. As it is, using crude ragweed extracts available today, doctors have to employ limited dosages for fear of causing an acute reaction. Using only the needed fraction they may be able to give larger doses.

▶ As a third possibility, it may be that some of the fractions which cause the greatest reactions would still have to be included. But they might be altered to reduce the severity of the reactions and thus allow larger shots.

▶ Finally, in any case, chromatography promises more standardization of pollen extract. At present, when they get a fresh supply of ragweed extract, many doctors hesitate to give a full injection for fear the extract may be too powerful.

Dr. Perlman believes chromatography may be important in other types of allergy as well. Once successful in ragweed allergy, it can be applied to grass, tree and other pollen allergies. And it may be of great value in house-dust allergy, too, a widespread cause of distress!

IT'S "TREE FEVER," TOO!

- Hay fever comes in three types. Spring hay fever (in March, April and May) comes from tree pollens. Early summer hay fever (May, June and July) is caused by grass pollens. From August into November, there's the type caused by ragweed and other weed pollens.
- What are pollens? They're tiny masses of male, plant fertilizing elements.
- A single ragweed plant can produce eight billion pollen grains a day!

Toboggan-load of summer fun lovers zips down straw-lined sled run on a Berkshire hill.

Winter fun in Summer!

After lively straw-skiing session, skiiers cool off.

STRAW SKI-RUN gives this summer skiier a fast ride but little control.

New thrill: skiing and sledding on straw . . .

HERE'S A PLAYTIME IDEA that's good anywhere in the U.S. if you can find a load of good, dry straw! High in the Berkshire hills, in Massachusetts and Connecticut, they're skiing and tobogganing under the late summer sun – on straw alone!

It's a thrilling sport, too, for straw is very fast – much faster than snow. However, it doesn't grip the skiis, or the toboggan, as snow does, so the thrill-hunter has less control. In the Berkshires, at least, no one has tried taking any jumps the fans are content to whizz evenly downhill at breath-taking speed.

Regular ski-harnesses are sometimes dispensed with, to minimize the danger of injury in case of a spill. Some skiiers use a harness made of inner-tubing, something like the rig used on water-skiis. The foot can be quickly slipped out of these when a spill occurs.

No ski poles are used, but skiis are waxed in the usual winter style. The trick is to get straw that is as dry as possible!

WHAT FOREIGN KIDS THINK OF THE U.S.A.

"We Like it Here!"

WHAT KIND OF IMPRESSION does the America of 1950 make on visitors from abroad?

In these critical days, this question carries growing weight. To get an answer, PARADE went to the best source of all: the unbiased youth of a dozen European nations.

The boys and girls in these photographs have been studying at American schools under American Field Service scholarships. To all of them America was originally a land of vast promise. Yet, in the Old World, many of them had been told that Americans were boors and braggarts. Today, after a year in our

By Tor Jespersen, 17

Norway

• What do I like best about America? Why, Americans, themselves! I like their friendliness, their self-possession, their ability to laugh—and their warm hearts. What do I like least? Your cities, with their drabness and dirt! What a contrast they are to the beautiful, clean sweep of your vast miles of forest and plains! Too bad!

By Elisabeth Hohenauer, 17

Austria

• To me, America means a breath-taking vastness of mountain and prairie. I love its great size and often during our trip I wondered if all of you carefree, laughter-loving Americans appreciate the great, sweeping, beautiful country you have! If you do, then why do you persist in covering its face with advertising billboards?

Hoisting aloft the bus driver who drove them 5,000 miles around U.S., visiting students bellow their appreciation.

schools and a 5,000-mile bus tour, they have made up their own minds:

Their verdict: we're all right.

An International Crisis: Algebra!

Take the case of Edouard Bustin, 17-year-old Belgian. In a St. Louis school he was having trouble with his algebra. "Some of my classmates," he says, "stayed up half the night with me every night for a week, cramming algebra into my head. Thanks to this American, I passed my tests!"

"At school in Maine," says Sirpa Larra, 18, of Finland, "I made more friends in one year than I have made in a lifetime at home!"

Perly Blanc, 16, of Paris, was a student in Vermont, but Perly felt out of place. "An American family took me in, introduced me to their friends, taught me to ski and took me to their parties," Perly says. "That's what I call friendship."

To Edouard and Sirpa and Perly the friendship and understanding of people they met impressed them more than Niagara Falls, Grand Canyon or mere New York.

"I was once told that Americans were rude," says Sirpa. "But when I go home I'll say that's not true."

Perhaps this is the rock on which America's foreign relations may someday be solidly built.

By Willy Deroisy, 18

Belgium

• I have been here a year—studying in California—and will take home with me conflicting pictures of America. On one hand you are the most friendly, open-faced and generous people in the world. But, on the other, you are always bragging about your friendliness and generosity. But don't get me wrong. I like it here!

By Gun Jacobsson, 16

Sweden

• Your schools are wonderful—less strict, more liberal than ours back home. And your people are heartwarming. When I came here I was a little afraid of them. They make more noise than the silent Swedes. But now I love them all and I have started to make a lot of noise myself. Freedom to make noise is contagious in America.

By Peter Wiese, 16

Denmark

• America, to me, is fresh air. It is also sport and study and good fellowship. But tell me this—why do you sometimes spoil your sports and entertainment with vulgarities? I refer to the singing commercial, the screaming radio ads and the billboards. In my country we never permit salesmen to interrupt us when we are at play!

By Andree Eymard, 17

France

• I like American boys. They're shyer than young Frenchmen and they don't know as much about girls. I find that very comforting. At home my family has always talked to me of America and now that I have been here—and seen the fine schools, the modern homes (and the boys)—I think I may come back here for good.

It's-top-of-the Class!
It's Corduroy...

It's Nan Buntly's Suit Parade

Miss Buckingham — Nan Buntly's distinguished man-tailored pin-wale corduroy features the long lovely line of the front-button closing and reed-slim five-gored skirt. Emphasizing detail with buttoned-down flap pockets and intricate welt-stitching on club collar and pockets encore. Size: 10 to 20. 7 to 15.

Miss Barkley — Gold rim buttons talk up this flawless man-tailored pin-wale corduroy. Nan Buntly uses fashion imagination with over-size pockets topped with v-shaped slanting flaps . . . Skirt is five-gored for the ultimate in hip slimming. Sizes: 10 to 20.

Miss Stuart — Nan Buntly's talent for man-tailoring with the soft touch... Stunning petal-revered jacket fits with unerring precision over a slender five-gored skirt. A wealth of golden ball buttons spill down the front and fasten the generous pockets. Finest pin-wale corduroy makes it a "must". Sizes 10 to 20. 7 to 15.

$15.95

Colors:—In jockey red, winter green,
leaf rust,
copen blue,
grey,
and caramel.

NO, THAT'S A "BEE FLY", SCOTTY, NOT A BEE... IT IMITATES A BEE FOR PROTECTION!

SEE, HE ACTS AS IF HE'LL STING, BUT HE WON'T!

WELL, I'LL BE DARNED! HE SURE LOOKS LIKE A BEE!

LATER

CHERRY, SEE THAT INSECT... THAT'S A "BEE FLY"... JUST A BLUFFER THAT ACTS LIKE A BEE!

REALLY? HOW INTERESTING!

PICK 'IM UP... HE HASN'T EVEN GOT A STIN....??

OUCH! OHHH!!

HEY, MARK!!

HOW DO YOU TELL THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A "BEE FLY" AND A BEE?

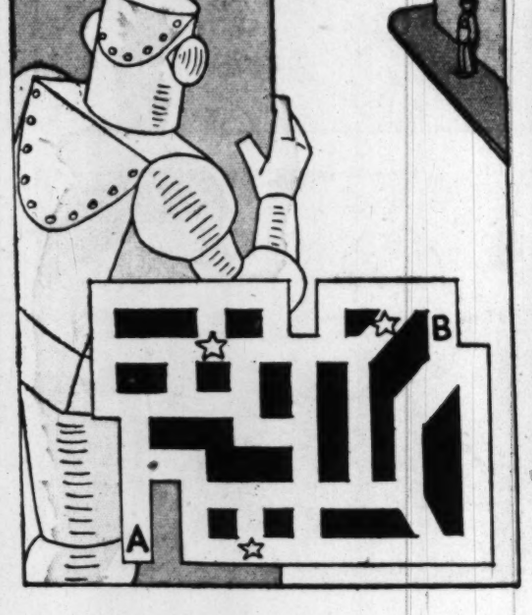
PIXIE PUZZLE ADVENTURES

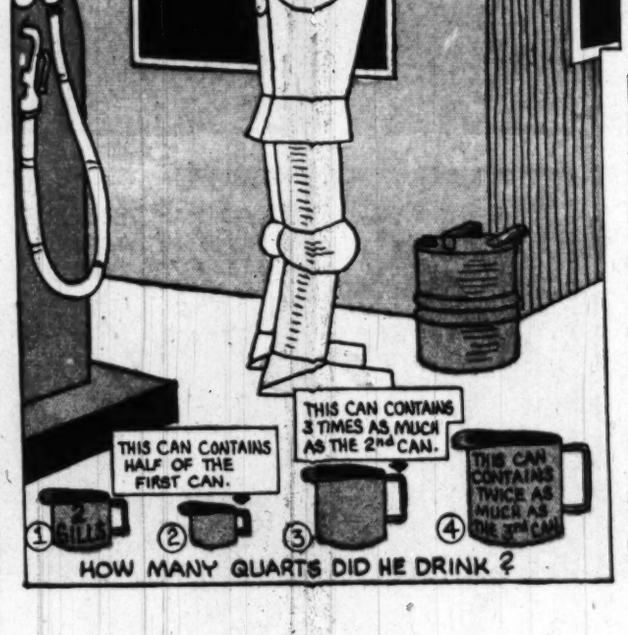
by Matt Curzon

Copyright, 1950, New York Herald Tribune Inc.

1 THE MECHANICAL MAN SEES A GAS STATION IN THE DISTANCE. HIS JOINTS ARE ALL SQUEAKING. HE NEEDS OIL! HE MUST GET TO THE GAS STATION WITHOUT BEING SEEN. IN THE DIAGRAM THE STARS INDICATE POLICEMEN. HOW CAN YOU GET FROM A TO B WITHOUT BEING SEEN? TRY IT WITH YOUR PENCIL.



2 AT THE GAS STATION THE MECHANICAL MAN FINDS 4 OIL CANS AND DRINKS THEIR CONTENTS. SEE THE ILLUSTRATION BELOW TO FIND OUT HOW MUCH OIL HE DRANK.



3 SPUNKY SAYS," LET'S HURRY AND CATCH HIM BEFORE HE DOES ANY MORE DAMAGE."

THE PIXIES HAVE TO RUN 5 BLOCKS TO CATCH UP WITH THE MECHANICAL MAN. SEE HOW FAST YOU CAN RUN THE 5 BLOCKS.

ON YOUR RIGHT ARE 5 BLOCKS REPRESENTED BY SQUARES. HOW QUICKLY CAN YOU PUT ODD NUMBERS INTO THE SQUARES SO THAT THEY WILL ADD UP TO 27. DO NOT USE THE SAME NUMBER TWICE.

Answers

① THIS IS THE ONLY SAFE ROUTE

② 1. 2 GILLS
2. 1 GILL
3. 3 GILLS
4. 6 GILLS
TOTAL 12 GILLS

IF THERE ARE 4 GILLS TO 1 PINT AND 2 PINTS TO ONE QUART, THE ANSWER IS 1/2 QUARTS

③ 27 1 3 5 7 11

④ THE FOLLOWING ARE ANIMALS - LION, WHALE HYENA, SEAL, YAK, PORCUPINE WALRUS, BISON, GOAT, ELK ALL THE REST ARE BIRDS.

4 REALIZING THE PIXIES ARE ON HIS TRAIL, THE MECHANICAL MAN SETS A TRAP FOR THEM.

SOME PARTS OF THE SIDEWALK ARE SOLID.. OTHERS HOLLOW AND DANGEROUS. THE IRON MAN COVERS UP ALL THE STONES WITH A CLOTH SO THAT THEY WILL ALL LOOK ALIKE. THE PIXIES MUST STEP ON THE REAL STONES TO AVOID GETTING HURT. HOW WILL THEY KNOW THE REAL STONES FROM THE OTHERS? THE REAL STONES HAVE THE NAMES OF ANIMALS ON THEM. THE FALSE STONES HAVE THE NAMES OF BIRDS.

CAN YOU HELP THE PIXIES FIND THE REAL STONES?

HELLO, EVAN!..SORRY TO WAKE YOU UP BEFORE NOON, MY SWEET, BUT I HAVE TERRIFIC TIDINGS!.... I BROKE MY ENGAGEMENT WITH GREG LAST NIGHT!

WELL...?

SUH-WELL! THIS EASTERN CLIMATE HAS CAUSED YOU TO COME DOWN WITH AN ATTACK OF COMMON SENSE, TIPPY!... SEE YOU AT SEVEN!

AT THE PUBLISHING HOUSE, A JOY-FILLED GREG FORD HAS BEEN SUDDENLY DEFLATED!

THAT'S DARNED QUEER!..KATY RUNNING AWAY WITHOUT SAYING GOODBYE! DON'T YOU KNOW HER VACATION ADDRESS, MR. RICE?

I DON'T KNOW WHERE SHE WENT, FORD, BUT I KNOW WHY SHE WENT! ..SHE WAS ASHAMED OF HERSELF!

I CAN'T THINK OF ANY REASON...

THAT'S WHAT I CALLED YOU IN HERE TO TELL YOU! BETTER SIT DOWN! THIS MAY BE A PRETTY LOW BLOW!

FOR FEAR YOU MIGHT NOT TAKE MY WORD, I'M OFFERING YOU THIS ENVELOPE AS EXHIBIT "A"...THE $200 IT CONTAINED HAS BEEN REMOVED ..BY KATY!

GO AHEAD, FORD! READ THE INSCRIPTION! I THINK IT WILL INTEREST YOU!

TERRY LEE, I'VE BEEN COURTIN' YOU FAIR AND SQUARE. NOW I WANT A STRAIGHT-SHOOTIN' SHOWDOWN. WILL YOU MARRY ME OR NOT?

GOLLY, REBEL, IT-IT JUST WOULDN'T WORK OUT. YOU MUST SEE THAT.

THIS WHOLE DEAL IS UPSIDE DOWN. YOU GIVE ME PRESENTS WHEN THE GUY SHOULD GIVE THINGS TO HIS GIRL.

THAT'S PART OF TH' SILLY SPARKIN' SYSTEM THE EASTERN CITY FOLKS SET UP. TEXAS GALS DON'T NEED TO BE CODDLED.

BUT I'M A FOOTLOOSE TRAMP PILOT AND YOU'RE AN OIL HEIRESS. I CAN'T ASK YOU TO GIVE UP YOUR LIFE TO KNOCK AROUND THE WORLD WITH ME.

THAT'S WHY I CABLED COUSIN CROCKET BRANCHWATER TO BUY SOME AIRPLANES.

YOU JUST TAKE OVER TH' PLANES, SET UP AN AIRLINE AND YOU'RE STANDIN' ON YOUR OWN TWO FEET.

REBEL, BABY, THEY'RE ANOTHER GIFT. I'D STILL BE LIVING OFF YOU.

TERRY LEE, YOU'RE JUST PLAIN PIG-HEADED. DON'T YOU SEE THAT IT WOULD BE YOUR SKILL AND FLYIN' SAVVY THAT'D MAKE THE PLANES PAY OFF? WE'D BE LIVIN' ON MONEY YOU'D EARNED, SAVVY?

I-I DUNNO, REBEL. I'M CONFUSED. I'M GOING TO WALK A BIT AND SEE IF I CAN'T MAKE SENSE OUT OF THIS MESS... GOOD NIGHT.

OH, GOLLY! WHAT A RAT RACE! GUESS IT'S MY PRIDE BUT I'D WANT TO GIVE THINGS TO MY WIFE, NOT HAVE HER SET ME UP AS A PHONY BIG WHEEL...

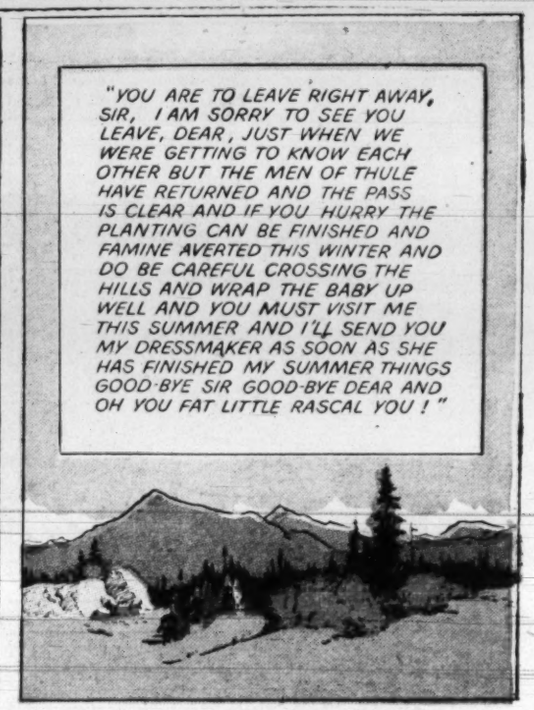
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

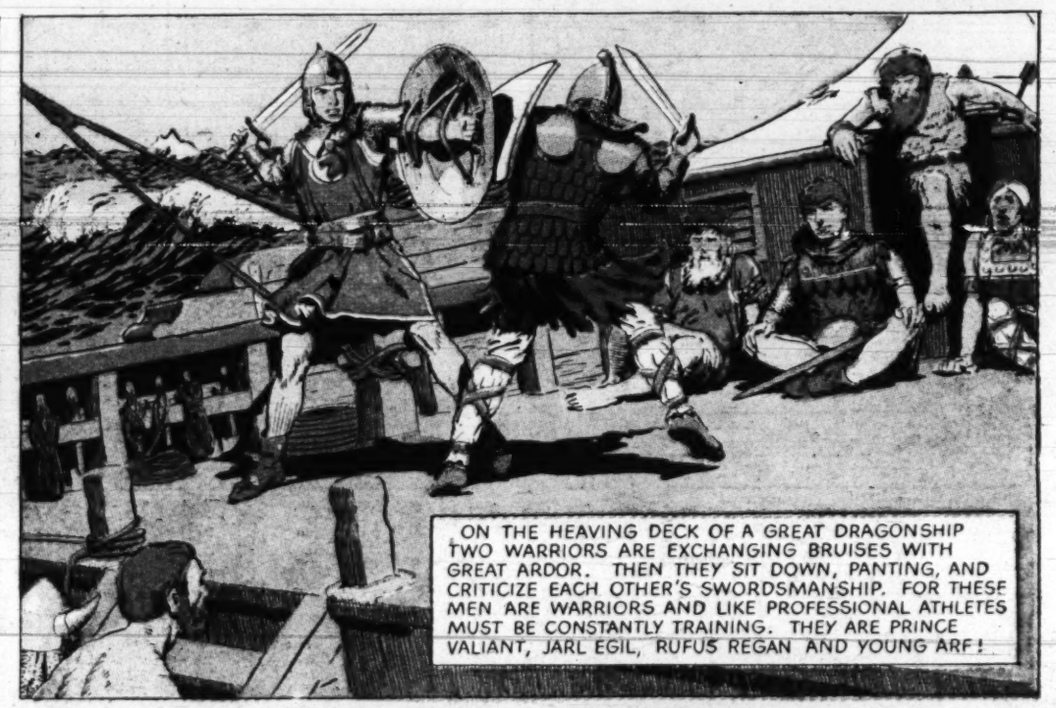
by Harold R Foster

Synopsis: BECAUSE AGUAR WAS A WISE KING HE LISTENED TO ALETA'S WAR PLANS. BECAUSE ALETA KNEW NOTHING OF WARFARE HER TACTICS THREW THE ENEMY PLANS AWRY. THEN, BECAUSE SHE SAW NO NEED FOR HATING ANYONE, SHE WON OVER HER ENEMIES.

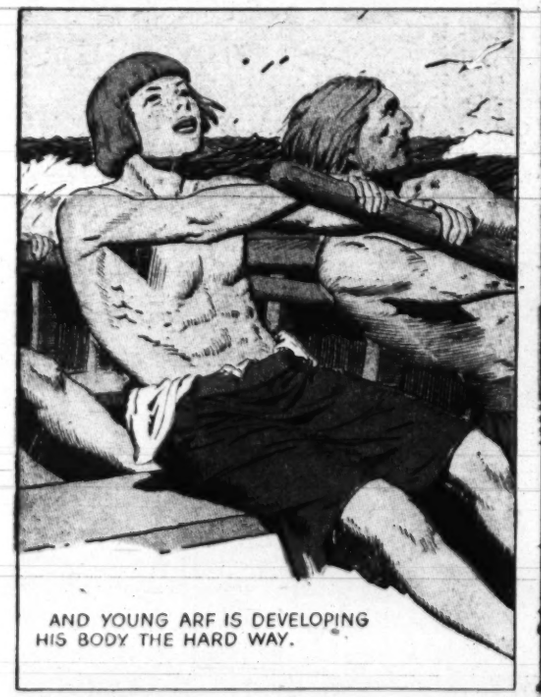
STATESMEN WOULD HAVE TAKEN MONTHS TO DRAW UP A PEACE TREATY, BUT ALETA ENDED IT ALL IN ONE SENTENCE. (WE GIVE IT HERE, BUT ONLY A MARRIED MAN WILL BE ABLE TO UNDERSTAND IT)



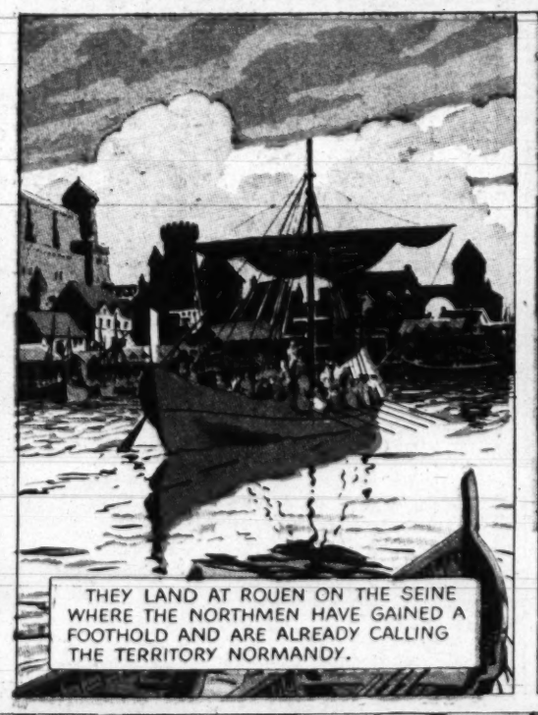
NOW THAT AN ARROGANT YOUNG KING HAS BEEN HUMBLED, HIS DUTIFUL QUEEN NO LONGER ACCORDS HIM A REGAL DEFERENCE. GENTLY, FONDLY SHE TAKES THE ~~BLUNDERING INCOMPETENT BY THE HAND~~ AND LEADS HIM OUT OF OUR STORY.



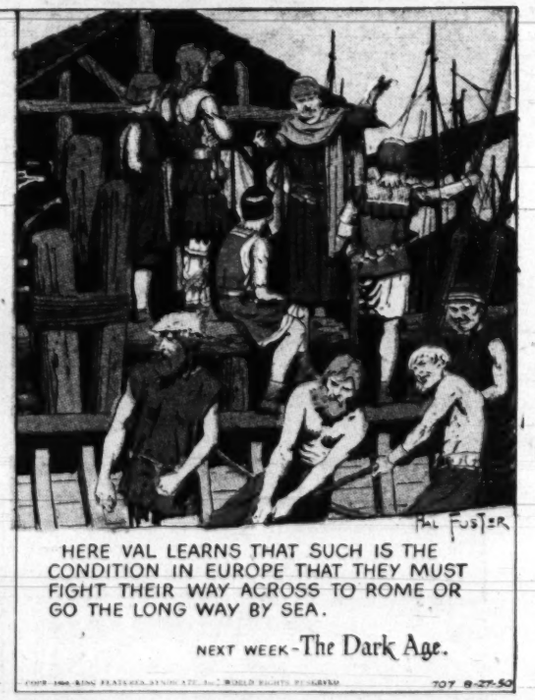
ON THE HEAVING DECK OF A GREAT DRAGONSHIP TWO WARRIORS ARE EXCHANGING BRUISES WITH GREAT ARDOR. THEN THEY SIT DOWN, PANTING, AND CRITICIZE EACH OTHER'S SWORDSMANSHIP. FOR THESE MEN ARE WARRIORS AND LIKE PROFESSIONAL ATHLETES MUST BE CONSTANTLY TRAINING. THEY ARE PRINCE VALIANT, JARL EGIL, RUFUS REGAN AND YOUNG ARF!



AND YOUNG ARF IS DEVELOPING HIS BODY THE HARD WAY.



THEY LAND AT ROUEN ON THE SEINE WHERE THE NORTHMEN HAVE GAINED A FOOTHOLD AND ARE ALREADY CALLING THE TERRITORY NORMANDY.



HAL FOSTER

HERE VAL LEARNS THAT SUCH IS THE CONDITION IN EUROPE THAT THEY MUST FIGHT THEIR WAY ACROSS TO ROME OR GO THE LONG WAY BY SEA.
